Warplanes Hit 12th Straight Day

SAIGON (UPI)—The United States sent its warplanes back to North Vietnam today for the 12th consecutive day and Communist reports in Hanoi said the capital and its suburbs were hit again. B52s and fighter-bombers hit the Hanoi-Haiphong area Sunday.

North Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong, in an emotional broadcast over Hanoi Radio, told the nation "our nation is in dire danger. Our capital, our fatherland is in danger."

The U.S. command said F4 Phantoms shot down three MIG21 jet fighters near Hanoi Sunday, and U.S. pilots involved in the raids said the raids against Haiphong left flames visible 100 miles at sea. Hanoi Radio reported the planes killed many civilians in both cities and hit a Soviet ship at Haiphong.

Although the U.S. command reported today that 5,000 American soldiers had been sent home under President Nixon's troop withdrawal program, more U.S. Navy personnel and Marine fighter squadrons have been brought in, actually increasing troop strength in the area by 11,000 men.

The U.S. command, under its new policy of withholding information until after the raids are over, gave no details on today's strikes against the north, part of Nixon's campaign to retaliate against what the United States calls a major invasion of South Vietnam by the north.

With the exception of eyewitness reports by pilots involved in the North Vietnam raids most information came from Hanoi Radio, foreign diplomats stationed in the North Vietnamese capital or Communist European correspondents there.

Swedish diplomat Eskil Lundberg reported by telephone to a Stockholm newspaper today that air raid sirens sounded three times today in Hanoi. He said he had not heard any bombs but that the North Vietnamese reported attacks today against Hanoi and its suburbs.

The Hungarian MTI news agency correspondent in Hanoi reported he had seen attacks Sunday against Haiphong, Hanoi and on the road between and said he personally saw three children killed by American bombs. He said he saw a school that had been destroyed.

Hanoi Radio, in reporting on the Sunday raids, said "many persons, mostly women and children," were killed in Haiphong while trying to flee the city and that a Soviet freighter received more than 30 holes

Rogers Says Bombing Demonstrates Policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Secretary of State William P. Rogers said today U.S. bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong was a demonstration of U. S. determination to "take whatever military action necessary" to prevent a Communist takeover of South Vietnam.

Rogers told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that no American troops would be re-introduced into ground fighting, but said President Nixon would use U. S. air and naval power as necessary to support South Vietnamese troops.

In reply to pointed questions by the committee chairman, Sen. J. William Fulbright D-Ark., Rogers said the bombing of the north—which he said did not include Haiphong harbor — was for two purposes: —To protect American troops still in South Vietnam to make certain Nixon's withdrawal program can continue.

—To allow the South Vietnamese to protect themselves.

Fulbright opened the hearings with a statement attacking Nixon for not ending the war and saying, "I for one cannot possibly understand what consideration warranted these drastic measures." Fulbright said it "was ironic and tragic" that after years of fighting, "hundreds of thousands of lives have been lost...and we are discussing the war in Vietnam with members of the cabinet."

Fulbright ended his opening statement by reading a list of pointed questions about the war to Rogers and then asking the secretary to dispense with his opening statement which contained no mention of the bombing of the month. After attempting several times to begin his statement, Rogers consented to answer the question.

Rogers said the North Vietnamese were now engaged in a major invasion of South Vietnam and, "we think it is essential to conduct these raids."

Rogers declared that the United States would "not engage in negotiations while this major invasion is under way."

Rogers said 12 of 13 North Vietnamese divisions were now in the south. "It is clear they (the North Vietnamese) have been lying through their teeth when they say they have no

Hanoi Says It Will Talk If Air Strikes Canceled

PARIS (UPI)—Hanoi offered today to start new secret peace negotiations if President Nixon calls of his air raids and resumes regular weekly Vietnam talks. It also warned against any invasion of North Vietnam.

North Vietnamese peace negotiator Xuan Thuy told a news conference the "special adviser" to the peace team, Le Duc Tho, who has conducted 13 past private talks with presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger, will fly to Paris the moment the two conditions are met.

Thuy also warned that the North Vietnamese were ready to meet any air, naval and ground invasion of their territory in retaliation for the Communist offensive in South Vietnam.

Le Duc Tho, ranked No. 7 in the Hanoi political bureau, was instrumental in discussing peace conditions in 13 meetings with Kissinger last summer which, however, produced no results.

Kissinger refused to continue the private meetings in the Paris region with Thuy after Tho's return to Hanoi. But U.S. officials recently indicated they were ready to start the secret meetings again any time.

U.S. delegation spokesman Stephen Ledogar said "There has been no formal proposal by either side through a liaison channel for a meeting April 27."

Ledogar did not say whether a formal request for a meeting on that date would be acceptable to the U.S. delegation. He said if any such note was received it would be examined and answered.

Ledogar refused to comment

Mrs. Tompkins, a tall brunette native of Texas, reported for work today in a uniform similar to her male counterparts, except for a feminine beret on her head. Her first day on the job not only brought smiles and jokes from commuters but a promise from one man he intended to use her lane from now on.

O'Brien Unhappy Over Candidates

By GODFREY SPERLING, JR.
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Lawrence F.O'Brien, the sole arbiter among the Democratic presidential candidates, is known to be most unhappy over the feuding and fussing going on in the primaries.

Further, he is taking steps now to blow the whistle on what Messrs. Muskie, McGovern, Humphrey, Jackson, et al are saying about each other.

A year ago the Democratic Party chairman met quietly with the candidates and received a promise from them that they would direct their political barbs at President Nixon and say nothing about their Democratic opponents that would bring about wounds and divisions within the party.

Now O'Brien thinks that the intramural sniping has reached the point where it poses a serious threat to the Democrats' capacity to provide a united front in their race against the President next fall.

Thus, the chairman is passing the word along quietly that the candidates must cease and desist in this snarling and biting before it gets completely out of hand.

He also is listening closely to what is being said in the Massachusetts and Pennsylvania primaries. And should the intra-party warfare continue, he will be calling the candidates together again in an effort to reinforce last year's amity promise.

O'Brien remembers 1960 and the nastiness that developed between the Humphrey and Kennedy camps as they fought it out for the nomination.

By the time the West Virginia primary came around in early spring of that year, the attacks from both sides had reached a particularly low level.

Some Kennedy people were covertly telling the voters that Humphrey had been a World War II draft dodger. And, at the same time, a story of Humphrey-camp origin was warning the electorate that Kennedy suffered from a disease that would make it impossible for him to carry out the functions of president. Neither of these calculated rumors was accurate.

O'Brien remembers that the bitterness was so intense that a split in the Democratic Party seemed possible, at least for a short time.

Then Humphrey, always the team man and one who very quickly forgives and forgets,

Dropout Link To Unemployment Disproved In National Survey

By ROBIN WRIGHT
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — A lonely male figure strolls aimlessly down an abandoned street. A high school dropout, he's jobless, moneyless, and friendless.

Even the unemployment bureau offers only figures of blimpy boredom, lined up in rows of despair. The wait isn't worth it, but there's nothing better to do.

This lonely frustration, this inability to find a job, this semi-state of nothingness — are all results of dropping out, the television message blatantly advertises.

By the end of 60 seconds, the viewer can't help but agree with the closing line: "Your chances of being unemployed are doubled if you quit school before graduating."

But that just isn't so. A new nationwide survey claims the ad is misleading.

"There's little justification for the view that dropouts get less satisfying jobs," the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research concludes after surveying more than 2,000 young men on three occasions since 1966.

The study's conclusion: Dropping out is highly overrated as a problem in its own right. It doesn't cause the problems that prevent employment. They exist before the student quits school and in fact contribute to his becoming a dropout.

Specifically, information from the dropouts substantiated the claim that a high school diploma may not be a requirement for either equal income or happiness in a job.

When the survey group compared employed dropouts with employed high school graduates, they found the two groups' weekly income levels to be nearly identical.

And three-quarters of the dropouts rated themselves "quite satisfied" or "very satisfied" with their jobs, compared with the same response by two-thirds of the employed high school graduates.

The study also found that 71 per cent of the dropouts were employed 30 hours a week or more (all in civilian jobs) with a comparable figure of 87 per cent among high school graudates.

The study concludes by stating that to persuade the student who has failed or misbehaved in school to stay there for one or two more years is not going to solve his problems. Earlier action in the younger years might have helped.

"The difficulties experienced by the dropouts we studied were already present or predictable by the start of 10th grade, and there is little evi-

Roofing Co. Is Guilty Of Smog

OAKLAND (UPI)—A San Leandro roofing company has been found guilty of violating 153 anti-smog ordinances.

Possibly one of Northern California's worst air polluters, the Lloyd A. Frey Roofing Co. faces a maximum $500 fine on each of the 153 charges.

"Every time they received a citation," Superior Court Judge William H. Brailsford said in handing down the Saturday verdict, "I believe they simply tore them up and threw them in the wastebasket."

Matthew S. Walker, attorney for the Bay Air Pollution Control District, said his agency filed only visible smoke violation complaints and ignored complaints of stench.

Ag Area Rezone Limits Urged By County Assessor

'60-Acre Zoning' Controversy Before Supervisors Tomorrow

By ERIK M. INGRAM

The Marin County Assessor's Office has recommended gainst rezoning the county's entire agricultural preserve as proposed by the planning department and several conservation groups.

County Assessor Bert W. Broemmel, in a five-page report prepared for county supervisors, said the controversial 60-acre zoning should be limited to the northern half of the 210,000-acre preserve.

Roughly outlined, Broemmel said, that would limit the rezoning to about 110,000 acres lying east of Tomales Bay and north of a line between Olema and the Sonoma County line.

The area around the community of Tomales should be excluded, however, he said.

Broemmel's proposal will be considered tomorrow by county supervisors, who also will review reports from agricultural commissioner R. Allan Ballard and farm advisor Donald L. Brittsan.

Supervisors requested the reports last month after approving the 60-acre zoning for the first of five sections of the preserve to be considered.

The 60-acre classification — which limits development to one home per 60 acres — is aimed at protecting Marin's agricultural industry from the pressures of urban growth.

The reports were requested in an attempt to settle a squabble between conservationists, who say agriculture is thriving, and developers, who say it isn't and that the 60-acre zoning isn't needed.

(Developers have maintained, during past hearings, that the planning department's proposal is a guise to keep much of the county in open space but at the expense of land owners who are not agriculturalists.)

Under the planning department's recommended rezoning, only the eastern portion of the county, from Novato to Sausalito, and the San Geronimo Valley would remain as is.

Broemmel, however, said his limited proposal dealt only with preservation of agriculture and not with "existing or prospective county planning policy on preservation of open space. . ."

Prime areas of conflict between the two proposals appear to be the undeveloped lands around Novato, Inverness and south of Olema to the Marin headlands.

All are proposed for low-density zoning under the planning department recommendation but would be excluded under Broemmel's.

"I have excluded the Point Reyes Peninsula since adequate protection there is under control of the National Park Service," Broemmel said. "I have also excluded the lands on the watershed south of Olema to the Golden Gate Bridge since there are legislative proposals pending for government acquisition of the remainder of the rural lands in that area. . ."

Broemmel said he was suggesting only half the preserve since that half comprises most of the serious ranching operations in Marin.

"From a regional point of view," he continued, "it complements the agricultural predominance in land use prevailing on the Sonoma side of the county boundary."

Broemmel, commenting on the "viability" of the agriculture industry, noted there has been a slight decline in agriculture over the past 11 years.

Marin's kingpin dollar-getter, the dairies, have declined rapidly, however. In 1960, they represented about 80 per cent of the industry's gross dollar value, he said. Last year, they represented only about 65 per cent.

The decrease in dairying has been offset in the production of livestock and poultry, he said. "It is our opinion that agricultural endeavor will continue on a limited scale here in Marin to the extent that tax policy, environmental control and land use planning will permit."

The reports from agricultureal commissioner Ballard and farm advisor Brittsan present facts and figures showing influences —such as urban sprawl — outside pressures have on agriculture.

Neither came out in support or opposition to the controversial rezoning. Ballard said in his report, however, that "agriculture is viable in Marin County."

Nixon's Policy-Shaping Role Under A Tight Lid

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The White House placed a tight secrecy lid today on President Nixon's policy-shaping role in the bombings of Haiphong and Hanoi. On Capitol Hill and elsewhere, the raids created intense controversy.

"The President is being kept fully informed on all matters of foreign policy," reporters were told by the deputy White House press secretary, Gerald L. Warren.

Warren dismissed every question on the bombing and Nixon's role with a "no comment."

Among other things, Warren declined to say:

—Whether U. S. bombers hit a Soviet ship at Haiphong.

—Whether the United States would agree to North Vietnam's offer to resume peace talks in Paris April 27.

—Whether the Soviets, in their protest note on the bombing, referred to the summit meeting.

—When Nixon might report to the American people on war developments.

House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., until now a staunch supporter of U.S. policy in Southeast Asia, said Nixon owes the people an explanation of the escalated air war.

"I've supported Vietnamization and the program for the withdrawing of troops responsibly," Albert told newsmen. "I've never supported brinksmanship and hope that isn't what this is."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Nab Hijacker

ROME (UPI) — Police lured a New York City man out of the Swiss airliner he had hijacked yesterday by sending an unmarked car onto the runway and telling him — in keeping with his demand — that the U.S. ambassador was inside. A policeman promptly overpowered him.

Police said Mario Maimone, 30, was arrested after forcing the pilot of Swissaire flight 610 with 20 persons aboard to land at Rome's Ciampino military airport instead of at Leonardo Da Vinci International Airport 20 miles away.

They said Maimone, carrying a box he said was filled with explosives but turned out to contain cigars, hijacked the plane over Italy on a regular Geneva-Rome flight.

Cambodia Fighting

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Government forces have begun an operation to rout out eight battalions of Communist troops from a bunker base near the town of Saang, 17 miles southeast of Phnom Penh, military spokesmen said today.

Military sources said Communist troops killed 10 government paratroopers yesterday in the battle at Saang. The 1.5-square-mile base of well fortified bunkers and trenches has been under construction by the Communists for nearly two years.

The base has been used mainly as a "rear area" for Communists retreating after staging attacks in and around Phnom Penh.

Big Emerald

GENEVA (UPI) — The world's largest known emerald, a 20,000-carat stone that weighs about eight pounds and may be worth $125 million, was kept in a Geneva custom office safe in November.

"But it is no longer here," an official said. "We are unable to say a thing. This stone was in fact in a safe at the depot but isn't anymore."

The largest previously known emerald weighs one and one half pounds and is 3,600 carats. It was discovered at Toro, Colombia, and is valued at about 50 million.

Vincent Hutter, a reporter for the Geneva newspaper La Suissa, said he recently saw a photograph of the emerald that was kept in the Swiss customs safe. Hutter said it is hexagonal with an uneven top.

Prize-Winning Writer Dead

TOKYO (UPI) — Nobel Prize winner Yasunari Kawabata, whose literary reputation rested chiefly on a book about lonely people who couldn't relate to others, committed suicide yesterday without leaving a word of explanation to his readers or friends.

Kawabata

Kawabata, 72, who received his Nobel Prize for literature in 1968, was found dead by his maid in a rented apartment he used as a study at Kamakura, 40 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Police said the novelist apparently drank a bottle of whiskey, then inhaled gas through a rubber hose attached to a heater.

Kawabata received the prize mainly for "Snow Country," a novel published in 1937. Its central theme was the alienation and loneliness of the individual in modern society — a topic that did not catch the attention of the Western world until about 30 years later.

Claim On Jets

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Egyptian pilots have started flying Soviet-built MIG23 jet fighters and have replaced most of the Russian advisers manning antiaircraft missile sites along the Suez Canal, an Israeli newspaper said today.

Quoting "reliable informants who recently visited Egypt," the Jerusalem Post said "Egyptian fliers are now piloting seven of the 24 MIG23s stationed in Egypt and have already flown them on a number of reconnaissance missions."

Israeli military officials say Egypt is the only country outside the Communist bloc where the jets are stationed.

Tour Williamsburg

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (UPI) — The 34-member Chinese table tennis team toured historical sites yesterday in this colonial city, then played two hours of exhibition matches against an American all-star team. The Chinese won every match.

An estimated 4,000 people watched at the College of William and Mary Hall.

The Chinese received such a warm reception that Chuang Tse-tung, considered one of the finest table tennis players in the world, made a rare appearance in the matches. He said he played to reciprocate for the hospitality shown the team in Williamsburg.

Premier Resigns

ANKARA (UPI) — Prime Minister Nihat Erim resigned today, 13 months after taking office under pressure from military men seeking political, social and economic stability.

A note from President Cevdet Sunay read in Parliament said Erim would remain in office until a new premier is named.

The 60-year-old Erim resigned, Sunday's note said, because he was "exhausted" and needed a rest.

Body Found At San Pablo

SAN PABLO (UPI)—A body tentatively identified as a San Francisco psychiatrist missing since April 9 was found Sunday in a ravine off San Pablo Dam Road.

Contra Costa County Sheriff's Deputies said the body, apparently that of Dr. Lucille Mlodnosky, was about 200 yards from her auto.

Deputies said the cause of death was not immediately known but said it was "apparent suicide."

7 Dead In Battle

MONTEVIDEO (UPI) — Police sources said at least seven persons were killed this morning in a gunbattle that occured near the office of the Communist Party.

One army officer was wounded in the shootout between joint security forces and persons believed to be left-wing Tupamaro urban guerrillas, or militant Communists.

The dead were not identified, nor were any details of the incident disclosed.

18 Die In Crash

AMASENO, Italy (UPI) — All 18 persons on an Italian ATI airline flight from Rome to the city of Foggia were killed when the prop-jel plane hit a power pylon during a thunderstorm and crashed, police said today.

Officials said the Dutch-built Fokker 27 Friendship plane, carrying 15 passengers and a crew of three, crashed yesterday near Amaseno, a village 50 miles south of Rome in an area surrounded by mountains.

LBJ Resting

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Former President Lyndon B. Johnson, who suffered a heart attack 10 days ago in Virginia, spent a restful weekend, but doctors say they are not yet ready to allow Johnson, 63, to return to his LBJ Ranch, 80 miles away.

Plane Explodes, Three Are Killed

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) —Rain and heavy seas hampered a search for an airplane that crashed off-shore Sunday, apparently after exploding and killing its three passengers, including philanthropist Jack Soble.

The twin-engine Mitsubishi turboprop bound for Philadelphia dropped into the Atlantic Ocean, some 300 yards off Convention Hall, at 2:25 p.m., minutes after takeoff from Bader Field. Eyewitnesses reported hearing an explosion before the crash.

Among those presumed dead was Soble, 52, president of Soble Construction Co., Pleasantville, N.J., and a director of U.S. Home Corp., West Orange, N.J.

Nixon Aims Campaign Strategy At Powerful Blue Collar Bloc

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon hopes to convince the potentially powerful voting bloc of blue collar workers that his origins as a poor man's son give him a special insight into the desires of the working man.

If he succeeds, he would cut into the political strength of Gov. George Wallace of Alabama and perhaps force some other Democratic presidential candidates to rethink their own election strategy. He might also blunt Democratic efforts to picture himself and the Republican party as the ally of big business.

As his special envoy to the blue collar workers, Nixon has appointed to the White House staff Dr. Michael Pasquale Balzano Jr., a 36-year-old former garbageman whose biography reads like a story by Horatio Alger.

"Because he came from the ranks of working people, the President understands their problems," Balzano said in a two-page written statement issued in response to questions about his new role. "As far as the President is concerned, the only trouble with blue collar people is that there are not enough of them."

Balzano joined the White House staff as a special assistant several weeks ago but there was no announcement of his appointment until newsmen began to ask about it.

Balzano's appeal to blue collar workers apparently will stress that Nixon's father was a far from affluent grocer in Whittier, Calif. It can also be expected to gloss over the President's later career as a Wall Street lawyer.

"The harder you work and sacrifice, the more you are entitled to what you have earned," Balzano said. "The President has not forgotten this; his life is a history of work and sacrifice and that is why he is where he is today.

"The President is interested in learning how he can take the outstanding characteristics of these people—work, sacrifice, perseverance, patriotism, etc. —and impart these nation-building traits to all Americans."

Balzano, the son of Italian immigrant parents, dropped out of school at 16. Partly because Italian was the language spoken at home, he was virtually illiterate when he left school.

He worked for a time as a garbage collector in his hometown of New Haven, Conn., but a severe back sprain ended his career as a laborer at the age of 19.

According to his official biography, Balzano put himself through night school and then Bridgeport University by working as an optician. He earned his Ph.D. degree last year from Georgetown University in Washington.

"With respect to blue collar people, I have three functions on the President's staff," Balzano said. "First, I act as a sounding board for ideas and proposed policies which might affect these people.

"Second, I have an opportunity to make suggestions concerning what the President can do for them," he added. "Third, I provide the President with insights about blue collars from more than just an academic point of view."

British Soldiers Smash Barriers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—A dozen British soldiers guarded by 150 other heavily armed troops used two armor-plated bulldozers today to smash barricades around a Roman Catholic area declared off limits to them.

UPI correspondent Colin Baker, who accompanied a unit of the King's Own Scottish Borderers on the two-hour mission, said the only sign of the Irish Republican Army (IRA), which proclaimed Turf Lodge a "no-go" area, was a few scattered sniper shots.

There were no residents on the darkened streets near the barricades—made of burned cars, buses, hedges and bricks. Only one or two houses had lights on, Baker said.

"The 150 troops, each with blackened faces, took up positions in gardens, behind trees and lamp posts all along the road," he said. "A sniper had just about nowhere to hide."

Troops clearing barriers in the area Sunday came under fire from snipers. Although there were no casualties there, gunmen elsewhere in Belfast and Londonderry killed three soldiers, including an officer, and wounded two others.

The barricades went up in Turf Lodge following Saturday's shooting by troops of Joseph McCann, 24, described by the army as a "very senior officer" in the official Irish Republican Army (IRA). McCann lived in Turf Lodge and the IRA said the barriers would remain up until after his funeral Tuesday.

The soldiers' deaths brought to 307 the number of persons killed in Northern Ireland in nearly three years of violence.

Eight Nominated As Jaycees' Oustanding Teacher

Five high schools in the Central Marin area have nominated eight teachers in this year's Central Marin Outstanding Young High School Teacher competition.

Sponsored by the San Rafael Jaycees, the contest is held to honor a dedicated young teacher and his school.

Terra Linda, San Rafael, Sir Francis Drake, Marin Catholic, San Domenico and Redwood high schools were each asked to nominate two candidates. Redwood High School declined to participate due to a reluctance among faculty members to single out any particular age group for special recognition, and Terra Linda failed to submit a nominee.

The winner will be announced at a banquet jointly sponsored by the Jaycees and Independent-Journal April 27 at Dominic's Harbor Restaurant, San Rafael.

Administrators of the participating schools were requested to discuss how their nominees maintain classroom control, provide a learning atmosphere, evaluate students' progress and improve their teaching.

Nominated are Donald Ritchie and William C. Ciabattari of Marin Catholic; Arnold Riesen and Sally Markey of San Rafael; Beth Clawson and Sister M. Dorothea O'Donnell of San Domenico and Susan Blair Dohrmann and Christine Anderson of Sir Francis Drake High School.

Ritchie is a first-year teacher of laboratory biology at Marin Catholic. A graduate of the University of California at Davis, he majored in zoology. He is a member of the Audubon Society, a camper and photographer.

Ritchie, according to Vice Principal David M. Pettingill, has "interested many in life sciences, has organized field trips and pack trips, and has started an ecology club. The students enjoy his company and he has time for all."

Ciabattari graduated from the University of San Francisco with a major in Spanish and has taught language at Marin Catholic since September. A participant in the Catholic Youth Organization, he coached a parish school basketball team in Daly City for three years.

Discussing his choice of professions, Ciabattari wrote, "As a high school student, I appreciated and needed teachers who were dedicated to their profession. I like to consider myself dedicated."

Riesen has taught biology, physiology and chemistry at San Rafael High School since 1970. He graduated from University of California, Santa Barbara, in 1963. At San Rafael High, he has served as assistant junior varisty football coach, freshman class adviser, and coadviser for the Medical Careers Club.

Riesen called teaching both the most satisfying and most dissatisfying job he has ever had. "To teach is to be like a Yo-Yo; you're constantly up or down. When you're up, it's most satisfying, and when you're down, it's misery. One's success depends on how much he remains 'up'."

Miss Markey, with an architecture and design degree from University of Michigan, has been a special education teacher at San Rafael high since 1970. An accomplished artist, she has exhibited her work in the United States, Italy and France. She taught painting and drawing at Terra Linda High School during the summer of 1970 and is currently on the adult education faculty in San Rafael.

"My major concern and service outside the classroom has been concerned with bridging the gap between my students and the community," wrote Miss Markey. "The goal for my educable mentally retarded students is to become independent, self-supporting citizens of the society in which they live."

Mrs. Clawson is chairman of the physical education department at San Domenico High School. She has been a teacher for fifteen years. A graduate of the University of Utah, with majors in physical education and health, she is married and the mother of five children.

Sister M. Maurice, principal of San Domenico, wrote that Mrs. Clawson's "dedication to her work, sincere interest in each student, selfless daily giving to others and exemplary living what she teaches make (her) and outstanding candidate."

Sister M. Dorothea O'Donnell has served as instructor in English and religion and dean of students since she arrived at San Domenico five years ago. She is a board member of the Education Corps of San Rafael.

Sister M. Dorothea was described by her principal as a "teacher with high standards of excellence, her grading tends to be 'stiff' yet students elect her classes with the knowledge that her demands are just, rewarding and constructive."

Miss Dorhmann has taught French at Drake High since 1968. She was graduated from the University of California in Berkeley, and was a graduate student at Stanford and the Sorbonne in Paris. Off campus, she is involved in U.C. alumni activities, hiking and camping, ballet and as a chaperone for student activities.

"My greatest joy in teaching lies in the eyes of the student who suddenly understands a new concept and feels pride in a new world opening before him," she wrote. "My main dissatisfaction is.... the 'schedule' which robs me of the time needed" to get students "together as a class and... know them individually as well as I'd like..."

Mrs. Anderson has taught at Drake since 1965, was chairman of the mathematics department in 1970-71, and is chairman of the alternative School Within A School.

She was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley, with later studies there and at Dominican College. She has spent much of her time developing curricula for the mathematics and alternative school programs, and as a teen-ager's group advisor for the Young Men's Christian Association.

"I recall loving mathetmatics and literature as a child and... being puzzled by my peers who did not find these stimulating. I guess I set out to show them what they were missing," she wrote. Her satisfactions in teaching are "meeting new people and new ideas on a daily basis... never stagnation."

She said she is dissatisfied with the difficulties of "trying to change education..." and "the separation of the school and the community..."

and that at least one officer was wounded in the face.

Several Saigon newspapers carried reports that 1,200 South Vietnamese marines had stormed a beach 160 miles north of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) in North Vietnam today but there was no confirmation in Saigon and Hanoi Radio made no mention of such a landing.

The U.S. command, in a report on Sunday's raid, said two American planes were shot down in North Vietnam and two others and a helicopter lost in South Vietnam. It said the North Vietnamese fired thousand of rounds of anti-aircraft fire and more than 200 missiles but that the fire appeared to be erratic and disorganized.

Senior U.S. officers said today North Vietnam had moved a new division, identified only as the 711th, into the Que Son Valley sector of South Vietnam about 30 miles below Da Nang.

The officers said the division was identified through interrogation of prisoners. They said it was the same unit that overran government artillery bases West and O'Conner at the head of Que Son eight days ago.

"It's a sizeable force," one high ranking officer said, "and if it moves into the lowlands it's going to be a major threat for the (South Vietnamese) 2nd Division to take care of."

The Soviet Union officially protested the escalated bombing to the U.S. ambassador in Moscow.

The bombing missions as close as 75 miles from the Chinese border overshadowed the North Vietnamese offensive in the south, now in its 19th day. The Saigon command claimed control of the embattled provincial capital of An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon, after a 12-day siege which military sources said left more than 5,000 men dead on both sides.

Radio Hanoi claimed that 15 U.S. planes were shot down Sunday over the North which saw seasoned American combat pilots dodging antiaircraft fire heavier than some of them saw during the all-out bombing across the border four years ago.

Woman Injured During Parade

A Greenbrae woman, injured when the bicycle on which she was a passenger collided with a California Highway Patrol motorcycle Saturday during a parade in Larkspur, was treated for cuts and bruises at Marin General Hospital.

Zonnya Calderon, 21, of 344 Los Cerros, was riding on the bicycle driven by Ellen C. McGarry, 13, of 363 Los Cerros, Greenbrae. It collided with the motorcycle driven by officer Bill G. Loy.

The accident, at Manor Road and Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, was at very low speed and there was little damage, according to officers. It occurred about 9 a.m. Saturday.

Two Are Injured In Three-Car Crash

A San Francisco man and woman, injured in a three-car accident on Highway 101, were treated for a bruised shoulder and neck strain at Marin General Hospital, according to a spokesman.

Margaret Maheras, 50, and Tony J. Tsuralis, 75, were passengers in a car driven by George Maheras of San Francisco when it collided about 5:45 p.m. near Spencer Avenue in Sausalito with two others, one driven by Karl Mueller of San Francisco and the other by Milton E. Childress, also of San Francisco. The drivers were unhurt, officers said.

Council Installation Is Tomorrow Night

Swearing in of the newly-elected city council members in Mill Valley will take place at 8 p.m. tomorrow, not tonight as incorrectly stated in Saturday's Independent-Journal.

The city manager and city clerk will meet tonight, but immediately adjourn until tomorrow night, city officials said.

Walker Said Good After Stab Wound

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Matthew S. Walker, attorney for the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, was reported in good condition today at San Francisco General Hospital after being stabbed Saturday in front of his apartment on Cathedral Hill.

Walker, 54, underwent surgery for a deep stab wound that "barely missed" his heart, the hospital reported.

Police said Walker was attacked by a robber in the late afternoon as he walked home from his nearby office. Neighbors told police the stiletto-wielding assailant appeared to aim for Walker's heart.

The attacker took Walker's wristwatch and wallet and escaped.

Walker also recently survived a move to fire him from his district job. The 18-member board of directors split over his firing.

TALKS

on Hanoi's offer. Well-informed diplomatic sources said neither Washington nor Saigon was ready to bow to Communist conditions merely to obtain Tho's return to Paris.

The South Vietnamese delegation issued a statement saying there would be no talks while the Communist offensive continued. This appeared to rule out a resumption of the talks on Thursday.

"Le Duc Tho is now in Hanoi," Thuy said in answer to questions.

"He will be in Paris when the Paris conference on Vietnam resumes its work. If the conference does not resume its work and if the United States doesn't stop its escalation of the war against the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, then there can be no basis for private meetings," Thuy said.

French government sources said the government was prepared to provide the necessary facilities for any resumed Hanoi-Washington conversations.

Kissinger broke off the talks after realizing, according to U.S. officials, that it was worthless to hold private meetings with Thuy, the nominal delegation chief, since it was Tho, the nominal "adviser," who held true negotiating power.

It was Thuy, nevertheless, and his then deputy Col. Ha Van Lau, who negotiated the secret accord in 1968 with then Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and his deputy negotiator Cyrus Vance that ended the first heavy U.S. air raids on the North.

While protesting against the bombings Thuy demanded that the regular meetings, suspended by Washington on March 23, be resumed April 27.

Home Described By Magazine

The house of the John Holmes family on Cascade Drive, was constructed from 200 old windows, 85 of them stained glass, joists and ceiling boards from an old barn. Hardwood scraps form the floors.

The fixtures throughout the hillside house were obtained from junkyards.

Architect William Kirsch designed the house and had to change his plans many times as the unusual house took form.

With their creation completed and filled with used furniture, the Holmeses decided to sell their house and furniture and take a trip to Europe, according to the article.

POLICY

troops in South Vietnam," he added.

Rogers also indicated he felt the raids would have little effect on U. S. relations with either China or the Soviet Union.

Rogers noted that some senators had criticized the Cambodian incursion in 1969, saying it would harm U.S. relations, but since that time Nixon has gone to China and "we are continuing to prepare for our trip to Moscow."

"As you can see, Mr. Chairman, the President's decision was right," Rogers said to Fulbright.

Asked whey the administration felt that bombing would be effective now, when it was not effective during the Johnson administration, Rogers said it was now a "different kind of war."

When Rogers said the "myth of a civil war" was destroyed by the North Vietnamese invasion, and that the bombing was against strictly military targets, a young man in the crowded visitors section stood and shouted:

"That's a lie! You bomb people, you bomb people, you bomb people."

The youth was quickly removed from the room by Capitol police.

At another point, Rogers asserted:

"We can't now just turn tail and leave our friend and ally alone. ...If the United States did an about face after all these years of supporting South Vietnam, I think there would be a major bloodbath in South Vietnam." In response to questions, Rogers said, "There is no doubt in my mind there would be a terrible massacre.

"Furthermore, it would destabilize that whole area."

He said complete U. S. withdrawal "would be a major disaster, a mistake of major proportions," adversely affecting not only South Vietnam but also Japan, Korea and the Philippines.

O'BRIEN

threw his full support behind candidate Kennedy.

Thus, a serious party rift was averted, one which, if it had been encouraged by Humphrey, would doubtless have lost the election for the Democrats.

The words that the candidates have been using on each other thus far have not been that biting or personal.

Generally speaking, the charges levelled are of this variety:

That the other man is fuzzy on the issues. Or that he vacillates. Or that he can't win in the fall. Or that he is a tired candidate. Or that he can't appeal to the young and the black. Or that he was late on the war. And so on.

But even this goes much too far, as O'Brien sees it. He thinks that the President is vulnerable on the issues, particularly on the economy. And he wants the candidates to concentrate on hitting Nixon hard on these issues — and to stop haranguing each other.

He sees the Republicans chortling on the sidelines as they listen to the Democrats battling among themselves.

DROPOUT

dence that dropping out made matters worse," the authors say.

Thus, by treating the symptom rather than the problem, the report says the anti-dropout campaign "may do more harm than good since it distracts us from the more basic problems."

Secondly, the study recommends that the "highly deceptive" anti-dropout campaign "ought to be sharply curtailed" for at least three reasons:

1. There is little evidence to support the campaign's claims. And what evidence there is has sometimes been badly abused in order to make it more convincing, "for the implication is clear that if the potential dropout only stays in school then he can be just like the rest of the graduates."

2. The campaign gives dropouts a bad name among potential employers and society in general. "One of the side effects of downgrading the status of dropouts may be to encourage employers to make the diploma a requirement when it need not be" the report suggests.

3. The campaign may erode credibility."No doubt some young men are persuaded or partly persuaded by it," the authors write, "but one wonders how many others see through the oversimplifications and become still more skeptical and 'turned off' by what they perceive as propaganda."

A GET-TOGETHER IN SPACE

Venus and the moon, goddess of love and her chief symbol, seem to terrestials to be keeping a rendezvous in this record of the heavenly event caught by Independent-Journal photographer Alfred M. Arn. But the meeting of the brilliant planet and Earth's luminous satellite was an illusion born of a spatial relationship that is all a matter of orbits. Venus was really about 65,000,000 miles beyond the moon. It will happen again in about 18 years.

State Death Penalty Plea Refused

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Supreme Court refused again Monday to delay temporarily th effect of a California Supreme Court decision invalidating the death sentence under the state's constitution.

California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger had told the Court that a denial of the request would prejudice the state's right to have the federal tribunal review the decision prior to a reduction of the sentences of death row inmates to life imprisonment.

Younger said the prisoners whose death sentences are modified would be subject to additional time in prison anyway, so their rights would not be affected.

The Court rejected the temporary stay request without comment.

Younger's appeal is still subject to high court consideration.

Bombing Of Russ Ships 'Criminal'

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union today published a protest note that accused the United States of committing a "criminal act" by damaging four Soviet merchant ships in air raids on Haiphong Harbor, principal port for North Vietnam.

The prttest demanded that U.S. officials adopt "strict measures to prevent the recurrence of such provocations."

Tass, the Soviet news agency, published the text of the note it delivered on Sunday to U.S. Ambassador Jacob D. Beam.

It said tha four Soviet ships hit by bombing and strafing attacks on Haiphong were the Simeropol, the Borish Lavrenev, the Samuil Marshal and the Selemzha.

The note said some of the port workers handling cargoes on the vessels were killed or wounded but it mentioned no injuries to Soviet citizens.

(Hanoi radio reported a Soviet officer wounded in the face.)

The Soviet note made no reference to the forthcoming visit of President Nixon to the Soviet Union in May.

"The USSR Ministry of Foreign Affairs, on instructions from the Soviet government, protests to the U.S. government about the criminal act against Soviet merchant ships in the port of Haiphong and insists on the immediate adoption by U.S. authorities of strict measures to prevent the recurrence of such provocations in the future," the note said.

It said the four ships received "numerous holes in the cabinets of the crews in particular. The lives and safety of Soviet seamen were jeopardized ..."

The strong language of the note was matched by the conditions under which it was delivered. Beam was summoned from his home late on Sunday evening to receive the protest rather than being allowed to wait until a more normal hour.

Pickets Line Campus At Berkeley

BERKELEY (UPI) —About 500 construction union employes of the University of California went on strike today and set up a picket line around the campus.

About 100 pickets were posted at the Telegraph Avenue entrance and other gates to the campus.

Classes were held as usual and student attendance was normal. There was apparently no effort to shut down academic activities.

University officials had warned students and employes that classes would continue and any employes participating in the strike would be subject to discipline.

However, more than 1,000 other union employes of the university, including some members of the faculty, were expected to stay off the job in sympathy with the construction workers. The campus has about 28,000 students.

The strike grew out of the university's decision to end its policy of matching construction union pay scales. The campus workers do not have a contract with the university but traditionally were paid union rates.

Unlike student strike attempts to shut down the campus, the walkout involves the established labor movement. It was sanctioned by the Alameda County Building Trades Council of the AFL-CIO.

The workers are demanding a contract with the university preserving union scales.

Report Was Given Consultant For ITT

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A Wall Street consultant testified today that White House aide Peter Flanigan gave him a report prepared by ITT before hiring him to make the study that helped convince the Justice Department to drop antitrust action against the corporation.

But Richard Ramsden, a partner in a New York investment management firm, told the Senate Judiciary Committee that Flanigan "in no way" attempted to influence his judgment.

He acknowledged Flanigan gave him a copy of a report written by ITT director Felix Rohatyn warning of dire financial consequences if the government interfered with the firm's multibillion dollar merger with the Hartford Fire Insurance Co.

Both Rohatyn's report and Ramsden's came to the same conclusion: that if ITT were forced to divest Hartford Fire, it would result in a $1.2 billion loss to stockholders.

Ramsden's study, which was billed as independent, outside advice from a stock market expert, was one of the factors that led the antitrust division to drop its suits against the ITT-Hartford merger and to settle out-of-court.

Ramsden said Flanigan handed him the ITT report at a 20-minute meeting at the White House last May 12. While saying Flanigan made no attempt to influence his views, he said the ITT report helped him "focus" on what issues his study was to cover.

"I knew what I had to do," he said.

Ramsden testified as the Senate committee entered what may be the final days of its inquiry into the 1971 out-of-court settlement between ITT and the Justice Department. At stake is Senate confirmation of Richard G. Kleindienst to be attorney general.

Ramsden testified: "Flanigan made no attempt, whatsoever, to influence my views concerning the matter I was asked to analyze."

Little Headway For Substandard Marinas

Richardson Bay houseboat marina owners are making little or no progress in upgrading their substandard docking facilities, the county's marine inspector has disclosed.

Richard L. Larson, in a report prepared for the county board of supervisors, said two of the three owners have made no progress while the third recently made a belated start.

The county earlier this year set a construction timetable for improvement of the marinas, long a target of criticism by the board of supervisors.

However, Larson said neither two marinas, filed his application last Monday.

Larson said the marina owners' failure to comply with the timetable has caused delays estimated to date at 45 to 60 days.

"The delays have been caused primarily by the owners and are not considered justifiable," he wrote.

D. J. Arques nor Miriam Tellis have filed applications with the bay regional Water Quality Control Board for sewage plan review —the first of several required steps.

Approval of the plans normally takes about six weeks, Larson said, adding that the construction timetable called for approval two weeks ago.

Two Hurt In Freeway Accident

A sports car driver and his passenger were injured when their car struck a guard rail while northbound on Highway 101 on the Waldo Grade at 10 p.m. Friday, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Hamid Mehrbaklisk, 20, of San Francisco, the driver, was treated at Marin General Hospital for a fractured nose. The passenger, Mahammad Ali Ataif, 19, also of San Francisco, was treated for head cuts.

Officers said the auto swerved across one lane, then skidded 132 feet along the center guard rail, about one third of a mile south of the Rodeo Avenue offramp.

Needy Child Dental Care Program Urged

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The president of the American Dental Association has urged passage of a bill providing federal funds for pilot programs of dental care for needy children.

Dr. Carl A. Laughlin of Clarksburg, W. Va., said the measure, now in the House after passing the Senate 88-1, would make dental care available "to children who are presently unable to afford care and who, for that reason, are in need of dental care."

Laughlin spoke Sunday at the 102nd annual scientific meeting of the California Dental Association.

He said the dental health of youngsters in poverty is "woefully poor," with not only massive decay problems but also orthodontic disorders and gum diseases.

The Children's Dental Health Act also would provide funds to help communities and schools voluntarily fluoridate their water and help pay for the training of dental assistants, hygienists and technicians, Laughlin said.

"Many of the communities that do not have fluoridated water supplies simply do not have the funds to install the equipment," he said, noting that only about half the nation's public water supplies are fluoridated.

China Flyovers For Opium Urged

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A Stanford University researcher says the United States should finance "poppy reconnaissance" flights over China to search for opium plantations.

Dr. Stefan T. Possony, director of research at the Hoover Institution of War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford, cited U. N. figures which estimate the total world production of illicit opium at 1,400 tons annually.

He suggested that 300 to 400 tons of this comes from China.

Forum On Careers To Be Held

The Marin Industry-Education Council hopes to bring together students, educators and business people for a career forum during its spring conference from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. April 27.

Twelve "career clusters" will cover the following subjects: outdoor activities, health service, fine arts and crafts, office and clerical, transportation, communications, mechanical and machine, construction, buying and selling, social and public service, personal service and scientific.

Each participant will be asked to attend any two workshops to discuss how a career will affect his life — how much money can be made, what skills and experience are required, and what kinds of jobs are available.

Advance registration forms, enabling students to leave classes for the forum, are available at county high schools or can be obtained from the office of Denis Ragan, work experience educator at Redwood High School, Larkspur.

Scientific Mission To Visit Asian Area

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A party of science, technology and health experts will leave April 30 on a two-week trip to Japan, Taiwan and Korea to gather data on common problems.

Edward E. David Jr., White House science advisor, said those on the mission will "discuss our respective science and technology policies...explore further possibilities for mutually beneficial relationships and...discuss problems such as environment and health which are common to all our countries."

Report Says PG&E, Edison Are Clean

NEW YORK (UPI)—A study by the Council on Economic Priorities says the cleanest electric plants in the nation are operated by two California producers.

The council, in a survey of 15 leading utilities, cited the Pacific Gas and Electric of San Francisco and Southern California Edison of Los Angeles.

The report said strict California air pollution standards were partially responsible for the outstanding performance of the two companies.

INDEPENDENT STUDY

The council, an independent environmental group headquartered in New York, said the survey was undertaken to evaluate the degree of commitment of each company to environmental protection.

The study also designed to determine the actual results in pollution abatement, to estimate what each company would have to spend to bring pollution control up to date and to evaluate relative commitments to advertising and research.

EDISON FIRST

The council ranked Southern California Edison as first on the list of firms, which have recognized their environmental responsibility.

The report said it would require an investment of between $1.3 billion and $2.2 billion by the utilities to bring their pollution standards to acceptable levels.

The worst offenders, according to the council, were the Southern Company of Atlanta; American Electric Power of New York and Commonwealth Edison of Chicago.

The study concluded that electric utilities are more interested in advertising than in pollution control and have done little overall to reduce air pollution from their plants.

PLANTS ACCUSED

The research group accused two power plants in the Southwest of producing as much particulate air pollution as the nation's two largest and smogiest cities combined.

The researchers said the effect on the environment of the Four Corners plant, at Farmington, N.M., and the Mohave plant, in Southern Nevada, "so far has been astonishing."

The report, 13 months in the making, said the two existing co-powered plants, along with four more that have been proposed, mean "the nation's last great clean air region faces many decades of serious air pollution."

Changing Nature Of College Football

It scarcely got the attention given the professional baseball players' strike, but Sonoma State College's decision not to field a football team next fall may be of more significanace in its indication of change in the world of sports.

The resolution adopted by Sonoma State College Academic Senate announced a moratorium on intercollegiate football "until such time as adequate financing from state, campus and community groups is realized."

Judging from the history of the grid sport at the Rohnert Park school so far, that may be a long moratorium.

Sonoma State has never had a winning football team. That no doubt has been largely responsible for the sport's financial problems. If the team had been winning, the Associated Students of Sonoma State might not have cut off its student body funds. If it had started winning, the citizen supporters who picked up the tab to underwrite football losses might have gone along for another year or two, hoping for a team that would draw more customers through the gates. But it didn't win.

THIS POINTS UP the reality of the college football situation, as it now exists.

Football is an expensive sport. It requires a large squad, much equipment. To make it a paying proposition at the college level, it must attract large enough crowds to fill a fair-sized stadium. But to build such a stadium itself is extremely expensive.

Moreover, the proliferation of colleges has crowded the field, and has dispersed loyalties too widely. The new colleges — such as Sonoma — have no backlog of old grads for whom the grid team becomes the strongest link to the alma mater. They are, as the politicians would put it, largely without a constituency.

About the only way a new college can field a football team that has a chance to pay its way is to "go professional" — go out and recruit, with fat athletic scholarships, enough top high school athletes to make a "powerhouse" team. But to do that also takes money — and about the only place to get that money is from alumni, whom the new college lacks.

The high cost of fielding a contender has proved too much for some of the older schools. Bay Area Jesuit colleges, after dropping football and picking it up again, decided the expense was too great.

IN ESSENCE, football has become a professional sport. Its days as a matter of intercollegiate rivalry exist mostly in memory. The emphasis today is on the professional teams' bidding for the college stars. Even the schools long famous for their "big teams" have become largely farm clubs for the pros.

So the decision at Sonoma State is not surprising. We expect similar decisions at many more of the colleges. And we would not be surprised if new colleges starting in the next decade make no effort to have intercollegiate football at all.

WHO'S FOR CLEAN AIR?

Councilman Reed's Defeat Important To Smog Board

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

The defeat last week of San Anselmo City Councilman James F. Reed III in his bid for reelection was a loss to all the people of Marin who remember clean air.

Reed was in line to replace retiring Sausalito City Councilman Wyman Hicks as one of Marin's two representatives on the 18-member board of directors of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District. The Marin County Council of Mayors and Councilmen can replace Hicks only with anothar city councilman, so Reed cannot be considered unless a recount puts him back into office.

The council of city officials thus faces a critically important selection, but no candidate can be detected yet with the requisite interest and ability to replace Hicks. The retiring Sausalito councilman has been fiercely independent and tough, and will be missed. Reed would have been an excellent replacement, judging from his strong performance on the smog district's advisory council.

THE GREAT DANGER is that Marin's new representative on the smog board will be absorbed by its staff, becoming just another board hack parroting the party line for the top administrator, D. J. Callaghan. All Callaghan demands from his loyal directors is that they sing in harmony when he recites what a magnificent job they all are doing cleaning up air pollution.

Any who challenge this litany are damned as heretics, inspired by the devil into a frenzy to discredit the district and its great leader, Callaghan.

Thanks to Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., Marin's other voice on the smog board, the county already suffers from the burden of being represented by an official who backs to the hilt Callaghan's ailing administration. Arrigoni has stood firm against a wave of public opinion challenging Callaghan.

The critical point is that Callaghan's support on the smog board has dwindled to a bare majority at best, so Marin's second vote on the board could tip the scales.

OPPONENTS OF balanced transportation betweeen Marin and San Francisco will mount a final attack on the Golden Gate Bridge District's ferry plans Wednesday evening, and citizens with a stake in the outcome will have a last chance as well to counter this attack.

The occasion will be a hearing at 8 p.m. in toll plaza offices on the district's pending $12 million application for a federal grant to pay two-thirds of the cost of the ferry system. The record of the hearing will be weighed by the government in considering the grant.

The district's chance of getting the grant will be damaged if the record is tipped heavily in favor of ferry opponents, which include Harbor Tours Inc., private operator of ferries on the bay, and the small but vocal Marin County Taxpayers Association.

It's $12 million at stake.

$400 Million For Campaign Funds; Will New Law Change How They're Raised?

(The cost of this presidential year election is projected to run about $400,000,000. A new federal election campaign law calls for a closer look at who contributes, who spends, and who gets this money.)

By RICHARD L. STROUT

WASHINGTON, D.C. — It cost $300 million to carry through the last presidential year election, at least a third of that spent on the race for the White House.

The expense in 1972 may be $400 million — perhaps higher.

There will be one thing different however. There will be a closer inspection of who puts up the money, who spends it, who gets it.

ON APRIL 7, the new federal Election Campaign Act took effect. It was passed by an anxious Congress and signed by President Nixon, who called it a "realistic and enforceable . . . step forward in an area which has been of great public concern."

Some think the law marks a new era; some see it as a Galahad riding upon a white charger to rescue the fair maiden, Popular Election, from the corrupt dragon, Political Pelf. Cynics arent' convinced.

"That's what they said about the federal Corrupt Practices Act of 1925," they snort. "That was to produce 'a new era' 47 years ago. It was never enforced, never enforceable. It was window dressing, worse than useless, for it gave innocents the feeling that safeguards existed when they didn't.

"Nobody was indicted under it. It finally took a public interest group, Common Cause, under John W. Gardner, in January 1971, to sue both political parties to cease violation. When the court gave the suit standing, last August, Congress finally moved to reform. You can't separate politics from the pay off. Look at ITT."

THE CHARGE AGAINST ITT, of course hasn't been proved. There is an almost universal feeling, however, that sterner accounting measures are necessary. Herbert E. Alexander, America's leading authority on campaign spending and one of the authors of the new law, tells a reporter that he is hopeful, very hopeful, that the new act marks a beginning to a better day.

His new book "Money in Politics" (Public Affairs Press, Washington, D.C.) appared April 7 to coincide with the new law that he helped to draw. Right at the start this quiet, factual, bipartisan student and reformer challenges some of the public's dearest conceptions.

"Yes," he agrees, "the cost of politics is going up. But no, "he believes, "the problem is not so much to limit total spending as to fashion a system where the funds will be democratically raised and publicly accounted for." If the rader will consider two or three recent examples of dollar influence he will probably agree that the time ahs come fordrastic reform.

"THE PRESIDENT'S CLUB." This cozy little arrangement was one of the biggest Democratic money raisers. It was started in 1961 and based in large part on the snob appeal of being allowed to talk and dine with the President. The membership reached 4,000 in 1964 and paid $1,000 each.

A major attraction was the idea that members had occasional opportunity to meet the President and might even be invited to the White House. To the extent laws allowed, the names of members were secret. In total the club raised at least $6,371,000 and developed an elite financial constituency, and political favors were alleged.

CONVENTION BOOKS: Another questionable but remunerative way of raising money was the sale of full-page advertisements in convention books issued by the rival parties. Until 1964 the two parties charged $5,000 a page. In 1964 the Democrats published theirs as a Kennedy memorial at $15,000 a page. Republicans raised their price to $10,000 a page.

Many government contractors bought pages. The reaction of prss and public was hostile and the protest reached Congress. One test of the new 1972 law will be whether the lucrative purchase of "public service advertising" by big corporations will be revived.

CORPORATE INFLUENCE. Long before the ITT case executives of corporations made political donations. Under the old law the ceiling was $5,000 but there was no limit on the number of committees to which checks could be given.

A year ago disgruntled dairymen complained to Mr. Nixon of a ruling by then Agriculture Sec. Clifford Hardin. The latter reversed his ruling shortly thereafter, with an advantage to the industry computed to some as $400,000.

Shortly thereafter newspapers discovered 25 "dummy" fronts into which dairy industry leaders had been funneling campaign funds. The poetic titles of these committees may have disarmed the suspicious: one was "Committee for Political Integrity," and another, "Citizens United in Pursuit of the American Dream."

THE AMERICAN VOTER is slow acting, but a certain cynicism grew up over such disclosures in the course of the past 30 or 40 years. It is the general thesis of Mr. Alexander, the philosopher of the affair, that the public is going off on the wrong scent in denouncing the amount spent on elections.

With primaries, run-offs, conventions, and 500,000 electoral public offices sought by perhaps one million candidates, he asks if $400 million is really too much for a presidential election year?

"Relatively," he argues, "the dollar price is not especially high." The high cost, he argues, comes in "the irrational, irresponsible way, in which we raise and spend the dollars."

Where the one problem comes, and every month in the 1972 campaign seems to emphasize it, is that one big political party is affluent (Republican), another party (Democratic) is broke.

MONEY DOES HELP. It is believed that big spending helped John F. Kennedy compensate for anti-Catholic sentiment in 1960.

In 1968 the Democrats, in their presidential general election campaign budget of $10.6 millions, spent less than one-half what the Republicans did. In spite of this the result was extraordinarily close. The $9 million deficit that was hung over the Democrats since has tended to demoralize the party faithful.

MANY THINGS CHANGED as of April 7.

1. The new law requires full disclosure of all contributions over $100.

2. It limits what candidates for federal offices may spend to 10 cents times the voting population of the election district, or $50,000, whichever is greater.

3. No candidate may spend more than 60 per cent on broadcast advertising.

4. It requires full reporting, either to the clerk of the House, secretary of the Senate, or the comptroller general for presidential candidates.

There are many other details. But what many call the biggest problem is still unsolved — how to put the raising of campaign funds on a more general, universal, democratic basis.

CONGRESS PASSED a campaign subsidy bill in the Revenue Act of 1971, but postponed operation till January, 1973, and President Nixon has promised to do all in his power to defeat it if he is re-elected.

The law lets a political contributor, if he chooses, claim either (A) a tax credit on his income tax for 50 per cent of his gift, up to $12.50 on a single return of $25 on a joint return; or (B) take a deduction for the full amount of his contribution up to $50 on a single return or $100 on a joint return.

The IRS estimates that this would raise $100 million.

The Republicans opposed this check-off provision in the Senate, and the impoverished Democrats fought for it and enacted it. Under threat of presidential veto the date of operation was deferred to next January.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Minority Elects City's Councilmen

"There is no joy in Mudville."

The election in San Anselmo involved 45.5 per cent of the 7,007 registered voters; 3,190 turned out to vote — an unusually large turnout for our municipal election.

Of that number, we see that 66 per cent of our voters wanted a change in town and hence voted against Reed and Anderson. So split was the vote, however, that the two highest contenders (Reed and Anderson) received only 15 per cent of the vote of registered voters in town or 34 per cent of those who actually voted. Scarcely a plurality!

Unless we take steps to have a runoff election we will continue to have what we are getting — men who represent only a fraction of the citizens.

Now, although the rebuilding of the bridge at Guasco's was unanimously deplored by those attending the San Anselmo Town Meeting, watch this newest section of Highway 17 being rushed to completion by Reed and Anderson — "to serve the 400 apartments which will be built in Fairfax" according to Mr. Leitzell — to make way for commute buses on Center Boulevard according to Mr. Reed — to further devastate San Anselmo according to the writer.

Quality Of Marin's Judges Impresses

I've just finished my first stint at jury duty and am highly impressed with the quality and integrity of the judges, and the tact and efficiency of the jury commissioner's staff. It is reassuring to see the care taken to insure that a fair trial will be held.

If the judges I listened to are an example of the rest, one could almost feel happy at being brought to trial in Marin County.

Nixon's Own Supporters Turn On His Busing Plan

WASHINGTON — Try to imagine that a Republican President proposed a law to frustrate the consistently expressed opinion of the federal courts, a measure that would have the calculated effect of curtailing desegregation of public schools. You would expect the liberal Democratic champions of civil rights to raise hell, and you would be right.

Our current President, 13th GOP successor to the office held by Abraham Lincoln, has made such a proposal, and his traditional enemies have reacted with predictable fury. Mr. Nixon's effort to inspire Congress to do what he himself cannot do — to pass a law halting new busing orders by the courts — has come before the House Judiciary and Education committees. And, right on cue, the civil rights advocates have appeared in opposition.

The likes of Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., the veteran Judiciary Committee chairman; Joseph L. Rauh Jr., the omnipresent of Americans for Democratic Action, and John Doar, the familiar figure in many a southern showdown during the Kennedy administration, all have said their scathing pieces.

SO WHAT ELSE is new? So, once they gave the President's scheme a second look and started seeking statistics to back up his contentions, key members of Mr. Nixon's own party and even his own administration were forced to turn on his proposal. That is the essential development so far in capitol hearings on the Nixon idea, and if there is any justice, it should spare legislators the embarrassment of ever having to cast floor votes on this extremely dubious measure.

The President made the proposal, you will recall, by taking to television — after his spokesmen had said he would not use television for that purpose — and calling for congressional action against busing two days after George Wallace won the Florida Democratic primary largely on the basis of his opposition to busing.

The charitable may insist there was nothing political about Mr. Nixon's move. They may maintain that when he said he reserved judgment on a constitutional amendment to achieve the same purpose because it would take too long, he still was not being political — that his demand to stop further busing now instead of later had no relation to the fact that an election is scheduled this fall. They also may agree that the confusion, contradiction, turmoil and agonized concern he espied abroad in the land were the results solely of federal courts overstepping their authority — and not, by any means, to political inflation of the busing issue far beyond its real life proportions.

Even those believers must have been impressed, however, when Stephen Horn, vice chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, cited figures supplied by John A. Volpe, Mr. Nixon's own secretary of transportation, in suggesting that the vast sums of money being spent by schools for racial busing were a convenient apparition in the President's imagination. In fact, less than one per cent of the increase in school busing costs last year related to desegregation orders.

Horn asserted that the Nixon proposal would "represent the first retrogressive legislative action in the field of civil rights in this generation." But then, his testimony must be suspect, because although the Civil Rights Commission is nonpartisan, its very name smacks of partiality.

WHO, THEN, might make a credible witness, not suspected of adverse partisanship? Surely no one could argue with the qualifications of the very gentleman who introduced the proposal on the President's behalf, the senior Republican on the Judiciary Committee. At least no administration supporter should argue about him.

So, for the record, here are some of the things the congressman from Ohio, Rep. William McCulloch, said from his conscience after giving the Nixon measure almost a month's consideration:

"It is with the deepest regret that I sit here today to listen to a spokesman for a Republican administration asking the Congress to prostitute the courts by obligating them to suspend the equal protection clause so that Congress may debate the merits of further slowing down and perhaps even rolling back desegregation in public schools . . .

"Wasn't it only yesterday that we in Congress told our deprived citizens to press their claims not in the streets but in the courts? Now, when some of them have taken their cases to the courts and under the law of the land have won victories, it is suggested that it is time to change the rules.

"What message are we sending to our black people? Is this any way to govern a country? Is this any way to bring peace to a troubled land?"

The gentleman is still awaiting an adequate answer.

Despite Awareness Games, Party's Still Make-Believe

A "special occasion," loosely translated, means the family eats out at Howard Johnson's. Followed, if everybody is good, by a night at the drive-in, watching a couple of 1970 westerns.

It wasn't always so. Once upon a time the "special occasion" was a more formal, more calculated art form. The associative word for party used to be glamor. The idea was to dress up yourself and your world — to stage an illusion beyond limits you would ever be able to sustain in day-to-day life.

The party, in fact, was a kind of theater. A successful party was the "special occasion" when the American middle class became the upper class — and the upper class became European aristocracy — just for the night. It offered egalitarians a guilt free chance to role play at elegance. Instant upward mobility.

THE MOVIES used to satisfy this appetite vicariously. Stars of the Hollywood vintage years — Cary Grant, William Powell, Irene Dunne, Myrna Loy — were practically defined as people you could never imagine in blue jeans. Then along came Marlon Brando, scratching his T-shirt.

Deliberate attempts at high style began to seem snobbish, phony. In private life the damask covered table with candlesticks gave way to the gang around the barbecue pit. Even in Camelot, the Kennedys took the curse off formal wear by pushing each other into the swimming pool — by making one thing perfectly clear: that the real party was on the tag football field.

The sharp, artificial division between a party and the rest of life has broken down. The critical jargon of partygoers is an indicator. It used to be that "Swell time, Harry and Gladys" (and, of course, "gruesome party," spoken sotto voce on the way home, to your wife) were about all the analytical terms required. Now partygoers say things like: "I couldn't relate."

The party has tended to become one more "interpersonal problem," one more testing ground for identity crises. There are no holidays, evidently, for latterday egos in search of themselves. And they have done their compulsive best to turn the party into a disguised form of group therapy. The old tyranny of etiquette has yeilded to the new tyranny of consciousness raising.

Just as old style parties ran the risk of being bad parodies of Fred Astaire musicals, new style parties are likely to be bad parodies of "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice."

THERE IS NO ESCAPING the truth game players. Handbooks are even being made available fgr them, like "Reality Games" by Saville Sax and Sandra Hollander. Saville and Sandra want to turn life into a kind of nonstop educational party where people will soberly play games to teach themselves "social skills." The aim is nothing less than to plant the "seeds for a New Social Ecology" — and just try to put taps to that, Fred Astaire.

Yet these "Bob and Carol" games fail to avoid a curious artificiality of their own — exactly the quality, alas, the Savilles and Sandras pride themselves on eliminating. For unless they opt for total hostility, they are confronting the same old dilemma of all party etiquette codes: How to be honest without being unkind, how to be kind without being dishonest.

Typically Saville and Sandra convert this problem into the "Compliment Game," which may be taken as a sample of who-is-letting-down-what-hair.

The old etiquette according to Emily Post ordered one to tell the hostess one liked her hat and enjoyed her party. The new etiquette according to Saville and Sandra orders one to follow — stand by for euphemisms! — "the rule of positive feedback." When one feels like saying, "You are all wrong because your premise is wrong," one is advised to say: "Your position is clearly, movingly, and logically stated. Unfortunately, I cannot agree with your premises, because . . ."

The Saville and Sandra reader gets a sinking sensation that right or wrong premises don't really matter as long as everybody "relates." Yet obviously more is at stake than a hostess's hat.

PRETENDING TO BE serious is the new hypocrisy of partygoers. Like most compromises, it doubly offends. When Leonard Bernstein famously combined old line caviar with new line politics, the caterers should have felt insulted as well as the Black Panthers.

At least the old style parties knew they were make believe.

Perhaps the final judgment of future generations on today's games people will read: "They couldn't tell the difference between their parties and their lives." And it may be a more damaging indictment than anybody realizes.

Lawyers Campaign Against No-Fault

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— "Lawyers have traditionally been notorious for being dilatory and extravagant operators," the author of the no-fault automobile insurance concept declared today.

"Waste and delay are the inevitable consequences of the insurance business turning over the definition of the insured event to lawyers," professor Jeffrey O'Connell said in remarks prepared for the National Association of Fleet Administrators, Inc.

"Any business that allows itself to be turned over to lawyers gets itself in very bad trouble, especially with delay and waste."

O'Connell, onetime trial lawyer who now teaches law at the University of Illinois, said tpat 56 cents of each auto insurance dollar is "chewed up in insurance overhead and legal fees, with only 44 cents left for actually paying traffic victims."

Under his concept, traffic victims would be paid by their own insurance companies with no attempt to decide which driver was at fault in an accident. Usually there would be no recourse to courts.

At present, accident cases are settled in courts, with the person at fault bearing the expense.

"The result is not a system for paying people automobile accident insurance after automobile accidents, but a system for fighting people about paying them automobile insurance after automobile accidents," O'Connell declared.

The association he addressed is made up of men who are responsible for the buying, use and replacement of cars used by industry and government.

Lawyers Are Criticized By Author Of No-Fault

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Trial lawyers have launched what they hope will become a statewide campaign against nofault automobile insurance proposals, activating what may be their most powerful weapon — their clients.

About 200 clients and a few attorneys gathered in Sacramento during the weekend for a short course on the pitfalls of most no-fault plans and the handling of personal injury cases under the present and proposed plans.

Morton Friedman, a trial lawyer, said attorneys hope to sponsor similar forums for clients throughout the state to explain pending no-fault legislation and "the inequities of these measures."

Herbert Hatif, president of the California Trial Lawyers Association, said, "My prayer is that we can show the legislature that 100,000 persons (the estimated number of persons injured in California auto accidents yearly) and their families are more important than fenders."

Hatif contends most no-fault proposals take away too many rights —principally the one to sue the person who was at fault.

Top Court Ruling Due On Spill Law

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Supreme Court agreed today to decide next term whether a state can have a tougher oil spill law than the federal government.

The issue was brought to the Court in an appeal by Florida authorities from a ruling of a special three-judge federal panel which invalidated the state's oil spill prevention act late last year.

The Court will hear arguments next fall or winter on the state's appeal and hand down a written opinion later.

In other actions, the Court:

—Dismissed an appeal by 34 University of Maryland students who deliberately tested the constitutionality of a state law prohibiting persons to remain in public premises, such as campus buildings, after official closing hours.

—Refused to review lower court decisions approving a school desegregation plan for Dade County, Fla., which kept one-fourth of the pupils in all-black schools.

The Florida law was designed to protect the state's coast and beaches from spillage by oil tankers plying to and from Florida ports.

The lower court held on Dec. 10, 1971, that Florida had sought to legislate substantive maritime law which is exclusively within the federal domain. The opinion cited the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970, which became effective a few months before the state law did.

Both statutes subject vessels and onshore and offshore facilities to liability for cleanup costs, but the state law is stricter. Enacted in June, 1970, it also provides for damages "resulting from injury to others"

The state statute was to have become effective March 15, 1971. A temporary order barring the state from enforcing the law is now permanent as a result of the Dec. 10 decision.

The challenge was brought by the American Institute of Merchant Shipping, a group of indemnity associations, and 13 firms owning tankers. They argued, among other things, that they would be held liable for happenings beyond their control.

Atty. Gen. Arthur K. Bolton of Georgia filed a brief in support of Florida. He said the case "vitally affects the ability of the coastal states to protect their beaches, marsh lands, coastal properties ... against the ravages of pollution emanating from oil spill and similar contaminating discharges ..."

Woman Escapes Male Attacker

A 25-year-old woman from Santa Monica in Los Angeles County had to leap from a moving truck in Muir Woods yesterday about 12:15 p.m. to escape an attacker who had picked her up earlier in Sausalito when she was hitchhiking.

The woman, Gail Wegman, was reported in satisfactory condition today at Marin General Hospital with a broken left arm, cuts and bruises.

Sheriff's deputies were searching today for her attacker, described as white, 33 to 35 years old, about five-feet, 10 inches tall, 145 pounds, with black, greasy hair. He was driving a faded red Dodge pickup truck.

Deputies said the victim told them she had been choked and had to kick out a window of the truck, then leap out onto the road. Park rangers called sheriff's deputies.

Five Guerrillas Die In Gunfight

MANILA (UPI) — Outnumbered army troopers killed two field commanders and five guerrillas of the Maoist New Peoples Army (NPA) in a two-hour battle Sunday night in Isagela Province, 280 miles north of Manila, a military spokesman said today.

The spokesman said the government side suffered no casualties.

The firefight began at 6 p.m. between a Philippine army platoon of 24 men and 30 to 40 Communist guerrillas, the spokesman said. After two hours, the dissidents fled, leaving behind their dead and firearms including a grenade launcher, two Browning automatic rifles, one carbine and a 12-gage shotgun.

School Site Annex Plea Due Study

The Novato Unified School District board will consider requesting the City of Novato to annex a 10-acre school site at Mill Road and Trumbull Avenue at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Novato High School lecture hall.

Supt. James G. Bunker said the site could serve as a neighborhood play area and annexation would provide city police protection.

COIL — Needlemaking begins with Walter Kimball and a coil of steel. His father started in the business in 1900, and in 1934 Walter and father formed the Kimball Needle Co. in Lynn, Mass. Needlemaker Isn't Just Sew-Sew

By VIRGINIA TUCKER

LYNN, Mass. — Walter Kimball is a god man to know if you plan to go routing through haystacks: He has thousands of needles.

Kimball has been making needles for 38 years and is part of the reason why when you walk your uppers stay connected with your soles.

Kimball needle Co. makes needles for sewing shoes. Not only that, it makes awls to go with the needles. (An awl is a funnylooking piece of curved steel that punches holes in the sole leather so the needle can easily move through and make a lockstitch.)

In the modern world of plastics and rubber cements, many shoes are being glued together. Even so there is a large demand for old-fashioned, quality stitched shoes. Many men's shoes use the needle and awl method, and some ladies' shoes are stitched.

Herbert L. Kimball, Walter's father, started in the needle business in 1900, and Walter and his father formed Kimball Needle Co. in 1934. It has been going strongly ever since.

A typical order from shoe manufacturers can call for as many as 10,000 needles at a time.

The company's beginnings were humble, but not exactly simple. Since Kimball, from the start, has been one of only two companies of its kind in the United States, there wasn't much in the way of "standard" equipment. Every machine used in making the needles had to be especially designed and made.

Kimball says of his father: "He was the type of person who would be sitting there and see a machine in his head." He would draft his idea and make a model in wood before the final machine was made.

Kimball ingenuity still holds, though the plant has moved from the family garage to a building in downtown Lynn.

Walter Kimball now custom designs and makes the parts and machines of his trade, including the cutters for putting the eyes in the needles.

Needles and awls both start from high-carbon steel wire which has to go through 12 processes.

Machines cut, bend, trim, and shape the steel. The final products have to be an almost perfect half-circle (a variation of 1/1000th of an inch is all that's permissible). Then they are put into an electric furnace and heated to 1,420 degrees F.

They are shined by tumbling for eight hours in a machine filled with buffing material, and checked by hand for precision and quality before being packed off to the men who make your shoes.

Kimball likes his work. "I'm always doing something different," he says. And he likes being his own boss.

"I do what I want to do around the shop as it's needed. Working for someone else would be less fun — it could be a real drag!"

Artists Slate Auction April 30

The Marin Society of Artists will sponsor both a silent and a verbal auction April 30 in the society gallery at the Marin Art and Garden Center, Ross.

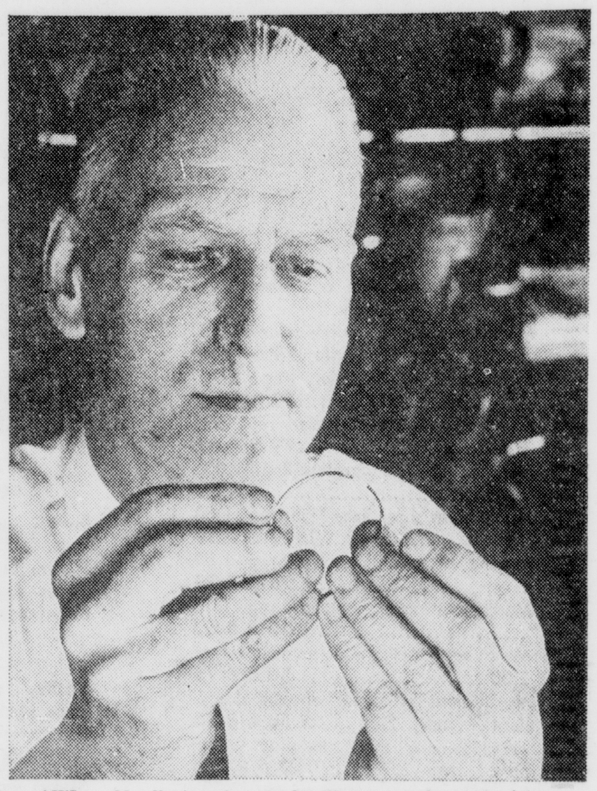
According to chairman Betty Finsland, the silent auction will begin at 1 p.m., and the verbal at 2 p.m.

A preview of the works to be auctioned verbally will take place April 21 in the gallery.

Restaurant Liquor Permit On Agenda

The San Anselmo Planning Commission will consider liquor and entertainment permit proposals for a planned new restaurant when it meets today at 8 p.m. at city hall.

The restaurant is proposed for 137 Tunstead Avenue. Applicant is Darris Bruhn.



AWL — Needle in a haystack? There may be such visions but to Walter Kimball needles are business. So are awls, such as the one he is holding — a curved piece of steel used in punching leather soles.

Artist Draws Attention

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

A medical artist who lives in Sausalito, Lynn Young is surprised that she has almost instantly received national prominence.

Since she was one on nine contemporary American women featured by Time magazine in its special issue on "The American Woman" March 20, she has had letters from all over the country.

"Many from friends, of course, but a lot from girls interested in careers," she said.

To many, the 33-year-old medical illustrator, earning some $20,000 a year, seems to be the ideal career woman, but Lynn thinks the article made her "sound tough" and is surprised that the letters contained no hate-response.

"I got a good reaction from a lot of women who said they were pleased someone finally had said that being married and having children isn't necessarily the greatest thing in life.

"I'm no Women's Libber, though," she maintained, "probably because I myself have never met any discrimination. In my work they wouldn't care if I were Minnie Mouse.

"Women's Lib has opened up a lot of area," she confessed. "I'm in favor of equal pay for equal work and against any sex discrimination, but I think some of the extremists in the movement are a bit ridiculous."

After completing her education and beginning her career, Lynn was married for three years to her high school boy friend. She is now divorced, with no regrets. She has no children.

"I don't believe all women should be programmed into marrying and having children," she said. "I love men and being with them, but I don't want to be with a man who bores me. Many women are afraid not to be married, but getting married for security is a dumb reason.

"MAYBE IF I had a boring job I would marry the first man who came along, but I can afford to be independent. I have been on my own for so long it would be hard to be tied down, but I don't feel any the less feminine for being as I am. I'm simply being true to myself.

"I can handle being alone. In fact, I really need it for my mental health, though I love people and have a wide circle of friends."

Lynn, who has a deep tan from playing tennis, explained her unusual career as a medical artist since 1960 at the University of California Hospital in San Francisco.

She works mainly with Dr. Francis A. Sooy, an ear, nose and throat specialist, as one of the few ear, nose and throat illustrators in the country. She and Dr. Sooy won a first prize from the American Medical Association in 1964 for their study of the embryology of the ear.

"I sit beside the doctor as he operates," she explained, "sketching what he does, later working up the sketches into finished drawings used as illustrations for textbooks and articles. People often ask, 'why don't they just photograph the work' You can't, because there is not way of photographing it selectively. All you would see would be a lot of hands, blood and instruments. I simplify everything and make what amounts to a how-to-do-it book.

"Working on the ear is especially fascinating because surgery is done looking through a microscope — the space in the middle ear is about the size of a pea. I have to sit beside the doctor looking through a snooper scope extension of his microscope.

"Medical art," she continued, "is working with minutiae. I'm a perfectionist and the tinier the details the better I like is. The more time I can spend on them, the more fun it is for me. I'm actually sick when something is finished."

The media Lynn works in are half tones, pen and ink drawings and pastel color, but not often with color because it costs so much.

Explaining how she happened to select her career, Lynn said, "I've always loved art, especially drawing of minutiae, and always been fascinated with anatomy and medicine since I was in high school. (She is a graduate of Menlo-Atherton High School).

"A friend who was a medical student at Stanford increased my interest, and I rushed down and bought Gray's Anatomy. But I never did really want to be a doctor," she emphasized. "I knew right from the first that I wanted to be a medical artist.

LYNN ENROLLED first as a pre-medical student at the University of California just to get medical background, then friends and just for fun, many of them campy gags or cartoons.

"Actually I get paid for about one-third of my stuff," she said with a laugh. "Two-thirds I do just because I enjoy it."

She find she is getting more and more into commercial art. For the past four years she has been doing brochures, posters and calendars for John Gardiner's tennis ranches in Arizona and Carmel, where she first became a tennis addict. In that time she has become expert enough to win an Olympic Club trophy and another trophy in a mixed doubles tournament in Texas.

"I don't think of myself as a caricaturist," she says, "but transferred to the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland for training in the art aspects of the work.

She completed her training in the medical art program at the University of California and was graduated in 1959 with a degree in medical illustration and was immediately hired at the University of California hospital as a general illustrator. She became a specialist in her present work in 1963-64.

Lynn has also done a great deal of free lance work, such as spinal surgery drawings for an orthopedic surgeon in Los Angeles, which were incorporated into a textbook, all drawings for a new abortion procedure and large drawings for malpractice or accident insurance cases tried in court.

Often she does things free for much of this work for tennis tends to be humorous, and I put just as much minutiae into it as into my medical art."

Lynn has also designed blocks decorated with animals for children, wing-tipped tennis shoes and her own furniture, which she had made in Hong Kong.

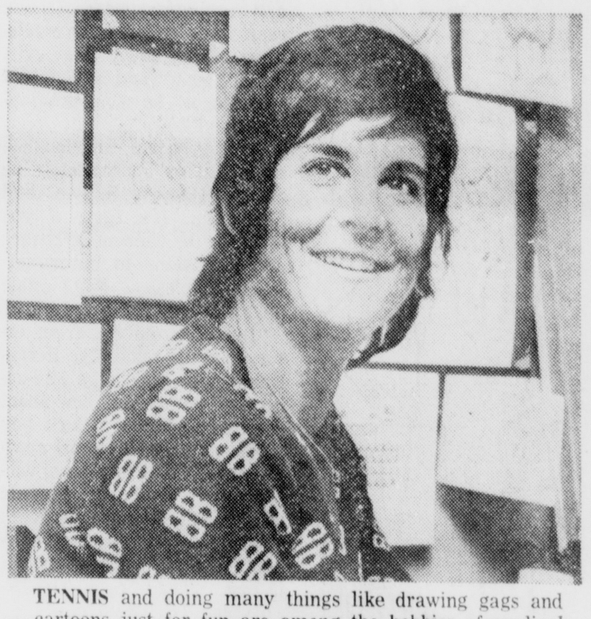
AS FOR THE future, she says she plans to work into all areas of sport and has just formed a new company named Con-Lyle with her friend Marion Conrad of the Marion Conrad Public Relations firm in San Francisco.

She will be doing art work for all leisure time activities, primarily tennis, she said, adding "but I'll never give up my medical art. That is my first love."

Lynn advises any girl or young medical who would like to be a medical artist to write for information on where training is available to: Octavia Garlington, Corresponding Secretary, Medical College of Georgia, Augusta, Ga.

In may she will be participating in a charity project with her friend, movie star Janet Leigh, whom she met at the tennis ranch.

Free and independent, why, indeed, should Lynn Young think of flying into the marriage cage again — unless, as she admitted with a grin, "the right non-boring man comes along."



TENNIS and doing many things like drawing gags and cartoons just for fun are among the hobbies of medical artist Lynn Young. At the work table in her Sausalito home she has just put finishing touches to one of a series of animal postal cards — a kangaroo in tennis shoes who has just stepped in a piece of chewing gum.

AN AMARANTH is created by needlepainting. Brilliant colored wool yarns go into the creation of enduring flowers for furniture.

Jean Patou Salon Has Everything

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI)—The Jean Patou salon's winter ready-to-wear collection needs only a motorcycle.

Slick leather tight pants with blossom blouse-on tops paraded before press and buyers, and one outfit even had rhinestone nailheads on the jacket plus a pink bunny for color.

The Patou collection dived headfirst into leather pants suits, with slick leather outnumbering suede.

Clumps of colored rabbits decorated the sleeves of some trouser outfits.

SUEDE CUT like men's shorts were tamed with red wool knitted trousers. "Little girl" leather jumpers were worn over turtle-neck tops.

In all the ready-to-wear collections so far the trouser suits still reigned supreme.

COATS LOOKED like suits with red wool tops and snug waists.

Pinnafore daytime dresses, evening dresses cut like peasants' smocks and raincoats with large kangaroo pockets over the stomach made the collection look very gay and young.

One of the prettiest evening outfits was a full-length mohair cape in pink and orange plaid worn with a matching skirt.

A black knitted evening dress had enormous yellow angora sleeves embroidered with black butterflies.

RENAISSANCE WOMAN

Eszter Haraszty's Artist; And Host Of Other Things

By JUNE CARROLL

The Christian Science Monitor News Service

LOS ANGELES — Eszter Haraszty is a renaissance woman: artist, embroiderer, ceramist, botanist, interior decorator, costume and set designer.

In the color-splashed house which she remodeled in a nearby canyon, the chairs and sofas are covered in her own invention which she calls "needlepainting." It is a combination of crewel and traditional embroidery.

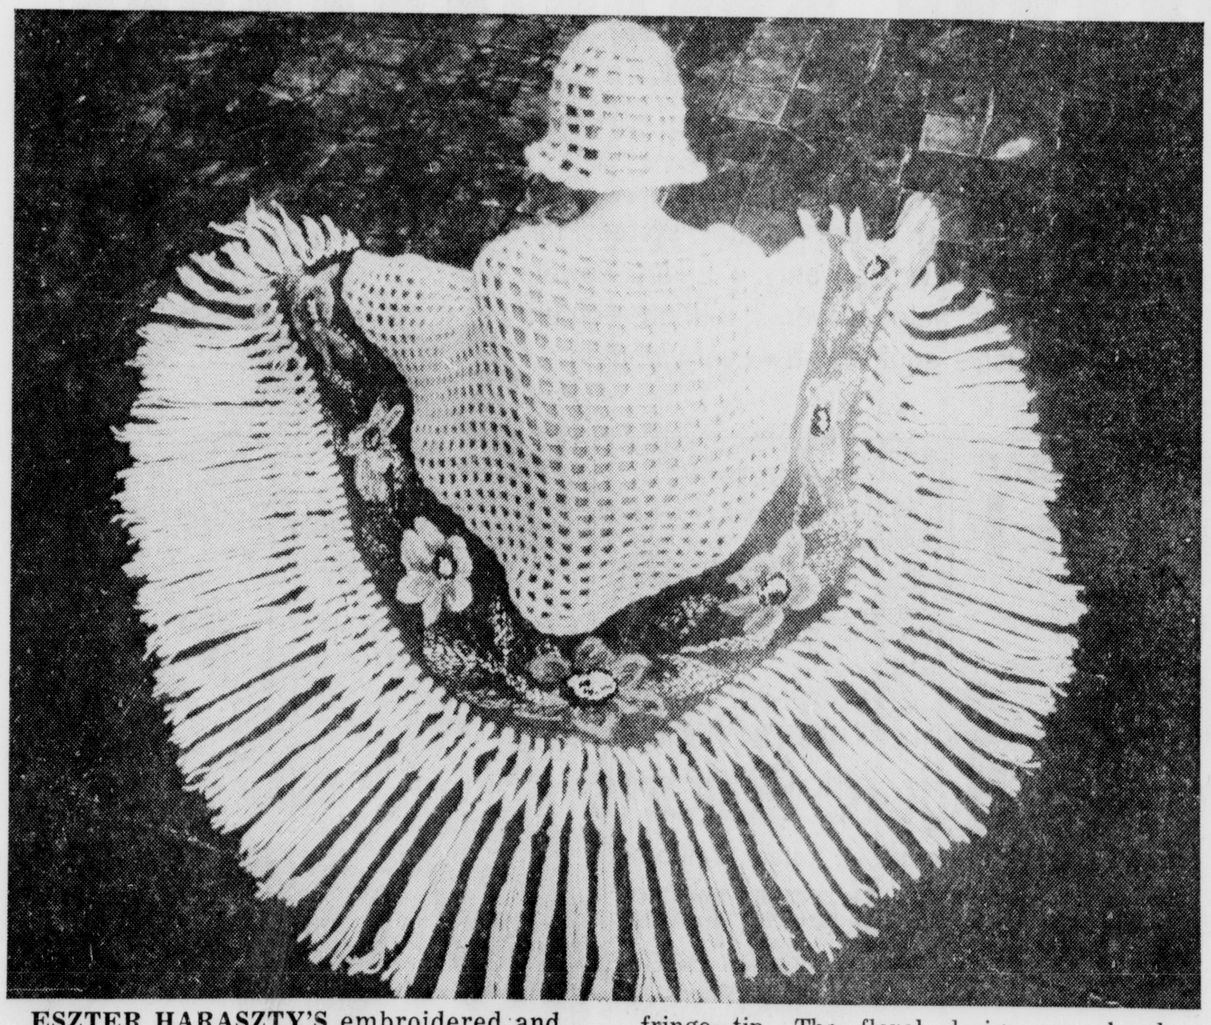
"You keep building texture on texture until the petals and leaves of each flower become cushions," she explains. "You make your mistakes work for you. You don't pull out the thread. You go over it.

"IF YOU have a short piece of thread left in your needle, use it, don't cut it off. Push and pull constantly using your thumb to sculpt into the desired shape. Use double, sometimes quadruple strands of yarn.

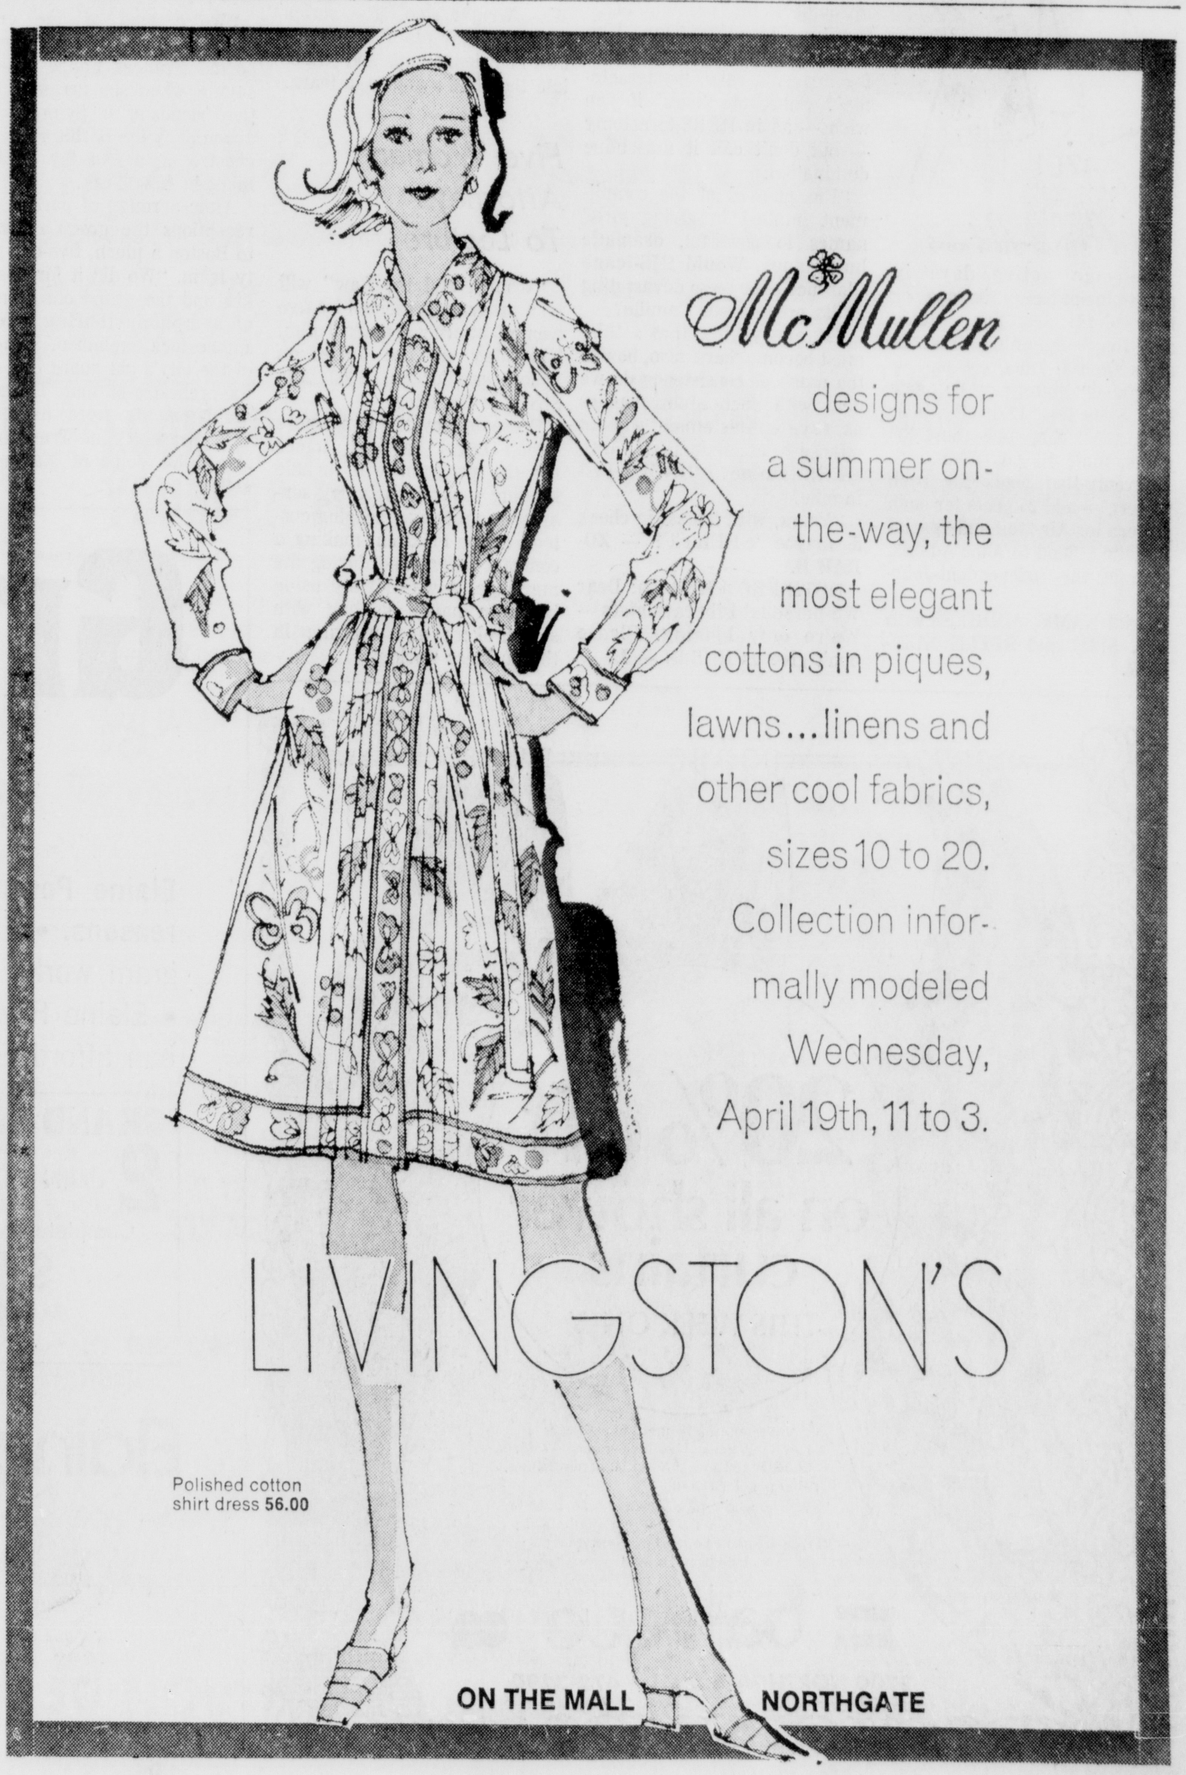
"Build your own yarn library from supermarkets, dime stores," she continued. "Use everything: knitting yarn, mohair. No matter how delicate, stitching upon stitching prevents the embroidery from wearing out. I have yet to see signs of wear on the first seat cover I did eight years ago."

Giant poppies, daisies, and tulips in brilliant colored wool adorn the chairs. Great baskets of bright yarns are strewn throughout the sunny house.

Soon after coming to the United States from her native Hungary, Miss Haraszty became a color consultant and interior designer.



ESZTER HARASZTY'S embroidered and crocheted woolen shawl measures almost seven feet from yellow fringe tip to yellow fringe tip. The floral design was hand-screened on a panel of navy blue felt.



HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Dear Wo-Persons' Liberation Please Don't Give Us Herll!

DEAR HELEN:

Now that we've got "Ms." squared away, let's beam in on this business of labeling everyone male when both male and female are represented or the gender isn't specifically known. As in: "All men are created equal" (how about women?). Or "Will everyone take HIS place in line?" (When the "hers" are very apparent.) Or "He who laughs last laughs best" (only men laugh yet?).

There is no such word as "chairwoman" and I'm sure females would balk at being called "laywomen," while "mailwoman" sounds a bit on the hermaphrodite side. (For that matter, it would seem that whenever "her" is used, it's in a downgrading word ... why not HEmaphrodite?)

The English language, it appears, works overtime to make women invisible or inferior. Someone called this "male linguistic chauvinism." I'm with Betty Freidan who suggests that "history" be labeled "herstory" since females helped make it.

Comments anyone? — MS. T.

DEAR MS. T.:

How about "his'n herstory"?

Come to think of it (and I really hadn't before), there's a spot of "male linguistic chauvinism" in HElen HElp Us! "HERlen HERlp Us! perhaps?

... And mebbe "woman" should be "wo-person," "humans" "hu-people"? Should we coin the words "hiser" (for his-or-her) and "shehe" when referring to both sexes? Consider "hedonist"? Without a "shedonist" he might become a "hismit."

Newspaper columnist Sorah Buchtman had some recent thoughts on the subject. Sez she:

"Highly vocal women's liberation advocates have frequently launched assaults on our 'anti-female language.' Some completely objective research — even though I'm she not he — reveals that any latent prejudice is wholly unintentional and about equally divided between the sexes. For one thing, does any inclination toward female repression, despite some explicitly stated Biblical view, exist in the name "Hebrew"? Would "SHE-brew" be more acceptable to quibblers?

Heresy, hearse, and heathen could just as appropriately be called HIS-esy, HIS-se, and SHE-athen. It's easy, if you overlook the element of chance and derivations, to find numerous examples of MLC (male linguistic chauvinism).

"But then other glaring errors come to mind, like Herculean, which should be HIS-culean, of course. And how about a herd, that can include boy anythings as well as girl creatures? 'HIS-d?" In view of current male coiffures, hirsute should really be HIS-sute. Even words like heredity and heritage, if there's any biological justice, should read THEIR-edity and THEIR-itage.

"One relates shenanigans to boys, so why not HE-nanigans? Why shouldn't the totally masculine word 'sheik' be HE-ik?

"And how about the obvious misnomers for predominantly feminine manifestations like 'histrionics,' 'hysterical' and, for heaven's sake, 'hysterectomy'? Substitute 'hers' if you wish — as in HERS-terectomy — but don't call it masculine domination.

"I'm pleased at the compliment implied in giving girls' names to powerful, dramatic hurricanes. Would HIS-icane Clarence ever be so devastating as its predecessor Camille?

"If everything that's 'his' must become 'hers' also, how in the name of consistency do we deal with such ambivalencies as, say, 'antihistamine' without offense to either faction? 'Anti-HERS-tamine?' 'UNCLE-histamine?'

"Yours, with tongue in cheek & maybe 'c-HER-ck'? — ZORAH B.

NOTE FROM HER-len: Dear Wo-persons' Liberationists — We're only kidding. Please don't give us HER-ll! — H.

Nature Is Topic Of New Series

Parents too often communicate their ignorance and fears about the natural world, according to Penny Wright, an Audubon Canyon Ranch docent who is one of three teachers for the three-part series, "Nature and Your Child." The series begins April 26 at 8 p.m. at the Marin Jewish Community Center in San Rafael.

Other teachers of the series, which will be on consecutive Wednesday evenings, are Flora Maclise and Joan Basore, members of Nature Ways Associates, an affiliate of Natural Science Education Resources.

Plants, birds, trees and insects are among the pre-school child's first learning experiences about the outside world, and many parents discourage their children's natural ability to learn by answering questions in a non-constructive manner, Miss Wright said. The series will help parents fill in their own knowledge gaps and stimulate the child's ability to learn.

MRS. ROBERT W. MAIER
P-TA president

Mrs. Maier Heads Kent School P-TA

A three-year-member of the A. E. Kent School Parent-Teacher Association, Mrs. Robert W. Maier is the new president. She has been first vice president and corresponding secretary and is one of the founders of the school's Art in Action program.

Donna Maier said the P-TA's purpose is to foster better communications between parents and the teachers in the school. Plans for the coming school year are for an evening parent-teacher party, a "sports swap-arama" and a spring luncheon and fashion show.

Mrs. Maier is a native of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, and received a bachelor of education degree from the University of British Columbia. Her husband is marketing vice president for Specialty Brands, Inc. They have lived in Marin for nine years and are the parents of Jonathan, 8, and Jeffrey, 7 years old.

The family enjoys skiing, according to Mrs. Maier, whose other interests are art and art education, tennis and stitchery. She is also a member of the Junior League of San Francisco.

Other officers are Mmes. Surl Nielsen, first vice president; Gene Hendsch and Arcima Taylor, second vice presidents; Stephen Henderson, recording secretary; Joan Katkov, corresponding secretary; Wendell Baker, treasurer; Paul Schmitt, parliamentarian; and Laurence Early, historian.

'Grand Old Manor' For Symphony Trip

"We're kind of like groupies," Women's Wear Daily reported Frances Fahnestock as saying when she arranged for the Friends of the Symphony to accompany the Boston Pops Orchestra on a four-day engagement in New York.

After a round of parties and receptions the group returned to Boston a plush, five-car party train. "We did it for nostalgia and the grand old manner of symphony touring," Mrs. Fahnestock explained. Some 48 of the city's old guard escorted the orchestra on tour. The train arrangements were made by U.S. Secretary of Transportation John Volpe of Massachusetts.

Pity The Poor Hotdog It's Being Mistreated

By ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — Pity the poor hot dog.

It is being criticized from many angles for many reasons. It is also being stretched, watered, spiced up, colored, fattened and sometimes labeled in terms that are not true.

What is happening to the hot dog is almost un-American. The next targets may be mom and apple pie. Although the hot dog was born in Germany, it has become identified more with this country than any other. It has become one of the most popular items in the average American diet.

More than 1.5 billion pounds of frankfurters are consumed each year in the United States, not to mention the huge quantities of rolls, mustard, relish and other items consumed in the same bites.

If the hog dog retains its immense popularity in the face of such a massive attack, it will be remarkable. For some of the stories do not make for pleasant reading — or eating.

One of the main ingredients — though not labeled as such — is bacteria. Not all bacteria are harmful, nor is it possible to find many food items entirely free of bacteria.

Some experts suggested that there should not be more than 10,000 bacteria per gram of precooked sausage products. Yet numerous tests have shown counts frequently from 100,000 to 1 million gram. At the latter level, mild gastric distress may result.

All sorts of filth have been found in hot dogs.

Of even more concern to some people is the variety of animal parts allowed into such products. They do not like the idea of eating pig jowls and snouts, not to mention other delicacies that are also permissible.

Still other critics, including some with the industry, cried foul at the introduction of chicken into franks. They were overruled when the U.S. Department of Agriculture decided to allow up to 15 per cent of the ingredients to be chicken provided that the label includes chicken.

For several years, nutritionists complained about the steady increase in fat and decrease in protein. Once upon a time, frankfurters contained more protein than fat. But since 1937, USDA figures show that the percentage of protein dropped from nearly 20 to less than 12 per cent.

At the same time, the proportion of fat jumped from below 20 per cent to more than 30 per cent — some products had as much as 40 per cent fat — before consumer resistance forced the USDA to set a ceiling of 30 per cent on fat a few years ago. The average now is about 28 per cent.

Added water is another source of criticism. The average proportion is well above 50 per cent. Manufacturers are permitted to add 10 per cent water to the amount naturally in meat.

Even the truth of such labels as "all meat" and "all beef" frankfurters have been brought into question. In a recent court case, the USDA was ordered to revise labeling regulations to eliminate possible deception.

Ralph Nader stopped eating hot dogs years ago. He calls them "a major consumer abuse."

So what is a consumer to do? If he stopped consuming everything with a serious defect, he might starve or die of thirst.

Hot dogs must still taste pretty good despite all the poor-mouthing they have received. Their continued popularity is mute testimony of that.

Some 4,000 delegates are expected to attend the meeting at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, and delegates will vote on eight resolutions of statewide significance and decide the state P-TA legislative platform for the next two years.

A final meeting of the current board of manager will be held May 8 and 9 before the convention opens.

FDA Will Require New Cosmetic Labels

The U. S. Food and Drug Administration plans to require cosmetics manufacturers to identify as "sensitizing" ingredients in their products on the product labels, reports Women's Wear Daily. FDA proposals are expected to be ready in a month for public hearings. In their final form, several months later, they will become mandatory for manufacturers.

Complaints have been leveled at products that cause eye and other sensitivity and irritation.

Bride Has Ex-Student Attendants

Ten former students of the bride, Dianne Williams of Kentfield, were aisle attendants when she was wed to Nelson Wright Black of Alameda Saturday at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross.

The attendants were Janice O'Donnell, Robbie Jo Rishel, Kevin Little, Peter Sugarman, Jay and John Lehman, Eileen Edinger, Craig Green and Erin and Christian Lynch, all of Marin. Also attending the bride were her sister Carole Williams of Midland Park, N.J., as maid of honor and Margery Smith of Littleton, Colo., bridesmaid.

A reception at the Art and Garden Center followed the ceremony.

The bride was graduated from high school in Ridgewood, N.J., and from Converse College in Spartansburg, S.C. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Williams of Green Bank, W.V. Marcia Lemenager of Kankakee, Ill., is also her sister. Dianne is employed at the Ear Medical Clinic of Santa Clara Valley as a teacher of hearing impaired persons.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. J. W. Goodwin of La Jolla and the late Nelson Wilson Black. He was graduated from high school in Santa Rosa and attended Santa Rosa Junior College and the University of California. Mrs. Richard Tinker of La Jolla and Mrs. Rex Thompson of San Anselmo are his sisters. He is employed by McGraw Hill Book Co. in Novato.

The couple will live in Alameda.

Classics Back

Subtle touches from the classic periods of the '40s and '50s are used by Karl Lagerfeld for Ballantyne cashmere sweaters in London. The sweaters are shorter than last year and cut skinny. Some sweater sets are returning in the collection, and colors favor the deeper tones — claret, dark green, charcoal gray.

FABRIC SECRETS
JOAN CROSSLEY

There is nothing more uncomfortable than an ill-fitting sleeve. Here are some hints to help your sleeves fit more perfectly. Remember, first, that sleeves should be sewed in the armhole so crosswise threads of the fabric in the upper sleeve run parallel with the floor. The fullness at the top of the armhole should be evenly distributed. Make sure your sleeve is long enough by bending your arm, fist closed and palm side toward your chest. A long sleeve should then be even with the knob of your wrist.

When you're ready to sew make sure that first stop is KAUFMAN'S FABRIC LAND, 836 4th St. In addition to our fabulous selection of materials we also stock buttons, accessories and sundries of all kinds. Hours: 9:30AM - 5:30PM. Mon-Tues-Thurs-Sat. 9:30AM - 9PM Wed-Fri, Noon - 5PM Sun.

HELPFUL HINT:
Sleeves become shorter with wear so remember to make them long enough to begin with!

Over 30 Years Experience In Nutrition
HERE'S HEALTH!
by JUNE EMBURY

"I believe that the various minerals are far more important to health than anyone realizes", states Adeles Davis and I feel that she knows what she is talking about.

There is growing recognition that a rich source of minerals may be most helpful in balancing body chemistry. But there is also some confusion as to the proper balance of the various minerals to each other. I believe that this is a field that needs to be further investigated, our scientists do not yet know all of the answers.

But there is one rich source of minerals that nature has proven to be well balanced to promote life - the sea. We have just begun to awaken to the riches of health the sea has for us. Both sea plants and sea animals have learned to extract the minerals from the sea and offer them in an organic combination that is easy for us to assimilate.

Come in and see the different sea-plant products we carry. For optimum health it is wise to use the bounties of the sea.

Saving On Food—It's Worth The Trouble

By PHYLLIS HANES
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

BOSTON, Mass. — Don't let the few pennies saved on one food "special" deceive you into thinking it's not worth the battle to fight rising food prices.

You can expect to save 10 to 20 per cent on your food bill if you follow a few rules.

Those who can cook "from scratch" are in for even more savings. And if you live near one of the new warehouse or economy supermarkets, you can save 5 to 10 per cent a week by bagging your own vegetables and choosing your staples from a cut open carton.

"Shopping at the right market heads the list of ways to cut the food bill," says Sidney Margolius, writer on consumer food problems.

"Choose the one with the best prices on meats since that's the most expensive item. Watch the ads. Switch around if that's where the best buy is."

"The fattest savings of all are the weekly specials," says Jennifer Cross, another consumer writer on the food industry.

"Buying house brands will save you from $250 to $300 a year," said a "Consumer Reports" survey back in the 1960's. Today the figure is even higher.

"But there's money to be saved by avoiding the convenience foods," said Margolius, who likes to call them "pseudo-convenience" foods.

Most shoppers know that convenience foods cost more, but they don't usually have any idea how much.

Sometimes their opinions are not based on price. When it comes to something like sugared cereals, many parents feel that if the kids like them better and will eat more, so much the better.

Others are not as worried about the price as the ecology angle. They don't like all those extra wrappings on individual packets of cereal and cocoa. Still others say they like the new taste flavors of the packaged foods with sauces.

"Actually, there's nothing wrong with a food processor making a food taste good," said Margolius. "But it's wrong for a manufacturer to add a little cheap flavoring, then double the price."

Green Giant rice verdi, for example, is labeled "rice with bell peppers and parsley" and costs you 41 cents in a 12-ounce package, Margolius reports. It represents, mainly, about 5 ounces of instant uncooked rice, valued at 13 cents. The other ingredients, in order of importance, are margarine, green peppers, salt, chicken-bouillon flavoring, cornstarch, onion flakes, and parsley flakes.

Curiously, the rice in the boilable pouch actually takes longer to cook — 16 minutes as against 7 minutes for ordinary quick rice.

Here are some more examples of products Margolius has surveyed, studied, and listed in his book, "The Great American Food Hoax" (Walker & Co., $5.95).

H. J. Heinz Great American Soup: cream of mushroom — 25 cents for 15 ounces.

Campbell's cream of mushroom — 17 cents for 10½ ounces.

You add no water to the Heinz soup but you add one can of water to the Campbell's concentrated soup, thus ending up with 21 ounces of soup.

Kellogg's sugar-frosted flakes — 67 cents for 20 ounces.

Kellogg's corn flakes —45 cents for 18 ounces. Cost of the convenience — about 17 cents. They added the sugar for you.

CONFUSING? — A customer surveys the array of goods in a supermarket. Convenience items found in most such shopping areas end up costing the consumer considerably more. In warehouses and economy supermarkets the consumer can save money by buying items he packages himself.

The sugared flakes cost 0.85 cents more per ounce than the corn flakes, and when multiplied by 20 ounces this equals 17 cents. This means the difference in price could buy more than a pound of sugar.

Quick Quaker oats, cooks in one minute — 34 cents for 18 ounces.

Instant Quaker oatmeal, 10 serving packets —43 cents for 10 ounces.

Cost of having pre-measured packets — more than 2.7 cents for a one ounce serving, meaning if the 18-ounce box came in pre-measured packets it would cost almost 49 cents more. If, in addition, you buy a pre-measured cereal with flavorings such as apples and cinnamon you pay another .7 cents per serving.

Hershey's instant cocoa —10 individual packets; 29 cents for 7½ ounces.

Hershey's instant cocoa — one package; 45 cents for 16 ounces.

Cost of the convenience of not having to ladle out two heaping teaspoons for each cup of presweetened cocoa, about 16 cents.

"The best buys of all are the weekly specials," says Jennifer Cross in her book, "The Supermarket Trap" (Indiana University Press, $5.95).

"You can save an average of 20 per cent on the special sales of basic items ranging from detergents to cooked crabs," she says.

"Depending on the time and gas you're prepared to spend, there are two ways to get mileage. One is to stick to the store of your choice and buy all their specials. They are rotated every few weeks and over time you'll realize the full savings.

"The second is to do what the trade calls "cherry picking," selecting specials from two or more stores each week via the ads and keeping a weather eye open in the area for other good buys.

"More especially, do not over-buy specials merely for the saving unless you're prepared to increase closet space, or incorporate these bargains into your menus. At the checkout see that the clerk rings up the sale price rather than the regular price."

"Out of the laboratories of America's big food corporations have come many exciting new ways to throw your money away," says Margolius, who, in 1940 became one of the first consumer news reporters.

He's right, generally speaking. For the new technological advances known as "built in services" in processed foods, such as freeze drying, improved warehousing, and controlled atmosphere storage of fruits, are considered cost-added features.

But this is not true in all ases.

In some instances processed food costs less than unprocessed, for example, frozen orange juice, canned or frozen peas, and frozen lima beans.

The consumer saves about 40 per cent of the cost of the fresh item as a result of the processing. Reasons are: lower transportation costs because of elimination of inedible waste and bulk and lower retail margin due to perishability and storage costs of the fresh product.

After you've saved all those pennies by avoiding the processed food packages, you're ready to explore stores' own brands.

Margolius says, "Stores' own brands of packaged and canned foods cost 10 to 22 per cent less than nationally advertised brands."

"Savings on household cleaners and paper products are even larger, averaging 33 to 25 per cent on some widely used products.

"The largest price differences in individual items were 41 per cent on margarine, 36 per cent on frozen orange juice concentrate, 22 per cent on white bread, 48 per cent on puffed rice, 26 per cent on cooked salami, 24 per cent on salad dressing, and 22 per cent on non-fat dry milk.

"In paper and cleaning products the largest differences were on tissues, 39 per cent; dishwashing detergents, 36 per cent; liquid floor wax, 49 per cent, and plastic wrap, 39 per cent.

"One supermarket's own brand bread may be as little as 20 cents a pound loaf; another's 27.

Most shoppers know that from Wednesday or Thursday to Saturday is the best shopping time for specials. The alert consumer also knows unless you get there before 4 p.m. chances are the store will have run out of the special.

Buying by grade is another one of the useful techniques you can employ to keep your bills down. But unfortunately, indicating the grade on the package is voluntary, not mandatory.

Many retailers require that wholesalers sell to them on a basis of government grades but some stores don't in turn show the government grade to the customer.

"If grading were required by law right down to the retail counter, your buying problems would be simplified," said Margolius.

"In the case of broilers, turkeys, and other poultry, manufacturers and retailers do state the grade in ads and labels. Since many processors now grade label broilers, you are able to buy broilers marked U.S. Grade A, whether they are 29 or 49 cents a pound.

"In our surveys we also found turkeys priced all the way from 49 to 79 cents a pound with the same U.S. Grade A label. So we were sure, and visual inspection confirmed, that the turkeys at the lower price met the specifications for high quality; broad breasted with full flesh, good appearance and confirmation, free from defects such as cuts and bruises.

"Understand first of all," Margolius said, "that the grade has nothing to do with food value. All grades, whether "Choice" or "Good" beef, Grade A or Grade B eggs, "Fancy" or "No. 1" apples, have the same food value.

You should also compare the prices of larger packages and cans. On the average you save 18 per cent by buying the large or medium size of a food product instead of the small, and 10 per cent more by buying the extra large, according to Mr. Margolius.

These 10-pack assortments have a true cost of approximately 80 cents a pound, compared with about 40 cents a pound for a standard dry cereal such as corn flakes in an 8 ounce box.

Stores are very competitive on the 303 sizes (16 ounces) and cut prices on them., but they take a higher margin on the smaller sizes such as the 8 ounce cans.

These are two money saving points concerning sizes. One is that even for small families, the small sizes usually do not pay. You could "waste" up to a third of some of the larger sizes and still save over the extra-high prices of the small containers.

The real money saving trick, as most women who cook understand, is to buy the larger sizes and then plan meals to use the extra quantity in different ways.

But consumers are quick to point out that there are so many sizes and varieties and brand names that the matter of choice is not only complicated but also confusing.

In his survey, Margolius found in just one market, 151 different types, brands, and sizes of cereals; 63 different brands, sizes and types of tuna and other canned fish, and 27 brands and sizes of toothpaste.

This particular situation appears to be improved somewhat in the new "warehouse" supermarkets that have been opened in several states.

In these stores you buy merchandise right out of cartons on the floor, and the supermarket doesn't have the expense of stacking all the items.

You do your own bagging, too, and there are fewer brands and sizes, which reduces the warehouse inventory expenses and increases volume.

Asked about the prospects for a decline in current high food prices, Margolius said the prospects don't look too good.

"Meat prices will drop slightly in April; they usually do in the spring," he said. "But food prices always go up in the summer, and I don't think this summer will be any exkption.

"The basic reason why food prices are so high is this business of overprocessing and the big companies' drive for new growth," he said.

"General Foods, Campbell's and the others have got to show 10 per cent growth every year to please Wall Street, and, to achieve this, they must come out with all kinds of new and quasi-new products every year."

SOME MARKET RULES

Shop at the market with the best meat buys and specials.

Buy the supermarket's own labels or private brands.

Beware of convenience foods.

Read labels for contents, weight, and grade.

Shop only once a week, between Wednesday and Saturday.

Buy Grade A for the table and Grade B for the pot.

Make and use a shopping list and comparison price list.

Don't be gullible about advertising and merchandising — buy only what you need.

Buy standard foods rather than higher cost versions, i.e., white, rye, or wheat breads rather than rolls or special shaped loaves.

Buy medium size fruit and vegetables rather than the specially selected perfect looking large ones.

DRAMA REVIEW

Marin Civic Ballet's Best-Ever Performance

By MARIE RAMEAU

The Marin Civic Ballet once more presented its annual spring concert, Saturday evening and last night at the College of Marin Fine Arts Theater. This was not just another ballet concert, but the troupe's finest, most professional performance I can recall.

Having seen the company in several environments, including the new Marin Veterans Memorial Building at the Civic Center, I was convinced Saturday night that the college's theater displays them at their best. Equipped with excellent lighting and a stage which does not devour a small group,it provides the overall theatricality without which ballet just isn't ballet.

Although the program consisted mainly of reruns from past seasons, they were this time meticulously rehearsed. The dancers were poised, polished and technically flawless; also, that nervousness which I've prevously noticed in their performances had vanished.

One of my favorite ballets, Ron Guidi's "Trois Gymnopedies," to music of Erik Satie, opened the program. In this triptych, all three interludes — in a very gymnastic style — were menthol-cool and controlled, with Cynthia Harvey, Kathi McCormick and Charles Perrier showing strong but subtle musicality.

"Q.E.D. — A Geometric Study," by Perrier, focused on such geometric concepts as lines, triangles and circles, which were well-integrated in the busy choreography.

March Wilde's "Miss Margaret — 1901-1972" sensitively portrayed an old woman's memories of her youthful love in a poignant nostalgia trip set in an old-fashioned park. Miss Margaret 1972 was mimed by Martha Fietz, while Jane Thelen danced the lyrical role of her young alter ego.

Again, I say Norbert Vesak's "The Gift To Be Simple," based on American Quaker themes, was just too long. The high quality of this work oozed out of its every pore, and Vesak expertly utilized many modern dance idioms within a simple framework of ballet steps danced to traditional Quaker songs. But to repeat my previous observation: "less is more."

As a gratifying contrast came the "Rachmaninoff Pas de Deux," set by Vesak to Rachmaninoff's "Paganini Variations," and danced by Jane Thelen and David White. The only new ballet on the program, it was truly the high point of the evening. One-hundred per cent professional in execution, it also was a first-rate piece of choreography that would hold its own in the repertoire of any major company.

White is beginning to dance with bravura and a dynamic style which many mature dancers lack. Miss Thelen soon will be a brilliant dancer, and I wondered why she hasn't already moved on to a professional company. Both showed an astonishing sense of timing in their one-armed overhead lifts, a la Bolshoi — breathtaking!

After that, I would have needed nothing else, but director Leona Norman's "Golden Moments of Ballet," caricaturing the now-obsolete ballet conventions of the first quarter of this century, wrapped up the evening with rollicking fanfare.

I noticed that Charles Perrier (the poet) is developing into an exellent stylist, revealing a sense of melancholy humor all his own. The music by the Guckenheimer Sour Kraut Band sounded appropriately like the Salvation Army, blasting away at a Brahms Hungarian Rhapsody while a moth (tiny Jody Marvin) was remorselessly consumed by a fierce flame (Martha Fiet).

Too bad the company hasn't a longer season, which would certainly draw audiences from throughout the Bay Area. These dancers are beginning to acquire the sophistication so essential to performing in contemporary companies, and Saturday they came on very strong indeed. This bears watching.

Sonoma State Workshop Has Operatic Miracles

By ROBERT M. NESS

Operatic miracles occurred at Friday night's double bill performance by the Sonoma State College Opera Workshop. Under the direction of Dr. Peggy Donovan-Jeffry, this astounding group presented two complete operas to a capacity audience of about 250 at the college's Ives Hall of Music.

Telemann's "Pimpinone", a comic intermezzo in three parts originally intended to be performed between the acts of a large serious opera, was followed by Rossini's "The Occasion Makes the Thief," a situation comic opera written while the author was in his teens.

There are not superlatives enough to describe Richard Goodman's portrayal of the rich and foolish old Pimpinone — who is accosted and virtually enslaved by Vespetta, a young and wily servant girl.

Goodman's performance revealed a bottomless reservoir of humorous devices. Whether in his vocal antics or in his intensely funny stage movements, he kept the audience in a constant state of laughter. His aria in the last scene imitating two women gossiping about their husbands was a classic.

Tommi Sue Anderson's Vespetta complemented Goodman perfectly. With shameless contempt, she shrewdly applied all her feminine charms until she ultimately enslaved the hapless old bachelor.

An ideal musical balance was achieved between these two singers and the small string ensemble directed by David Sloss from the harpsichord.

Colorful costumes, extravagant stage sets, and a thirty-piece orchestra made the Rossini an elaborate full scale production.

It is a short comic work in two scenes involving complex switch arounds that produce surprising results. Last night's performance was a masterpiece of comic staging and beautiful ensemble singing.

Richard Goodman, now a roguish nobleman, joined William Pisenti, Steve Covington, Rosemary Bock, Robert Cullinen, Carol Burleson, Sharon Cole and George Sanchez in this fast-moving farce.

Final performance was yesterday.

Resignation Due Action By Board

The Marin County Board of Education, meeting tomorrow at 8 p.m., will consider the resignation of board member James A. Swenson and establish procedures for his replacement.

Swenson, who has missed many board meetings lately, according to Asst. Supt. Robert E. Spain, gave increasing business pressure as his reason for resigning.

MUSIC REVIEW

Delicate, Fragile Music From East

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

A small but appreciative audience in Dominican College's Angelico Hall was transported last night into a strange world of music that probably sounded out of tune to Western ears, but was not, according to its own scales and systems of tuning.

The concert of music from the Far East and Southeast Asia was presented by students, both Caucasian and members of other ethnic groups, from the University of California's Institute of Ethnomusicology, at Los Angeles.

Though programs were few and numbers not followed as listed, the deficiency was not too serious because Dr. David Morton, acting director of the institute, described very well the instruments, the exotic music and particular numbers.

The dominant impression made by the program — which was instrumental and vocal and even included two dances — was that the music is delicate and fragile by our standards even when expressing anger or describing battle. In addition to being composed in different scales and systems of tuning than those in Western music, it is linear, or built around a single melody, rather than being harmonic, with interest added in a great deal of ornamentation.

Music of Thailand received most emphasis in three groups of compositions performed by a Mahori ensemble consisting of a floor zither, two two-stringed, bowed fiddles, a xylophone, a set of gong kettles, finger cymbals and drums. Closely related to Chinese music, the first group of selections used a basic five-pitch system, and the last group a seven-pitch system.

Very interesting were two groups of programmatic solos played by Don Addison, an advanced graduate student, on the Chinese cheng, a table zither with metal strings over a long, narrow soundbox.

I especially enjoyed the two groups of selections by the Balinese lender wojang quartet which consisted of four metallophones (something like vibraphones) played with mallets. The bell-like sound had a shimmering quality due to overtones resulting from a slight difference in pitch between paired instruments.

Javanese music was unique because of inclusion of a vocal part sung by one of two musicians playing floor zithers, while a third played a vertical wooden flute. The music had a plaintive, haunting quality one would long remember.

Probably most popular with the audience because of visual appeal and glittering costumes were two solo Balinese dances done to taped music by a young couple from Bali. Her dance was a graceful abstract type performed to a work called "Bumblebees," and his was a dynamic one performed wearing a mask.

All of those participating were expert, as far as someone unfamiliar with the idioms could tell, and all music was played from memory.

'Pinocchio' Due Friday In Marin

"The Wonderful Adventure of Pinocchio" will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Marin Veteran's Memorial Auditorium at the Civic Center.

The cast of 87 presented the play for 4,000 school children in the Youth In Arts Series and on Feb. 27 with a public matinee.

Marion Hayes Cain of San Anselmo has produced and directed the play. The music is presented by the Winifred Baker's Children's Chorus.

The 36-foot projections that provide the setting for the 15 scenes were designed by Alonso Gonzales of the Fine Arts Department of the College of Marin.

Tickets may be obtained at the theater box office or at Macy's ticket office in San Rafael.

Art Exhibit

An exhibition of works by the North Bay Artists will be held from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. April 30 at the Sandcastle Gallery in Point Reyes Station. Approximately 20 members of the group will display a wide assortment of paintings, sculpture, stitchery, weaving and macrame.

Hub Council To Seat Newcomers Tomorrow Night

Kenneth L. Anderson and Martin G. Blinder will be sowrn in as councilmen when the San Anselmo City Council meets tomorrow at 8 p.m. in city hall.

The two topped all vote-getters in last week's election to four-year terms.

Two other incumbents — City Treasurer William P. Franchini and City Clerk Helen J. Ragan — were reelected and also will be sworn in.

A new mayor and vice mayor are expected to be chosen during the meeting, Mrs. Ragan said.

It was determined Thursday, two days following the election, that Blinder would be the second councilman. An 18-vote error by a precinct worker or inspector originally had given James F. Reed the seat by a margin of six votes.

COMMUNE FOR MIDDLE CLASS

Open End: Helping Many Find Mutual Support

By JEFF GREER

"Open End is a replacement for the plastic community — a cross between a cocktail party and a commune" for middle-aged, middle class persons dissatisfied with their life style in suburbia.

That's the way Frank Potter, founder of the 300-member Open End "community" described the experiment in personal growth and humanistic psychology.

Sprawled on a couch in the casually decorated living room of the Open End headquarters in San Anselmo, Potter recounted how the organization grew from ideas spawned by Esalen Institute and his own personal experiences as a businessman turned clergyman who then grew dissatisfied with life as a priest.

Open End after three years of operation has spawned a sort of third-generation organization aimed at helping residents of other communities form their own versions of Open End. It's called Well Being, and is aimed at helping leaders of personal improvement groups trade ideas and experiences.

Open End is no Utopian community whose members have run away from home, family and job to sit at the feet of some guru — nor is it a "free university" such as the neighboring Family Mix experiment in San Anselmo.

Instead, Potter explained, Open End is a chance for persons to find "mutual support" and emotional and intellectual growth as well as intimate contacts with an "extended family" while still living as a member of suburbia, continuing their jobs and home roles.

"The kind of person likely to seek out Open End is usually not satisfied with the status quo . . . that job, that marriage that were so all-important 20 years ago may not look so good now," Potter said. "Some come to us after having been shaken up by new ideas their kids presented them with."

Open End provides activities for members' children, but seems to have limited appeal to the young hippie, Potter said.

At Monday evening orientation sessions in the headquarters, the grey-painted Victorian gingerbread Greening Mansion at 101 Ross Avenue, Potter and other Open End members tell newcomers about the many facets of the nonresidential community.

The program includes 25 to 30 small weekly groups touching on such varied interests as encounter sessions, massage, yoga, women's lib and many others.

"A member may say 'Gee, I'd like to get a group going in organic bread baking' and sure-enough, somewhere among the members there are enough people to get a little group going for however long it wants," Potter explained.

Larger community gatherings include picnics, camping trips and "just plain celebrations."

An important part of the "self-realization process" with Open End is forming the habit of keeping an intensely introspective personal journal.

Stresses of self discovery sometimes sunder couples completely, but also sometimes heal deeply split marriages, he said.

FRANK POTTER
Ex-priest founds community

"There is sexual experimentation among some of the members," Potter bluntly admitted, "but my wife Barbara and I are conservative and don't get involved."

The relaxed attitude didn't come entirely easily, the ex-pastor admitted. "When we first organized there was a little embarassment in how to treat "unmarried couples", but the informal arrangements seem easily accepted within the community now, Potter said.

Each member pays $12 a month — providing a more solid financial base than most experimental communities active in the Bay Area. "We have more single persons than couples married or living together," Potter explained.

Periodic crises arise because some members seem to seek a leader or "father image" to run the organization and provide outside answers to their problems — a concept Potter said he resists. He sees his role as coordinator, not leader or guru.

Nonetheless, Potter finds in Open End some of the roles of a more conventional church minister. The nearby San Francisco Theological Seminary and other church organizations are also coming to recognize such communities as "an alternate form of ministry," Potter said.

Potter himself graduated from Harvard University 25 years ago and toiled a decade in commerce until "the suburban life . . . began to get under my skin."

He attended theological school and became an Episcopalian priest and pastor in several parishes before becoming apalled by "Mickey Mouse activities" churches were offering their members.

Coming to the Bay Area, Potter applied for a post with the Episcopalian Church in Sausalito, which he felt was a progressive church likely to encourage new ideas. He was momentarily downcast when he didn't get the job, but then he and his wife decided to pioneer a human potential community in Marin. Open End was the result.

"We're in a pluralistic place where there's no one, great, overarching myth that will lead America in the 1970s," Potter said. But after three years' experience with Open End, "I think we've stumbled onto something that's got real power" in helping persons find themselves in the Age of Aquarius.

Seminar Debates Proposition 9

By JAY GOODWIN

The merits of Proposition 9 on the June ballot — the so-called Clean Environment Act — were debated and discussed at a lively seminar Saturday at the College of Marin.

Three advocates of the initiative urged the audience to pass the restrictive measure, over the opposition of oil companies, public utilities and labor unions, because the time for ecological "foot-dragging" had passed.

In turn, the three opponents of Proposition 9 warned the group that the "poorly written" initiative took an unsophisticated "meat axe" approach to cleaning up the environment.

Speaking on behalf of Proposition 9 were Ed Koupal, director of the People's Lobby and a leader in the unsuccessful effort to recall Governor Ronald Reagan; David Pesonon, attorney for the Sierra Club; and J. B. Nielands, Professor of Biochemistry at University of California, Berkeley.

Opposing the measure on the panel were Alexander Grendon, consultant in biophysics at the Donner Laboratory, University of California, Berkeley; Robert E. Burt, environmental quality director for the California Manufacturers Association, and Richard G. Gable, executive secretary of the Associated Coin-Op Dry Cleaners of Northern California.

Koupal insisted that the "big corporations" be stopped before they make the environment in California intolerable. While maintaining that his group is not "antipower", Koupal called for a five-year moratorium on construction or manufacturing of atomic power plants. "We want to give these giant corporations time to study alternative sources for the power that we'll need in this state," he said.

Several possible sources of power — including geo-thermal, solar and nuclear fussion — were brought up for consideration by members of the audience.

Pesonon claimed that the supply of natural gas in the world was running out. Taking a philosophic approach, he suggested, "Nature is, after all, the last boss. We can't go out and dance for more gas, like they used to dance for rain. When it's gone, it's gone."

Grendon said that the authors of the measure had foolishly incorporated technical specifications and restrictions in the text of the initiative.

He said that specific details are generally left out of statue laws and implemented by more flexible, administrative bodies.

Koupal responded that the technical limitations on pollution levels were intentionally included. Only in this way, he said, could Californians be assured that the measure would not be watered-down after enactment.

Grendon said his greatest objection was the abrupt changes that the initiative would require. Such wide-ranging measures, he said, need more time to be implemented.

"If you vote for this initiative, you vote for it in a block. You can't say which sections you want and which sections you don't want. If you vote for it, you get all the obnoxious sections that you don't want."

The last section of the initiative was particularly attacked. It states that the Legislature may only amend the initiative if the amendments strenghtens the measure's protection of the environment.

Such a restriction on the prerogatives of the Legislature was challenged by the opponents of the proposition.

Pesonon agreed that of all the contested sections, the last one was most likely to be unconstitutional.

"Changing the initiative after it has passed is no disaster. It can be done in one ruling by the court," he added.

The wide-ranging question-and-answer period that followed the formal presentation included inquiries on geo-thermal energy, mass transit, pesticides and insurance policies for atomic plants.

Larkspur Robbery Reported

A 21-year-old Larkspur man was to appear in Marin Municipal Court today after being arrested Saturday on suspicion of armed robbery.

Richard Dean Guendner, of 424 William Avenue, was arrested Saturday, and spent the weekend in Marin County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bail, set by Municipal Judge Peter Allen Smith.

Larkspur police said Guendner and two others were hitchhiking across the street from the Larkspur police station, at 402 Magnolia Avenue, when they were picked up by Thomas S. Robertson of Tiburon.

Robertson told police he drove the trio up Madrone Avenue, near Dolliver Park where Guendner, who was sitting in the front seat, grabbed Robertson by the neck and threatened him with a knife. Robertson said Guendner told him to drive to the end of Baltimore canyon, where Guendner took $75 cash from him.

Robertson said he escaped when he hit a rock while turning his car around. After getting out to examine the damage he fled a short distance.

The three men then got out of the car and ran away, he said. Guendner was identified through police photographs, and picked up the same night.

Wheels Taken

Four tires and wheels were stolen Saturday from a pick-up truck owned by the Petaluma School District, police reported.

Dropped ID Leads To Two Arrests

Two San Rafael brothers were arrested last night on suspicion of burglary after a day of activities which began at a San Rafael market, moved on to Ross and then Fairfax and finally back to San Rafael again.

Booked into Marin County Jail were Ricci Lamar Vigno, 21, and John Gregory Vigno, 20, both of 720 B Street.

Police said that the elder brother first came to their attention at about 1:30 p.m. when he was stopped as a suspected shoplifter at a Mayfair Market. After producing his driver's license from his wallet, the youth was released when store employees decided not to press charges.

Then about 4:30 p.m., a Ross woman, Dorothy Vanderhoof returned to her home on Upper Road to find that a rear window had been entered and that she was missing stereo and tape equipment, a color television set and three valuable Oriental rugs.

Near the entry window, she and a Ross policeman found a wallet containing Ricci Vigno's driver's license and other identification.

In the meantime, a Fairfax man, Anthony H. Rendina of 16 Iron Springs Road, had gone to police to describe a burglary at his house. He told police that at about 3:15 p.m., he had heard his dogs barking and in a downstairs bedroom, he found the Vigno brothers, whom he knew, removing a television set.

He told police he tried to talk the brothers out of taking the television, but that the younger brother kicked him in the face. Both fled, he said, leaving the set behind.

Fairfax police put out a bulletin for the brothers, and the younger one was arrested when he went to the San Rafael police station to pick up his brother's wallet.

The older brother was arrested later in a San Rafael service station.

Both were booked on suspicion of conspiracy and burglary and held for appearances in municipal court today. Additional booking charges of possessing marijuana and having a prohibited weapon were added for John, when police said he gave them a pot cigarette and they found a length of pipe in his car.

Youth Booked In Burglary

A 17-year old San Rafael youth has been arrested on suspicion of burglary, disturbing the peace and resisting arrest after his knife was found in the pried-open storage room of a San Rafael apartment building.

Police said the break-in occurred at 1:30 a.m. Saturday at 55 Fairfax Street. Although no property was taken, police found the juvenile nearby after receiving a report of a burglary.

The 17-year-old and a 16-year old companion were taken to juvenile hall, according to police.

Four Arrested After Can Hits Highway

A beer can thrown from the window of a moving car on Highway 101 yesterday led to the arrest of four young men on suspicion of kidnapping and attempted rape.

According to Marin County sheriff's deputies, a 20-year-old San Francisco woman threw the can out about 3 a.m. and a nearby California highway patrolman saw it and stopped the car. The woman began to yell that she was being kidnapped, and the officer called for assistance and arrested the four men.

Booked into Marin County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bond were James Tsopanakis and Eugenio Garza, both 20 and residents of San Francisco, Eric Carlisle, 21 of Menlo Park, and Gerry Estrada, 20, of San Jose.

The car was stopped near the Corte Madera offramp on Highway 101, and officers said the woman told them she had been abducted in San Francisco after attending a dance.

The four were held to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Vote Count Planned For San Anselmo

The San Anselmo City Council will canvass the returns from last week's municipal election and elect a mayor and vice-mayor at its meeting tomorrow night.

The council will also hear appeals on two previously denied variance requests.

The construction permit requirements proposed by the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District will be reviewed by the council. The permit requirements, if adopted, would prohibit construction in the Bay Area that would adversely affect the quality of air.

The council will also consider nominations for "Outstanding Senior Citizen of the Year."

A claim against the city for $100,000 filed by Homer Gray, 442 West Live Oak Drive, Mill Valley, will be revied by the council. Gray claimed his rights were violated when he was arrested by San Anselmo police for allegedly using obscene language while seeking police assistance.

Ross Council To Canvass Votes

The Ross Town Council, meeting tomorrow at 8 p.m., will canvass ballots from last Tuesday's election and swear in council incumbents John C. Chase, Jewell I. Osterloh and Alan P. Maginis.

The council will also receive fire and street budgets for the coming year.

Bennett's License Is Reinstated

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The state Department of Motor Vehicles has ended its suspension of the drivers license of William M. Bennett of Kentfield, state Board of Equalization member.

R. Keith Hall, director of the drivers license division said yesterday that the suspension was set aside on Wednesday after a hearing. The order reinstating Bennett's license was signed by James W. Chapman, deputy director of the department, for Director Robert C. Cozens, Ball said.

Bennett's license originally was routinely suspended last May when he refused to take a sobriety test after being arrested by Sausalito police on a drunken driving charge. After Marin Municipal Court Judge Robert A. Smallman dismissed the Sausalito charge, Bennett appealed the license suspension, resulting in this week's order.

Larkspur police had sought to prosecute Bennett in July for driving without a valid license, but Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales said no prosecution would be possible unless the Department of Motor Vehicles ruled against Bennett's appeal.

Boy Found Dead In Marin Creek

After a five-hour search, the body of a young boy was found yesterday floating in a creek 100 yards from his home in Marshall.

Gavin B. Robertson — who was 35 months old — was reported missing shortly after 10 a.m.

His parents, Colin H. and Maggie Robertson, notified the Marin County Sheriff's Department and called the Synanon Foundation for assistance in the search.

At 3:25 p.m., one of the six Synanon members involved in the search discovered the body face down in about four feet of water.

Driver Injured In Two-Car Crash

John Charles Batts, 20, of 137 Canal Street, Apt. 2, San Rafael, was treated at Marin General Hospital for multiple scrapes and bruises received in an accident at 5:18 p.m. yesterday, according to hospital reports.

Batts's car, southbound on Grand Avenue, collided with one driving north on Francisco Boulevard by Dwight Gilbert Frost, 25, of Hayward. Frost was to see his own doctor for pain in his left side, police reported.

Never Box Yourself In When Looking For Contract Trick

When you have the chance to throw off a loser, don't pick the discard nearest your thumb. Try to leave yourself with more than one sound play for your contract. Avoid the discard that puts you in a straitjacket.

POSTPONES VICTORY

Ordinarily, a trump is a losing and lily-livered lead against a slam. In this case West's trump lead postponed South's eventual victory.

South drew two rounds of trumps, ending in the dummy, and then led the queen of spades for a finesse. West won with the king of spades and got out safely by returning a spade.

Now South could get an eventual discard on one of dummy's spades. The problem was whether to discard a diamond or a club on that spade.

THROWS DIAMOND

South wisely decided to throw a diamond. He took the ace of spades, cashed the ace and king of diamonds, and then discarded his last diamond on dummy's third spade.

This put him in position to ruff a third round of diamonds. When the queen of diamonds fell on this trick South had no further problem. He could reach dummy with a trump in order to discard his queen of clubs on the jack of diamonds.

If the queen of diamonds had failed to drop, South still had a play for his contract. He could go to dummy with a trump in order to try the club finesse.

PLAY FOR TRICK

To put it another way, the diamond discard on dummy's spade left South with a play for his 12th trick first in diamonds and then in clubs. If South had thrown the queen of clubs on dummy's spade, he would have been dependent solely on the diamonds for his 12th trick.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner bids one spade, and the next player passes.

♠ - Q J 10
♥ - A J 5 4
♦ - K J 9 4
♣ - 9 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two diamonds. You cannot jump to three spades with only three-card support. You cannot jump to two notrump with the clubs wide open. You should not bid two hearts with only a four-card suit. The response of two diamonds, by the process of elimination, is the best bid.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Usually Varicose Veins Look A Lot Worse Than They Feel

A Colorado woman writes: "Do varicose veins hurt? My leg was injured several weeks ago and there is constant pain in a vein below my left knee. The vein was not noticeable before the accident, bot both my husband and I can see it now."

As a rule, varicose veins are more unsightly than painful. Large tortuous vessels ache occasionally, especially after standing for a long time, but the pain disappears after resting. Unless visibly inflamed, varicose veins do not produce pain day and night. The main symptoms are tingling, aching and possibly itching of the skin about the ankles.

IN THE ABSENCE of discomfort, the involved leg is apt to feel heavy after standing for a short time. Many people with obvious varicosities blame all limb discomfort on their disturbed circulations. Some even attribute the pain from flat feet and arthritis of the ankle to enlarged veins.

These veins are blamed on the tiredness and fullness from wearing high heels during an all-day shopping spree. One man blamed his varicosities for alcoholic neuritis. An anemic wman thought her veins were responsible for her tired legs.

Several years ago a stout woman was sent to our clinic because of swollen legs. She had a few enlarged veins, but her puffy ankles were due to dropsy. Her heart was enlarged and the beat was very irregular.

THIS IS mentioned because visible veins in the leg are not necessarily varicosities, nor do they cause trouble. But anyone with bona fide varicose veins should have a complete examination. Now the then a leg vein dilates because a tumor in the pelvis or groin is blocking the flow of blood. The vessel enlarges in much the same way as does a river blocked by a dam.

Injury is one of many causes of this defect, but as a rule, the varicosities are preceded by an inflammation of the vein (phlebitis). This may have happened to our Colorado housewife, but we are not sure she has a varicose vein.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

WILD GAME

Mrs. F. T. writes: My husband is an ardent hunter and keeps our freezer supplied with deer, elk, pheasant, and other forms of wild life. We eat this day after day. Is our family getting enough protein and other needed food elements provided by meat?

REPLY

Yes. All wild game is high in protein. To break the monotony, why not induce your Daniel Boone to "bag" a cow, pig or chicken?

INFECTED PANCREAS

E. S. writes: How does the pancreas become infected?

REPLY

Bacteria usually enter thru the tube that connects the pancreas with the intestine. In some instances, the germs spread thru the blood.

BLOOD, RACE, AND PERSONALITY

H.D. writes: Will a transfusion change a person's race or character?

REPLY

No. There is nothing in blood that is capable of changing the race or personality.

COLD WEATHER WELTS

H. A. writes: When I go out in the cold, large, red welts (that itch like mad) appear on my legs. Is there any way to prevent this annoyance?

REPLY

Blotches may represent old-fashioned chilblains which we now call pernio. The remedy is to keep the parts warm. On the other hand, if these red, itchy lesions are hives, you may be allergic to cold! Tests are available to prove this. Remedies include adequate protection of the skin, antihistaminic pills, and desensitization against the cold.

MINIMAL SUSTENANCE

M.M. writes: What is the minimum anount of food a man can eat and maintain health?

REPLY

I know of no statistics along this line. Furthermore, minimal requirements vary with age, sex, activity, climate, height, and body build.

INFECTED APPENDIX

G.G. writes: What causes an appendix to become gangrenous?

REPLY

Gangrene is death of tissue due to loss of blood supply. This occurs when the appendix becomes so infected its blood supply is cut off.

KNOW THE LAW

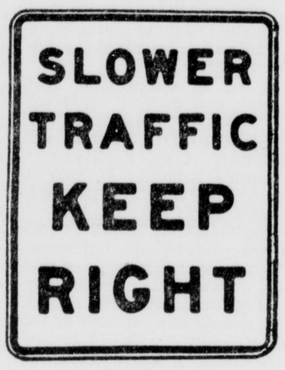
A Warning To Pay Attention



Generally this column is devoted to informing the motoring public of California Vehicle Code laws that govern use of public highways throughout the state. However, the Marin-Golden Gate Bridge area of the California Highway Patrol would like to take this opportunity to discuss another facet of driving that isn't covered in the code but in the final analysis is a major contributing factor in almost every traffic accident: INATTENTION TO DRIVING.

Too often, traffic accidents occur and when we retrace the actions of the drivers involved, we find that the real cause of the mishap was something he did or didn't do long before the accident happened.

Inattention to driving includes not getting enough rest before starting a long trip, failing to check for defective tires, not checking the condition of the brakes, or not attempting to map out a tentative travel route to reduce the chance of making errors when looking for specific locations.

However, once you are behind the wheel and on your way, another problem begins. You must keep your mind on driving and every time you allow it to wander to thoughts of other things, you are a potential traffic accident. Something as small as lighting a cigarette or changing the radio station will divert attention just enough that if a critical situation arises, you may not be able to react with the same speed and reliability than if you had your total attention devoted to the task at hand — driving.

Unfortunately, because of the tremendous increase in the number of motor vehicles on highways today, driving — whether for pleasure or business — no longer can be taken any way but seriously.

The driver who doesn't prepare himself physically and mentally before he begins driving is literally an accident looking for a place to happen. He must keep himself abreast of what is occurring around him by using his mirrors and never lose sight of where he is in relation to other traffic. The careful driver will do everything in his power to see as far ahead as he can, always on the lookout for trouble.

Just because an individual has been driving for many years doesn't qualifiy him as an expert since he has very possibly developed many bad habits as a part of his normal driving pattern. Unless the individual is so conscientious that he has developed a meaningful way of reviewing his driving habits and making corrections in the areas where he is deficient, his problem will finally catch up with him.

Driving is a full-time job and should be considered such. However, unless the individual's driving attitude is good and he has a healthy respect not only for death and injury but for property damage that a motor vehicle can cause, the traffic accident picture will not change.

Drivers are the major reason traffic accident figures continue to climb. They must be alert, aware, and avoid placing life and limb in unnecessary danger.

Peking Pandas Getting Ready To Meet Public

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The pandas from Peking rested in seclusion at the National Zoo today, recovering from travel fatigue and getting ready to meet the public in a few days.

The bear-like mammals, both 18 months old, were reported "very healthy and doing very well" when they arrived Sunday morning at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington.

Arriving with the animals were Dr. Theodore Reed, director of the zoo; Dr. Ting Hung, director of the Peking Bureau of Public Service, and Yang Hung, a panda keeper who will instruct the National Zoo on how to care for the rare animals.

Service Station Robbed Of $80

A thief got away with about $80 in bills Thursday from a Corte Madera gas station, by simulating a gun in his pocket, police reported today.

Witnesses said the man walked into Don Fugate's Chevron service station at 706 Tamalpais Drive last Thursday night, simulated a gun in his pocket, produced a paper bag and ordered station attendant Mark S. Thomas, 19, to fill it with money. He then escaped eastbound on Tamalpais Drive.

Police said the man got $75 to $80 in small bills.

The thief was described as about 25 years old, white, five feet, 10 inches tall, 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. According to reports he was wearing a tan jacket, brown cap and dark rimmed glasses.

Big Development Will Be Studied

The Corte Madera Planning Commission, meeting today at 8 p.m., will review plans for the first section of the Madera del Presidio development.

Plans for 530 townhouses have sparkd threats by neighbors of a referendum. The site is located next to the H. Koch and Sons luggage plant on Highway 101.

Dominican Priory Housing Project Due New Round

The Marin County Board of Supervisors, meeting at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow at the Civic Center, again will consider the proposed Dominican priory housing project for senior citizens, opposed by neighbors in Kentfield.

The project would include 120 apartments on the priory site at Laurel Grove Avenue and Hanken Drive.

The matter first was before the board last year but encountered strong opposition. The homeowners later took the issue to court after the supervisors authorized construction. Their appeal was upheld by the court based on a loophole in the county code.

The loophole was closed earlier this year by the board and the proposal was resubmitted by the Catholic Social Services Agency, sponsor of the project.

When it went before the county planning commission last month, residents again protested the development as a blight on their neighborhood. They suggested it be located elsewhere. The commission approved it, however, on a 5-1 vote.

The Marin County board of supervisors agenda also includes:

WORKSHOP — A "workshop session" with the City-County Planning Council of Marin to discuss progress on the proposed countywide general plan and the future of the planning council. The meeting is scheduled for 8 a.m. in Room 332 of the Administration Building.

EMPLOYMENT — Consideration of a report from the California Fair Employment Practices Commission critical of the county's hiring practices.

CREEK — A report from the Army Corps of Engineers that continuation of the Corte Madera Creek Project to Lagunitas Bridge — but not beyond — in Ross would not alleviate downstream flooding. The project has been stopped by the town of Ross.

CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS — A review of the County's long-range capital improvement program. The program, divided into road and general improvements, totals $37.5 million for the next six years.

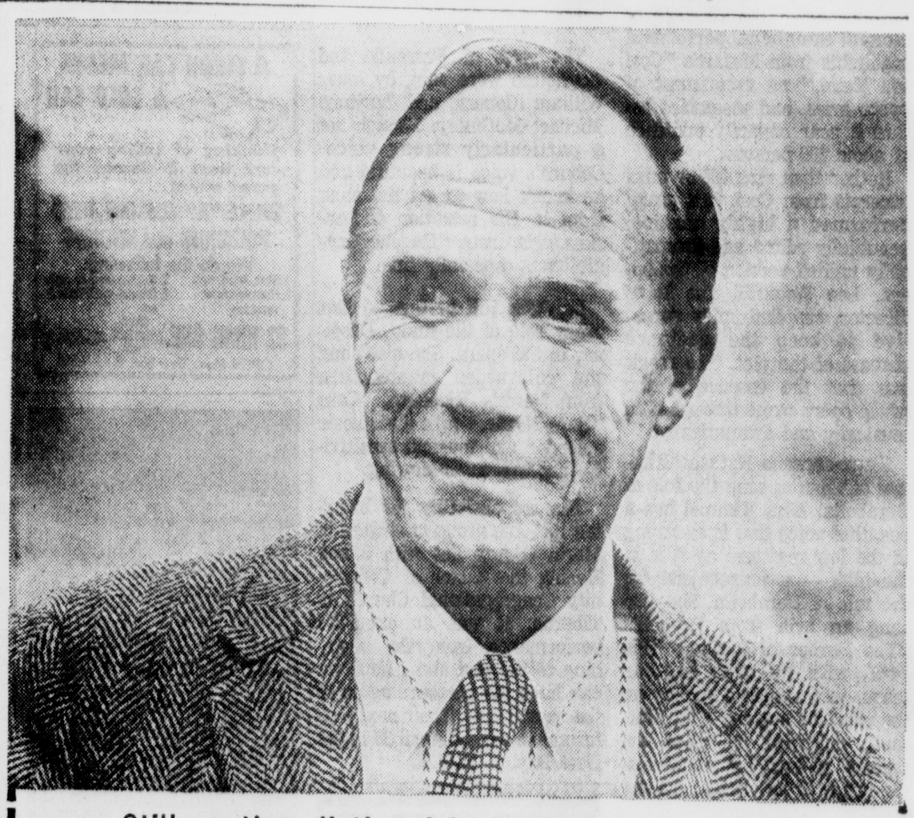
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Frank Sinatra has been named humanitarian of the year by the Friars Club of California and will be honored at a charity dinner Sept. 23.



Still another distinguished columnist in the I-J

Melvin Maddocks

Columnist-at-large, Christian Science Monitor News Service

Melvin Maddocks doesn't fit into a neat category. The Monitor knew him first as a copyboy who wrote editorials, then as a literature loving sportswriter.

Topic hopping began early in life. He studied six years of Latin and four years of Greek, then went on to major in American history and literature at Harvard.

After sports, he did his turn as television columnist, part-time music reviewer, and theater and film critic both in Boston and New York. He served for seven years as the Monitor's book editor.

Today all these roles play their parts within his role as columnist-at-large for whom variety is practically the motif. Nor will his writing fit a category. Read it closely and what looked like a sharp dagger turns out to be no more than a feather — a carefully directed feather. There is a philosophy under the wit.

What distinguishes Maddocks as a columnist? An awareness of the latest trends and fads. A feeling for what the next wave will be. But also a distrust of too sudden enthusiasms. He wants to alert us before we swallow the fly in the ointment.

Mr. Maddocks' column is supplied exclusively to the Independent-Journal by The Christian Science News Service.

HUGE FALLEN TREE CLOSES STREET

A giant oak tree blocks Center Boulevard in San Anselmo after falling about 4:30 p.m. Saturday. Traffic was blocked for several hours while city and utility company crews worked to remove the tree, which formerly stood at 84 Madrone Avenue. No one could explain why the tree collapsed during the sunny spring weather.

MUSIC REVIEW

Extraordinary Evening At Church In Tiburon

Something extraordinary happened last night at the Community Congregational Church in Tiburon — when the Fine Arts Guild, a group of highly proficient amateur and professional singers under the tutelage of Donald Steinberg, performed highlights from Mozart's "Cosi fan Tutte," an assortment of opera arias, and ensembles before a near capacity audience of about 100 persons.

Rather than sing hit or miss excerpts from Cosi, this group performed a highly concise, beautifully edited and dramatically unified version of the opera. Lee Woodriff, the stage director, supplied spicy narrative to keep the audience abreast of the plot. The result was that the essence of the whole opera came through both musically and dramatically.

Mezzo-soprano Natasha Kimmel of Tiburon sang the role of Dorabella. Miss Kimmel has a beautiful voice that is as strong in the low registers as it is in the high — a prerequisite for the role of Dorabella. She also sang an aria from Rossini's "The Barber of Seville." This aria, with its wide angular leaps, was almost a parody on the previous Mozart. Miss Kimmell, delighted by these extremes, utilized her considerable range to its utmost. A most striking performance.

Fiordiligi was sung by Georgia Prugh. Here again is an exceptional vocal talent. She sang with a crystal-clear voice and a great deal of musical insight.

Bass-Baritone Nicholas Massenkoff performed the role of the conniving Don Alfonso. Massenkoff has a rich voice and substantial power to back it up. While his Don Alfonso was witty and convincing, it was during his aria from "Boris Godunov" that the dramatic virility of his talent came across in its fullest.

The roles of Ferrando and Guglielmo were sung by tenor William Coburn and baritone Michael McGinley. Though not a particularly strong voice, Coburn's voice is beautiful and he knows how to get the most from it. His rendition of Lenski's aria from "Eugene Onegin" was especially fine.

La Julia Hill performed that crazy role of the maid, Despina, in the opera. She also sang the coloratura masterpiece from Verdi's Rigoletto, "Caro "Caro Nome," with a virtuosic splendor and musical sensitivity that was mind-blowing.

The responsibility for bringing this fine group of singers to Marin County lies with Frank Evans, the pastor of Community Congregational Church in Tiburon. It was an exquisite performance from the beginning to the end and I hope we can have the pleasure again in the near future. Their next performance will be April 28 in the East Bay. — R.M.N.

Horlen Faces Cal; A's Lose

OAKLAND (UPI) — This could be a big day in Joe Horlen's baseball career.

Remember Jorlen?

He was released by the Chicago White Sox two days after the baseball players started their now famous strike.

Horlen thought he was doing all right in spring training with the White Sox and doesn't care to talk about it. Right now, he's trying to hook on with the Oakland A's.

Today is an off day in the A's schedule, but not really. While the regulars will be engaged in a morning workout at the Oakland Coliseum, the rest of the squad will be in Berkeley playing an exhibition game with the University of California. Horlen, whose 11-year major league career record stands at 113-113, will start against the collegians and will be watched closely by A's manager Dick Williams and pitching coach Bill Posedel. Williams says he has no set schedule in mind for Horlen and would also like to pitch Diego Segui and Jim Ronald against Cal.

Horlen feels he has to show something to justify winning a job with the A's, who currently are carrying only nine pitchers and he's a bit apprehensive.

"I'm always nervous the day before I pitch a game," said the 34-year-old veteran. "That's just my makeup."

Williams, who saw his A's drop a 3-2 decision to the Minnesota Twins Sunday despite a fine eight inning performance by Jim Hunter, said, "Sure this game will count a lot," meaning the one with California.

"But our whole evaluation on Horlen won't be based on this game alone," he added. "We may look a little more."

Williams wouldn't say it in so many words but Horlen's chances of winning a job with the A's depend a lot on Vida Blue. Blue is still holding out and officially is on the restricted list. That's why the A's are.

TIP ON TAP — Milwaukee Buck center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (33) tapped the basketball away from Los Angeles Laker Wilt Chamberlain (13) in the first half of the National Basketball Association Playoff Series' fourth game in Milwaukee yesterday. Laker Jim McMillian watched Abdul-Jabbar gain control. The Bucks evened the series at two games apiece by downing the Lakers, 114-88.

Kingman Unleashes Power In Giant Win

Houston Succumbs To 'Cycle'

HOUSTON (UPI) — Young Dave Kingman, converted into a third baseman by the San Francisco Giants during the winter, opened the season too worried about his fielding to think about hitting.

"I was mainly concerned with my fielding yesterday (Saturday)," the 23-year-old Kingman said. "I got over my first game jitters after I got my first ball. Today I was a little more at ease hitting."

Kingman was so relaxed at the plate that he hit for the cycle, going 4-for-5, driving in six runs and scoring three himself to power the Giants to a 10-6 victory over the Houston Astros. It gave the Giants a quick 2-0 record in the National League West and left Houston 0-2.

"(Bobby) Bonds was on base ahead of me every time," Kingman said. "I was getting good pitches to hit."

In the second inning, after Bonds doubled, Kingman drove him in with a single and eventually scored on a single by winning pitcher Sam McDowell. The former Cleveland southpaw was making his first National League start and picked up the victory although he gave up six hits and six runs in six innings.

Bonds' second double and Kingman's triple ignited a four-run rally in the fourth inning and Kingman doubled in the fifth to score Bonds, who had singled and stole second, to give the Giants a 7-3 lead.

Houston cut the margin to 7-6 on Tommy Helms' three-run homer in the sixth. But Kingman came back with a three-run blast in the seventh to give the Giants their winning margin. After the home run, shortstop Chris Speier mentioned to Kingman that he had hit for the cycle.

"I didn't know what it (cycle) meant," Kingman said. "I'd never done it and I'd never even heard of it."

Kingman, a graduate of Southern California, has played only 1 1-2 seasons of pro ball. He has been a pitcher, outfielder and first baseman, but had never played third until Saturday night's seasons opener.

Manager Charlie Fox decided during the winter to put the 6-foot-6 Kingman at third because of his strong arm and quick reflexes.

"With a bat like that, you had to get it in there somewhere," Fox said. "He doesn't do too bad at third either. I don't know of any man that big playing third before but what difference does size make as long as he does the job?

"He's got good speed," Fox said. "He moved well at first (where the Giants have Willie McCovey) and he's got a good arm. He used to be a pitcher."

PHILS FALL

Hooten Hurls No-Hitter, 4-0

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Maybe baseball doesn't need Vida Blue after all. The game may have found a replacement in 22-year-old Burt Hooton of the Chicago Cubs.

Hooton, a graduate of the University of Texas, has started only three games in the major leagues but already is earning a tag as "unhittable."

The blond, curly-haired youngster from Corpus Christi, Tex., caused a sensation last September when he tossed a three-hitter and a two-hitter in two victories over the New York Mets. In the first of those games he set a club record by striking out 15 batters.

Just to prove that last year's showing was no fluke, Hooton went out Sunday and pitched the first no-hitter by a National League rookie in 60 years by blanking the Philadelphia Phillies, 4-0.

Hooton, the Cubs' No. 1 choice in the secondary phase of the 1971 draft, has achieved his impressive record through use of a trick pitch which he calls a "knuckle curveball." He deveoped the pitch as a youngster in the Pony League in Corpus Christi and it acts much the same way a Sandy Koufax curve used to behave.

"I grab the ball with my first two fingers and let it slide off the tips, giving a fast ball motion by breaking my wrist," says Hooton.

Cubs' catcher Randy Hundley said he called for numerous knuckle curves Sunday "because of the way the wind was blowing and because Philadelphia has so many good fast ball hitters." Hundley said that Hooton's pitch can reach the plate shoulder high, then suddenly dip to the ground in a split second in much the same manner as a Koufax curve used to take off.

The Phillies hit only two balls solidly off Hooton. Denny Doyle hit a line drive in the third inning which shortstop Don Kessinger grabbed with a lunge to his left and Greg Luzinski hit a fly ball deep to centerfield in the seventh inning which Rick Monday caught at the 368-foot mark.

Hooton's no-hitter was the first by a NL rookie since Charles M. "Jeff" Tesreau of the New York Giants tossed one against the Phillies on Sept. 6, 1912. It was the 12th no-hitter pitched by a Cub with the last one turned in by Ken Holtzman, now of the Oakland Athletics, last season.

In other NL games, Pittsburgh blanked New York, 2-0; Montreal edged St. Louis, 3-2; Cincinnati blasted Los Angeles, 10-1; San Francisco downed Houston, 10-6 and Atlanta defeated San Diego, 5-1 in the first game of a doubleheader then lost the nightcap, 3-0.

Steve Blass, a World Series hero last October, allowed only two hits over the first seven innings and Met nemesis Willie Stargell drove in two runs with a pair of singles as the Pirates downed the Mets. Blass retired 14 straight batters from the second through the sixth but needed relief help from Bob Miller to nail down the victory.

The Expos pushed across two runs on only one hit in the ninth inning to score their second straight victory over the Cardinals. A walk, a double by Clyde Mashore, an infield out and an error by relief pitcher Moe Drabowsky enabled the Expos to score twice in the ninth.

Joe Morgan's bases-loaded triple keyed a six-run eighth inning as the Reds buried the Dodgers. Gary Nolan allowed only two hits in seven innings of work to record the victory while Al Downing, a 20-game winner last year, took the loss. Tony Perez had a homer for Cincinnati.

Ralph Garr collected four hits in the opener to support the combined five-hit pitching of Ron Reed and Cecil Upshaw as the Braves defeated the Padres. San Diego, however, took the nightcap behind the six-hit pitching of rookie Bill Greif.

Richest Gal Golf Win For Miss Blalock

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI)—The doctor wasn't sure whether she could play, but wearing a back brace Jane Blalock birdied three of the final nine holes Sunday to collect the richest purse in the history of women's golf by winning the $110,000 Dinah Shore-Colgate Winner's Circle golf championship.

Miss Blalock had a 54-hole score of 213, three under par for the $20,000 first place prize money.

"I didn't know how long the back would hold up," said the smiling Miss Blalock. "The doctor wasn't sure I could play but said if I could get through the first day, I'd probably make it through the week. I have to wear a brace but luckily it doesn't affect my swing."

Tied for second, three strokes behind at 216, even par, were Judy Ranklin, who had led for the first two days, and Carol Mann. Miss Rankin had opening rounds of 69 and 70 but ran into putting problems on the rolling Mission Hills Desert Course when she had four three-putt greens and finished with 72.

Miss Mann got her second place tie on a 16-foot birdie putt on the par five, 570-yard 18th. Each earned $11,500.

Miss Mann gave an unexpected gift of $1,000 to the Desert Hospital and the Palm Springs United Way Fund, which share in the proceeds of the LPGA tournament. "It's worth it," she said.

Joan Prentice was fourth and won $6,500 with a total of 217, one over. In a fifth-place tie were Sandra Haynie and Mickey Wright, each at 218 for $4,450 each.

Gerda Boykin was the only one of the 40 qualified golfers who was able to break par Sunday on the 6,352-yard course. Her 71, however, still left her far down in the pack.

Milwaukee '5' Wallops Lakers

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Suddenly, Jerry West may be having doubts about ending his National Basketball Association career on a championship note.

West, who has been to the finals so many times that he knows what it feels to be caught in a revolving door, still is undecided about continuing in the pros.

Milwaukee may be helping his decision by showing West that going on is futile. The Bucks beat the Los Angeles Lakers, 114-88, Sunday to tie the Western Conference finals at two-games apiece.

The New York Knicks took a 2-0 lead in their Eastern Conference best-of-seven final by nipping the Boston Celtics, 106-105.

Los Angeles was never in the game after the opening tap-off. Milwaukee ran up 11 straight points and stretched the lead to 25-10 with four minutes remaining in the first period.

From the stage, it was icing on Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 25th birthday cake. Kareem scored 31 points and the Lakers wished it were 31 candles for then it would mean Abdul-Jabbar was getting old.

West countered with 24 points for Los Angeles and Jim McMillian added 18. Gail Goodrich, West's high scoring backcourt partner, was way below par in this encounter with 12 points.

The Bucks' 75-43 control of the boards spelled the difference. Abdul-Jabbar had 18 rebounds, Curtis Perry collected 19 and Bob Dandridge nailed 14. Wilt Chamberlain and Happy Hairston grabbed 11 apiece for Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, posting the best won-lost record in the league during the regular season,

Hill Still Loses In 'Confidence Game'

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI)—Dave Hill has no more confidence in his golf game now than he did before he won the Monsanto Open.

"Sure, it's always nice to win," the outspoken Hill said after beating charging young Jerry Heard by a single stroke in the Monsanto.

"But, I don't feel good about the way I played. I'd rather play well so that I could feel I'd have a chance to go on and win elsewhere."

In addition to the $30,000 prize for his first victory in two years, Hill, 34, of Jackson, Mich., also won a last-minute berth in this week's Tournament of Champions at La Costa.

"I don't feel that the erratic way I played here helped me at all to get ready for the Tournament of Champions," Hill said. "None whatsoever."

Despite complaining all week that he was playing terrible, Hill shot 64-68-68 in the first three rounds to post the lowest 54-hole total (200) so far this year on the pro golf tour and although he almost let a five-stroke lead get away Sunday, his even par 71 and 13-under-par 271 were nothing to be ashamed of.

Heard, who started the final round seven strokes back but shot a 6-under-par 65, not only caught Hill but was actually two strokes ahead with three holes to play.

But Hill, who had two double bogeys and two bogeys in a scrambling round, made two of his six birdies on those last three holes and Heard closed with a bogey.

Heard was still four strokes behind midway through the final round but then ran off four straight birdies with putts of 3, 20, 25 and 30 feet to take the lead for the first time in the tournament.

When the final round began, Hill was five strokes ahead of Chris Blocker, six ahead of Bob E. Smith and seven ahead of Heard and Ray Floyd. Blocker wound up in third place with a 69-274 but Bob Goalby came from far back with a 65 of his own to grab fourth place at 275 while Floyd wound up at 69-276.

Smith skied to a 73 Sunday to finish in a four-way tie for sixth place with Lee Elder (70), 1969 Monsanto champ Jim Colber (71) and Dan Sikes (71) at 279.

The $30,000 Hill won gives him $52,998 for the year and vaulted him into 10th place on the money list. Heard, with his $17,100 consolation prize rose to fourth place at $73,656.

George Archer, the No. 2 money winner on this year's tour, had a 69-282 that was worth $2,175 and sent him over the $100,000 mark by $1,700.

This year's leading money winner Jack Nicklaus ($135,473) bypassed the Monsanto Open as did such other big names as Arnold Palmer, Gary Player and Billy Casper. Lee Trevino, the reigning U. S. and British Open champ, showed up but withdrew after Thursday's opening round, complaining he was suffering from "extreme exhaustion" after the pressure of the previous week's Masters.

Brooks A Hit With Oriole Boo Birds

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Many years ago in an era when little kids didn't know baseball players were businessmen a sports writer was shocked to hear Babe Ruth booed during an exhibition game in Atlanta, Ga.

"Tear up the Constitution, burn down Independence Hall," the sports writer wrote, "They booed Babe Ruth today."

A lot of salaries have risen and a lot of pension money has been paid since then but even today in the wake of baseball's first strike it must have been surprising for Brooks Robinson, a virtual folk hero, to hear boos in Baltimore's Memorial Stadium.

Robinson, probably the most popular player in the history of the Baltimore club, heard those boos Sunday when he batted in the first inning of a 3-1 victory over the New York Yankees. Robinson's "sin" was that he is a player representative for the Orioles and, as such, helped to bring about a strike which the fans either disapproved of or didn't understand.

Robinson answered the boos when he singled home a run in the first inning and he singled home another in the fifth. Pat Dobson, 20-8, last season, went 6 1-3 innings for the victory with Doyle Alexander, acquired in the Frank Robinson deal with Los Angeles, pitching the last 2-3 inning of a game halted with the Orioles batting in the seventh.

The Kansas City Royals defeated the Chicago White Sox, 4-3 and 2-1, the Minnesota Twins beat the Oakland Athletics, 3-2, and the Texas Rangers downed the California Angels, 5-1, in other American League games. Milwaukee at Cleveland and Boston at Detroit were rained out.

Novato Defeats Marin Catholic

Good things come to he who waits.

Novato High School's baseball team tested this adage Saturday night and found it valid, as the Hornets waited out Marin Catholic pitching for five consecutive walks in the sixth inning, scored two runs, and won, 4-2.

The victory at Albert Park in San Rafael lifted Novato into a second-place tie in the Marin County Athletic League. The Hornets are 2-1, one game behind Redwood at 3-0. Defending champion Marin Catholic dropped to seventh place at 1-3.

Pitcher Mike Lamb went the distance for Novato, and was in control except for the fourth inning, when Marin Catholic scored twice to go ahead, 2-1. Vince Bormolini singled, Steve Sherry walked and Paul Riccardi singled to load the bases. Then Mickey Hurley and Scott Cozza drew run-scoring walks.

Novato retaliated in the sixth as Stan Conte, Jeff Pond, Jim Askim, Gary Lash and Scott Harrington drew bases on balls.

Marin Catholic coach Gary Hughes and Novato coach Tom Barrie agreed the umpires were "somewhat stingy" in calling strikes, in Barrie's words. "They were consistent, however," said Barrie. "It was the same for both sides. I'm not knocking the umps."

Hub City Tops Joe America In Softball Play

Rusty Poole hit a grand slam home run and Mike Lucas lined four hits in four times at bat as Hub City defeated Joe America, 12-4, in San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department adult softball league play at Albert Park yesterday.

Joe Thompson homered and scored three times as Pizza Palace drubbed Moliday Majic, 12-6. Mike's Bar and Grill rallied for four runs in the seventh inning to tie Marin Supply, 8-8.

In other confrontations, Clobber, Inc., defeated McKee's, 11-5; King's Realty whipped Fleur de France, 11-1, behind Mario Lamonte's pitching; Hobbit's habit pounded Marin District Pacific Gas and Electric, 11-5; and Mudville Nine shaded the Charlie Brown All-Stars, 10-9.

Make-Up Tilts Set In Marin

Assuming the weather will permit it — and that may be a rash assumption — Marin County Athletic League teams will make up several games this week which were rained out last week.

Heading the list will be a baseball clash between Redwood and San Rafael high schools Wednesday at 4 p.m. at Albert Park. Redwood currently is leading the league at 3-0, while San Rafael is tied for second at 2-1.

Chico '9' Sweeps Sonoma

Sonoma State College came close in the opener, but fell apart completely in the nightcap as it lost both ends of a far western conference baseball doubleheader to Chico State, 2-1 and 14-3, in Rohnert Park Saturday.

In the first game, freshman hurler Len Hoffman from Novato went the distance, scattering eight Chico hits. The lone Cossack run was produced in the second inning on successive singles by Dale Lyster, Rick Jones and Rich Garretson. Garretson, a sophomore from Petaluma, and Jones, a sophomore from Rohnert Park, both batted two for three.

The nightcap was a different story as the Wildcats pounded Cossack pitchers Mike Bell and John Anderson for thirteen hits, among them three doubles and a triple. Five of those hits came in the eighth inning when Chico exploded for seven runs to give it an 11 run lead.

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER

Don't put all the weight of the ball on your right hand too soon. If you do, you're liable to shorten your push-away and start your backswing too soon. Let the left hand carry most of the burden as you walk forward, dropping away only when necessary.

Petaluma Wins One, Loses One

Petaluma High School's baseball team showed this weekend that it takes more than good pitching to win a pair of North Bay League games.

On Friday night, Sam Solis pitched a two-hit, 1-0 victory over previously unbeaten Ukiah.

On Saturday, his Petaluma pitching colleague Dan Cader surrendered only six singles, but Santa Rosa tallied four times in the first inning to beat the Trojans, 4-3, at Petaluma's Mc Near Park.

Cader was touched for half of Santa Rosa's hits in the first, as the Panthers converted three singles, two walks and an error into their four runs. After the first Cader settled down, striking out five and walcg one the rest of the game.

Petaluma scored two of its runs in the fourth inning on a Cader single, a walk and a two-run single by Larry Cristani. Cader led the Trojans at the plate with two hits.

ABA PLAYOFFS

Utah Vs. Indiana Tonight

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The defending champion Utah Stars can go two-up on Indiana when they host the Pacers at Salt Lake City tonight in the second game of their Western Division final playoff in the American Basketball Association.

Utah jumped off to the lead in their best-of-seven series by overcoming Indiana, 108-100, in a nationally televised contest Saturday afternoon.

The Eastern Division final between Virginia and New York, meanwhile, will be delayed nine days with the Squires holding a 2-0 advantage. Because of an ice show in the Nets' home court at the Nassau Coliseum, preventing New York from having a home date at night for another week, the third game is being held off until Monday, April 24.

The fourth game also will be played in New York on Wednesday, April 26, with the series shifting back to Norfolk for the fifth game, if necessary, on Saturday afternoon, April 29. This game is listed for national television by CBS.

The Squires gained their 2-0 lead by beating New York, 115-106, Saturday night and the Nets were further hampered by the loss of rookie John Roche, who sprained his left ankle in the first quarter.

Zelmo Beaty, who spent much of last week on crutches with an attack of arthritis, nevertheless proved a hero for Utah in Saturday's opener as he scored 23 points and grabbed 15 rebounds in 37 minutes.

Sharman Pushes Self, Players

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bill Sharman, the Los Angeles Lakers' coach, listens to some of the descriptions others have of him and laughs.

Most people say he's a tough coach.

Some of those who have played for him call him a fanatic about basketball.

And Rick Barry, who also played under him, begins by describing Sharman as "a fine person and a straight person, but then adds "he is the narrowest individual I've ever known."

When Rick Barry says that about Bill Sharman he's talking strictly in a basketball sense.

Right now, the Lakers' coach, the intense, dark-haired former Boston Celtics' star who still is regarded by many as the foremost free throw shooter in perhaps the entire history of basketball, isn't concerning himself as much with the way people are describing him as he is with the way his ball club is trying to go about knocking off the Milwaukee Bucks as NBA champs.

Sharman pushes himself no less than he does his players. Actually he has received some advice from his doctor about how to conduct himself in these playoffs but he finds it hard, if not downright impossible, to heed it.

The Lakers' coach, who doesn't have an overly strong set of vocal cords to begin with, strained them by abusing them the last few weeks of the regular season.

As a result, Sharman's vocal muscles became tense and tight and all the subsequent yelling he did on the bench didn't do them any good at all.

"The doctor told him not to yell," says his wife, Dorothy. "But he forgets."

It isn't that Sharman forgets so much as it is that he can't always control himself once the ball game begins.

Jerry West says he has never played for any coach who is so involved in the game or who motivates his players more than Sharman does. The Lakers' coach simply doesn't believe in leaving anything to chance.

Sharman is forever writing himself notes.

1. Call Mike about car insurance.
2. Go to bank.

One thing he doesn't have to write himself a note about are these playoffs. Down through the years, the Lakers have always managed to find a way to lose the big one —that last big ball game. This time Sharman has dedicated himself to seeing it doesn't happen again.

O'Sheas Push Blues By Minnesota

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

It was simply a case of too many O'Sheas for the Minnesota North Stars Sunday.

Kevin O'Shea took a pass from brother Danny and fired it past Minnesota goalie Cesare Maniago at 10:07 of sudden death overtime to give St. Louis a 2-1 victory and move the Blues into the Stanley Cup semifinals. The victory gave the Blues a 4-3 edge in games in the best-of-seven series and qualified them to meet the Boston Bruins, who eliminated Toronto last week, in the semifinals.

"I didn't know whether it was in or not," said Kvin, who fired the pass from his brother from the outer edge of the faceoff circle. "The goal judge didn't put the light on. Then I saw Danny with his stick in the air."

St. Louis took a 1-0 lead in the first period on Gary Sabourin's goal but Charlie Burns tied the score after only 15 seconds of the third period also on an assist from Danny O'Shea.

Maniago said the winning goal was a double deflection. "It hit the right pipe, then came off the handle of my stick and went in," said the veteran goaltender.

Jacques Caron, a 31-year-old rookie who performed brilliantly in the nets for the Blues, credited his defense for "backchecking real well out there. Now we've got a few days rest. We'll give the Bruins our best shot."

"I won't start worrying about Boston until Monday," said Al Arbour, the St. Louis coach. "It was a very tiring series for us but we'll be in there against the Bruins."

In the only other game Sunday, the New York Rangers held on to defeat the Chicago Black Hawks 3-2 in the opening game of their semifinal series.

Brad Park and Walter Tkaczuk scored goals within 35 seconds of the second period and goalie Ed Giacomin squelched a third-period rally by the Hawks to pace the New York victory.

Ted Irvine gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead in the first period and Park collected his goal at 16:07 of the second period. Tkaczuk then blasted in a rebound of Gene Carr's shot at 16:42 to make it 3-0.

The Black Hawks, outplayed for most of the game, came alive in the third period when Stan Mikita's shot deflected off Ranger Bruce MacGregor past Giacomin at 12:30. Chris Bordeleau deflected Doug Jarrett's long drive past Giacomin little more than two minutes later and the Black Hawks pelted the Rangers' goalie to no avail in the last five minutes.

The New York-Chicago series resumes Tuesday night in Chicago.

Spokane Indians Appoint Berrier Field Manager

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI)—William Berrier has been appointed field manager of the Spokane Indians for the 1972 season.

"We are delighted to have this enthusiastic and experience leader as the head man for the 1972 Northwest League season," Indians' general manager Ken Merkle said in announcing the appointment.

Berrier, 34, piloted the Los Angeles Dodgers' farm team at Medford the past three seasons. He was named manager of the year in the Northwest League in 1969.

LAKERS

briefly showed its talent by closing to 56-45 at halftime and playing Milwaukee on equal terms in the third period. But the Bucks ran off a 3-1 surge starting off the fourth quarter to dash Laker hopes of a comeback.

Walt Frazier, sitting out half the game because of four personal fouls, returned early in the fourth quarter with a nine-point siege that helped New York edge the Celtics.

Boston played better defense than in the opener when New York won by 22 points and even had a chance to win in the final 10 seconds when Frazier missed a foul shot and New York led 106-105. Celtic scoring ace John Havlicek brought the ball downcourt but was forced to take a hurried shot with three seconds left. The ball hit the rim and bounded away.

Havlicek led all scorers with 29 points, while Dave DeBusschere paced New York with 24 points and collected 17 rebounds.

"I look for a tough five or six-game series," DeBusschere said later. "I just hope it doesn't go seven."

DeBusschere's 15 footer with 24 seconds remaining in the gave gave New York a 106-103 lead and provided the cushion after Havlicek's driving layup made it 106-105.

The Celtics can't afford to lose the third game in Boston Wednesday night, either. Then they would be left with having to win the remaining four games for the title.

OAKLAND

carrying only nine pitchers instead of the customary 10. The hope, of course, is that Blue will sign soon. But no progress is being made along those lines even though owner Charlie Finley is in town, presumably to make another stab at corraling Blue.

The A's managed six hits off Dick Woodson, Ray Corbin, Dave Laroche and Wayne Granger in Sunday's loss to the Twins and they weren't nearly enough. Minnesota managed only four hits off Hunter in eight innings and none off Darold Knowles in one, but one of the hits was Bobby Darwin's second homer in as many games.

The homer came after a single by Charlie Manuel and tied the score at 2-2 in the fifth. It stayed that way until the eighth when Hunter hit Cesar Tovar with a pitch and Rod Carew scored him with a double for what proved to be the winning run.

Women Enter Field In Boston Marathon

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

HOPKINTON, Mass. — Women were official entries today for the first time as the Boston Athletic Association held its 76th annual Boston Marathon, and one familiar female — mother nature — was making her presence felt.

Observers said the chilly weather might help the field of 1,200 entries, but if the drizzly weather which struck late yesterday and continued through the night did not clear, it would ruin any chance for a record in the 26-mile, 385-yard event that ends at the Prudential center in Boston's Back Bay section. The race was to start at 9 a.m. (PST).

Baseball

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. — Lou Perini, the owner who broke professional baseball tradition by moving the Braves from Boston to Milwaukee, died yesterday at the age of 68.

Chuck Fairbanks Jr., a quarterback, and Robert Giblin, a cornerback who just made the first team last week, were robbed and shot by two hitchhikers yesterday.

Track and Field

LOS ANGELES — Sweden's Djell Isaksson pole-vaulted 18 feet, two inches Saturday at UCLA's Meet of Champions to set a world record — a week after he had gone 18-1 in the Texas Relays to better the previous world mark of 18 set by Chris Papanicolaou of Greece.

Buick Pro-Am Golf Tourney Called Off

CASPER, Wyo. (UPI)—Interference and threats from the Colorado section of the Professional Golfers Association has forced the calling off of the K-w Buick Pro-Am Golf Tournament for 1972 and perhaps forever, the tournament chairman announced Sunday.

Fred Burgi, general manager of Radio Station KPOW in Casper, said the Colorado PGA section had insisted on cutting the amateur purse so the Colorado section "could skim a 5 per cent royalty from the entry fees."

Burgi said the K-2 management rejected this as it penalized the amateur players whose entry fees enrich the professional purse.

The tournament chairman said the demands were made by PGA section President Dow Finsterwald, golf pro at the Broadmoor Club in Colorado Springs.

WORMS ARE TRICKY — Boy Scout Frank Militelle determinedly puts a nightcrawler onto a hook, hoping to lure one of Lake Shasta's trout. Despite the strenuous efforts of the 21 boys and four adults, only two fish were caught by one angler, according to I-J photographer Bob Hax, who served as one of the adult leaders for the outing.

Scouts Sail, Play, Eat

PADDLES NEEDED — Scouts Dana De Grezia and Kevin Tinto try their hand at sailing the Tinto family's tiny boat, carried to Lake Shasta atop one of the troop's cars. With barely enough breeze to ripple the water, the sailors found the going slow.

CHESS GAME — Mark Lewton (left) ponders how to use a bishop against the superior forces remaining to Gary Hax, while Mike Sorenson kibitzes. Their houseboat was tied up at shore while some of the boys and adults went water skiing and explored the lake as far as Shasta Dam.

BREAKFAST ABOARD — Steve Weir, Rick Jackson, David Frey, Frank Militello and Darrel Van Winkle pitch into the breakfast prepared by young Van Winkle and others (see center photo). Van Winkle makes a long arm for the ham. The houseboats were fitted out much like vacation trailers, with convenient galleys and living quarters.

AFTER-SKI SPLASH — Asst. Scoutmaster Jackson takes a header into the lake at the end of a run behind the ski boat. The adults, who also included William Weir, James Tinto, Hax and Arthur Olsen, found the water cold. The Scouts insisted it was warm.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Anticipate Continued Green Giant Growth

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I purchased Green Giant stock at prices higher than those prevailing now. Should I continue to be patient or sell to buy another stock? — L.P.

A. Significant recovery strides were posted by NYSE-listed Green Giant in its fiscal 1971 third quarter. Profits were reported at 53 cents a share, up 33 per cent, on a 14 per cent sales gain. This followed two periods of lower earnings when results were penalized largely by the wage-price freeze and higher raw material and labor costs.

Continued good growth is anticipated for Green Giant aided by the expected approval of price hikes in some of the company's canned goods lines and by Green Giant's recent diversification moves. Existing commitments should not be disturbed in view of the issue's attractive turnaround prospects.

Q. Should I hold my 112 shares of Consolidated Edison (NYSE)? I have been told I should sell and put the money in the bank or reinvest. — E.W.

A. Consolidated Edison's primary appeal is its heretofore tax-free, liberal dividend — currently near 7 per cent. Hence, for income purposes, Consolidated is an attractive investment. As a growth stock, however, Consolidated Edison has shortcomings. Operating in a relatively mature service area, the firm has a below-average growth potential, with a further deterrent being ininsufficient rate increases. Consolidated recently was granted an electric rate hike of $94.6 million in annual revenues. However, this represented less than two-thirds of the company's original request; and, cites Consolidated Edison, does not adequately take into account severe upward pressures on costs. Also aggravating the situation is the firm's Indian Point #2 nuclear power plant which is under attack not only by environmentalists but more recently from a subcontractor questioning the safety of the generator station. The latter could delay the summer opening of Indian Point — the peak load period for the utility.

While near-term market activity may be sluggish, Consolidated offers income appeal and may be held for that purpose.

Texstar Corp. Picks Directors

DALLAS, Tex. (BW) — The shareholders of the Texstar Corp. at their recent annual meeting re-elected nine directors.

Shareholders also approved a qualified stock option plan for officers and key employes of the company and its subsidiaries.

In response to an inquiry at the meeting, President George Bremser Jr. estimated that the net sales and operating revenues for the six month period ended March 31 would be up about 20 per cent over the comparable period for the previous fiscal year.

He also estimated income from operations before extraordinary items for the first six months at roughly $900,000 which would be 28 cents per share (undiluted), as compared to $554,000, or 20 cents per share, on fewer outstanding shares for the same period in fiscal 1971.

Cordon Corp. Quarter Report

LOS ANGELES (BW) — Cordon International Corp. has reported a 43 per cent increase in operating income for the first quarter ended March 31, vs. the same period last year.

The reported net income of $192,000, or 12 cents per share, increased from $121,000 or 8 cents per share in the comparable quarter of 1971. Net income in both periods was benefited by a federal income tax loss carryforward equivalent to 4 cents a share in 1972 and 3 cents in 1971.

Sales for the period were $6,350,000 compared to $7,093,000 in 1971.

Trade Light As Market Moves Low

NEW YORK (UPI)—Trading was light today as the stock market moved slightly lower on the New York Stock Exchange.

Of the more than 1,750 issues crossing the tape, declines led advances by around 170 issues.

Analysts said investors riveted their eyes on the Vietnam war, and the Price Commission. The bombing forays against North Vietnam helped make traders cautious, they said. Even more disturbing to Wall Street was the Price Commission's decision to order price reductions but companies that have made windfall profits, according to analysts.

Against such a news background, the market held up well, the analysts said. First quarter earnings reports have been good and have been a source of strength to Wall Street.

General Motors was another active issue, primarily because of a block of 100,000 shares at 81 1-4, off 1-4.

Prices were lower in fairly active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Russians Ogle American Exhibit

By CHARLOTTE SAIKOWSKI

MOSCOW — The youthful American with long sideburns and moustache was surrounded by a throng of Russians like some matinee idol.

Olya, it's he," an auburn-haired girl whispered in excited tones, nudging a friend. "It's Nikita Barsky. I recognized him by his voice." The girls giggled and pressed closer into the crowd.

The scene, at the American research and development exhibit at Sokolniki Park, was vivid proof that Russians listen to the Voice of America, for Nikita Barsky is a broadcaster for VOA and one of 22 American guides working at the fair. Far from evidencing any hostility, crowds burst into knowing smiles when they learned who he is.

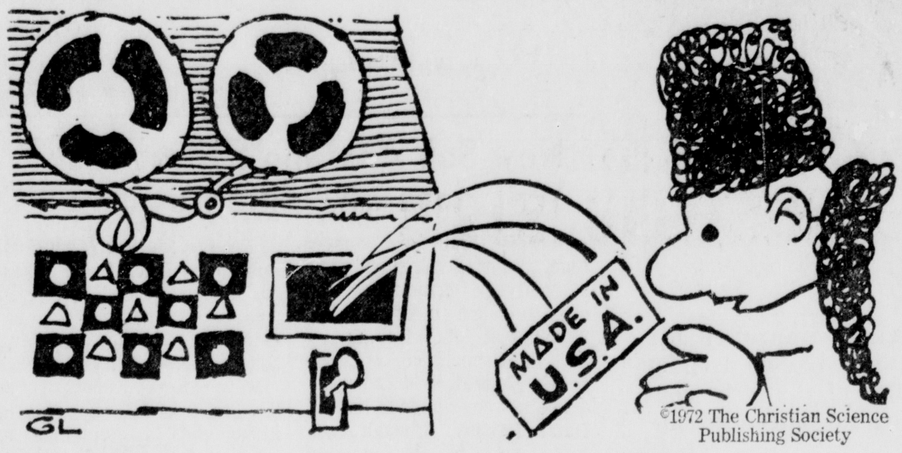
There is enthusiasm generally for the American show, which is the 12th to be held in the Soviet Union, and an anniversary of sorts. It was at the first U.S. exhibit in 1959 that then Vice-President Richard M. Nixon and Soviet leader Nikita S. Khrushchev made world headlines with their "kitchen debate."

Soon Nixon comes to Moscow again, this time as President. And while it is unlikely there will be a kitchen debate, Americans here wonder if the "debater" might not fly to Vologograd, where the exhibit will be running during his Soviet visit. In any case, a visit to Sokolniki Park provides some insights into how informed Soviet citizens have or have not become in the intervening 13 years.

True, perhaps 80 per cent of the thousands of questions fired at the Russian-speaking guides will concern the U.S. standard of living. At the General Electric stand, within a few short minutes I heard Russians ask, "How does an unemployed worker live?" "Is he allowed to keep his car?" "How long do benefits last?" "What does a teacher earn?" "What do you pay for a higher education?"

"How much does a chicken cost?" asked a peasant-faced man.

But the remaining 20 per cent disclose a higher level of sophistication and a greater awareness of the world outside than in 1959, a fact probably attributable to the Khrushchev thaw, repeated exhibits, the growing number of tourists, and foreign broadcasts.



©1972 The Christian Science Publishing Society

"There are still pockets of ignorance," says exhibit director John Thomas, "but in 1959 we started from scratch. Today the Russians are asking fewer ABCs and more XYZs."

It is standard, for instance, to hear: "Why is Angela Davis being persecuted?"

But one knowledgeable Russian asked, "We understand that Angela Davis belongs to the American Communist Party, which adheres to the Soviet line. Yet she is a follower of Marcuse and he does not accept the Soviet position. How do you explain that?"

Levels of sophistication vary from city to city, of course. In Tbilisi, the Georgian capital where the exhibit opened in January, the questions tended to be simpler and focused on the gadgetry.

"The Georgians seldom asked about the United States," says Carolyn Smith, a guide from Washington, D.C. "Mostly they wanted to know about the products and what they cost. And tell them about the Lincoln Continental and they were ready to give you rubles for it!"

Not surprisingly, the young Americans are getting many questions about the President's visit to Peking, which clearly overshadows his upcoming trip here. There is no hiding Russians' disappointment that the President did not touch down in Moscow first, and their suspicion that deals were struck in Peking.

Aside from the popular guides, Muscovites are enjoying such attractions as the Univac 9300 computer, laser devices, consumer appliances, and other items in the exhibit. The racy Javelin, one of three cars on display, has been stripped of its windshield wipers and chrome fittings — by "zealous souvenir hunters," as exhibit officials put it.

Except for a few posters about town, the Soviet government has given little publicity to the exhibit.

Muscovites hear by word of mouth, however. Attendance is strong, and the questions keep pouring forth.

"How did you learn Russian?" a stout, elderly gentleman asked Nikita Barsky.

"A little in the kitchen, a little at the university," he replied. "You see, my grandparents were from Kiev . . . "

A smile crept over the faces of the listeners.

Warplanes Hit 12th Straight Day

SAIGON (UPI)—The United States sent its warplanes back to North Vietnam today for the 12th consecutive day and Communist reports in Hanoi said the capital and its suburbs were hit again. B52s and fighter-bombers hit the Hanoi-Haiphong area Sunday.

North Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong, in an emotional broadcast over Hanoi Radio, told the nation "our nation is in dire danger. Our capital, our fatherland is in danger."

The U.S. command said F4 Phantoms shot down three MIG21 jet fighters near Hanoi Sunday, and U.S. pilots involved in the raids said the raids against Haiphong left flames visible 100 miles at sea. Hanoi Radio reported the planes killed many civilians in both cities and hit a Soviet ship at Haiphong.

Although the U.S. command reported today that 5,000 American soldiers had been sent home under President Nixon's troop withdrawal program, more U.S. Navy personnel and Marine fighter squadrons have been brought in, actually increasing troop strength in the area by 11,000 men.

The U.S. command, under its new policy of withholding information until after the raids are over, gave no details on today's strikes against the north, part of Nixon's campaign to retaliate against what the United States calls a major invasion of South Vietnam by the north.

With the exception of eyewitness reports by pilots involved in the North Vietnam raids most information came from Hanoi Radio, foreign diplomats stationed in the North Vietnamese capital or Communist European correspondents there.

Swedish diplomat Eskil Lundberg reported by telephone to a Stockholm newspaper today that air raid sirens sounded three times today in Hanoi. He said he had not heard any bombs but that the North Vietnamese reported attacks today against Hanoi and its suburbs.

The Hungarian MTI news agency correspondent in Hanoi reported he had seen attacks Sunday against Haiphong, Hanoi and on the road between and said he personally saw three children killed by American bombs. He said he saw a school that had been destroyed.

Hanoi Radio, in reporting on the Sunday raids, said "many persons, mostly women and children," were killed in Haiphong while trying to flee the city and that a Soviet freighter received more than 30 holes

Mrs. Tompkins, a tall brunette native of Texas, reported for work today in a uniform similar to her male counterparts, except for a feminine beret on her head. Her first day on the job not only brought smiles and jokes from commuters but a promise from one man he intended to use her lane from now on.

Ag Area Rezone Limits Urged By County Assessor

'60-Acre Zoning' Controversy Before Supervisors Tomorrow

By ERIK M. INGRAM

The Marin County Assessor's Office has recommended gainst rezoning the county's entire agricultural preserve as proposed by the planning department and several conservation groups.

County Assessor Bert W. Broemmel, in a five-page report prepared for county supervisors, said the controversial 60-acre zoning should be limited to the northern half of the 210,000-acre preserve.

Roughly outlined, Broemmel said, that would limit the rezoning to about 110,000 acres lying east of Tomales Bay and north of a line between Olema and the Sonoma County line.

The area around the community of Tomales should be excluded, however, he said.

Broemmel's proposal will be considered tomorrow by county supervisors, who also will review reports from agricultural commissioner R. Allan Ballard and farm advisor Donald L. Brittsan.

Supervisors requested the reports last month after approving the 60-acre zoning for the first of five sections of the preserve to be considered.

The 60-acre classification — which limits development to one home per 60 acres — is aimed at protecting Marin's agricultural industry from the pressures of urban growth.

The reports were requested in an attempt to settle a squabble between conservationists, who say agriculture is thriving, and developers, who say it isn't and that the 60-acre zoning isn't needed.

(Developers have maintained, during past hearings, that the planning department's proposal is a guise to keep much of the county in open space but at the expense of land owners who are not agriculturalists.)

Under the planning department's recommended rezoning, only the eastern portion of the county, from Novato to Sausalito, and the San Geronimo Valley would remain as is.

Broemmel, however, said his limited proposal dealt only with preservation of agriculture and not with "existing or prospective county planning policy on preservation of open space. . ."

Prime areas of conflict between the two proposals appear to be the undeveloped lands around Novato, Inverness and south of Olema to the Marin headlands.

All are proposed for low-density zoning under the planning department recommendation but would be excluded under Broemmel's.

"I have excluded the Point Reyes Peninsula since adequate protection there is under control of the National Park Service," Broemmel said. "I have also excluded the lands on the watershed south of Olema to the Golden Gate Bridge since there are legislative proposals pending for government acquisition of the remainder of the rural lands in that area. . ."

Broemmel said he was suggesting only half the preserve since that half comprises most of the serious ranching operations in Marin.

"From a regional point of view," he continued, "it complements the agricultural predominance in land use prevailing on the Sonoma side of the county boundary."

Broemmel, commenting on the "viability" of the agriculture industry, noted there has been a slight decline in agriculture over the past 11 years.

Marin's kingpin dollar-getter, the dairies, have declined rapidly, however. In 1960, they represented about 80 per cent of the industry's gross dollar value, he said. Last year, they represented only about 65 per cent.

The decrease in dairying has been offset in the production of livestock and poultry, he said. "It is our opinion that agricultural endeavor will continue on a limited scale here in Marin to the extent that tax policy, environmental control and land use planning will permit."

The reports from agricultureal commissioner Ballard and farm advisor Brittsan present facts and figures showing influences —such as urban sprawl — outside pressures have on agriculture.

Neither came out in support or opposition to the controversial rezoning. Ballard said in his report, however, that "agriculture is viable in Marin County."

Rogers Says Bombing Demonstrates Policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Secretary of State William P. Rogers said today U.S. bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong was a demonstration of U. S. determination to "take whatever military action necessary" to prevent a Communist takeover of South Vietnam.

Rogers told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that no American troops would be re-introduced into ground fighting, but said President Nixon would use U. S. air and naval power as necessary to support South Vietnamese troops.

In reply to pointed questions by the committee chairman, Sen. J. William Fulbright D-Ark., Rogers said the bombing of the north—which he said did not include Haiphong harbor — was for two purposes: —To protect American troops still in South Vietnam to make certain Nixon's withdrawal program can continue.

—To allow the South Vietnamese to protect themselves.

Fulbright opened the hearings with a statement attacking Nixon for not ending the war and saying, "I for one cannot possibly understand what consideration warranted these drastic measures." Fulbright said it "was ironic and tragic" that after years of fighting, "hundreds of thousands of lives have been lost...and we are discussing the war in Vietnam with members of the cabinet."

Fulbright ended his opening statement by reading a list of pointed questions about the war to Rogers and then asking the secretary to dispense with his opening statement which contained no mention of the bombing of the month. After attempting several times to begin his statement, Rogers consented to answer the question.

Rogers said the North Vietnamese were now engaged in a major invasion of South Vietnam and, "we think it is essential to conduct these raids."

Rogers declared that the United States would "not engage in negotiations while this major invasion is under way."

Rogers said 12 of 13 North Vietnamese divisions were now in the south. "It is clear they (the North Vietnamese) have been lying through their teeth when they say they have no

O'Brien Unhappy Over Candidates

By GODFREY SPERLING, JR.
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Lawrence F.O'Brien, the sole arbiter among the Democratic presidential candidates, is known to be most unhappy over the feuding and fussing going on in the primaries.

Further, he is taking steps now to blow the whistle on what Messrs. Muskie, McGovern, Humphrey, Jackson, et al are saying about each other.

A year ago the Democratic Party chairman met quietly with the candidates and received a promise from them that they would direct their political barbs at President Nixon and say nothing about their Democratic opponents that would bring about wounds and divisions within the party.

Now O'Brien thinks that the intramural sniping has reached the point where it poses a serious threat to the Democrats' capacity to provide a united front in their race against the President next fall.

Thus, the chairman is passing the word along quietly that the candidates must cease and desist in this snarling and biting before it gets completely out of hand.

He also is listening closely to what is being said in the Massachusetts and Pennsylvania primaries. And should the intra-party warfare continue, he will be calling the candidates together again in an effort to reinforce last year's amity promise.

O'Brien remembers 1960 and the nastiness that developed between the Humphrey and Kennedy camps as they fought it out for the nomination.

By the time the West Virginia primary came around in early spring of that year, the attacks from both sides had reached a particularly low level.

Some Kennedy people were covertly telling the voters that Humphrey had been a World War II draft dodger. And, at the same time, a story of Humphrey-camp origin was warning the electorate that Kennedy suffered from a disease that would make it impossible for him to carry out the functions of president. Neither of these calculated rumors was accurate.

O'Brien remembers that the bitterness was so intense that a split in the Democratic Party seemed possible, at least for a short time.

Then Humphrey, always the team man and one who very quickly forgives and forgets,

Hanoi Says It Will Talk If Air Strikes Canceled

PARIS (UPI)—Hanoi offered today to start new secret peace negotiations if President Nixon calls of his air raids and resumes regular weekly Vietnam talks. It also warned against any invasion of North Vietnam.

North Vietnamese peace negotiator Xuan Thuy told a news conference the "special adviser" to the peace team, Le Duc Tho, who has conducted 13 past private talks with presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger, will fly to Paris the moment the two conditions are met.

Thuy also warned that the North Vietnamese were ready to meet any air, naval and ground invasion of their territory in retaliation for the Communist offensive in South Vietnam.

Le Duc Tho, ranked No. 7 in the Hanoi political bureau, was instrumental in discussing peace conditions in 13 meetings with Kissinger last summer which, however, produced no results.

Kissinger refused to continue the private meetings in the Paris region with Thuy after Tho's return to Hanoi. But U.S. officials recently indicated they were ready to start the secret meetings again any time.

U.S. delegation spokesman Stephen Ledogar said "There has been no formal proposal by either side through a liaison channel for a meeting April 27."

Ledogar did not say whether a formal request for a meeting on that date would be acceptable to the U.S. delegation. He said if any such note was received it would be examined and answered.

Ledogar refused to comment

Dropout Link To Unemployment Disproved In National Survey

By ROBIN WRIGHT
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — A lonely male figure strolls aimlessly down an abandoned street. A high school dropout, he's jobless, moneyless, and friendless.

Even the unemployment bureau offers only figures of blimpy boredom, lined up in rows of despair. The wait isn't worth it, but there's nothing better to do.

This lonely frustration, this inability to find a job, this semi-state of nothingness — are all results of dropping out, the television message blatantly advertises.

By the end of 60 seconds, the viewer can't help but agree with the closing line: "Your chances of being unemployed are doubled if you quit school before graduating."

But that just isn't so. A new nationwide survey claims the ad is misleading.

"There's little justification for the view that dropouts get less satisfying jobs," the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research concludes after surveying more than 2,000 young men on three occasions since 1966.

The study's conclusion: Dropping out is highly overrated as a problem in its own right. It doesn't cause the problems that prevent employment. They exist before the student quits school and in fact contribute to his becoming a dropout.

Specifically, information from the dropouts substantiated the claim that a high school diploma may not be a requirement for either equal income or happiness in a job.

When the survey group compared employed dropouts with employed high school graduates, they found the two groups' weekly income levels to be nearly identical.

And three-quarters of the dropouts rated themselves "quite satisfied" or "very satisfied" with their jobs, compared with the same response by two-thirds of the employed high school graduates.

The study also found that 71 per cent of the dropouts were employed 30 hours a week or more (all in civilian jobs) with a comparable figure of 87 per cent among high school graudates.

The study concludes by stating that to persuade the student who has failed or misbehaved in school to stay there for one or two more years is not going to solve his problems. Earlier action in the younger years might have helped.

"The difficulties experienced by the dropouts we studied were already present or predictable by the start of 10th grade, and there is little evi-

Roofing Co. Is Guilty Of Smog

OAKLAND (UPI)—A San Leandro roofing company has been found guilty of violating 153 anti-smog ordinances.

Possibly one of Northern California's worst air polluters, the Lloyd A. Frey Roofing Co. faces a maximum $500 fine on each of the 153 charges.

"Every time they received a citation," Superior Court Judge William H. Brailsford said in handing down the Saturday verdict, "I believe they simply tore them up and threw them in the wastebasket."

Matthew S. Walker, attorney for the Bay Air Pollution Control District, said his agency filed only visible smoke violation complaints and ignored complaints of stench.

Nixon's Policy-Shaping Role Under A Tight Lid

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The White House placed a tight secrecy lid today on President Nixon's policy-shaping role in the bombings of Haiphong and Hanoi. On Capitol Hill and elsewhere, the raids created intense controversy.

"The President is being kept fully informed on all matters of foreign policy," reporters were told by the deputy White House press secretary, Gerald L. Warren.

Warren dismissed every question on the bombing and Nixon's role with a "no comment."

Among other things, Warren declined to say:

—Whether U. S. bombers hit a Soviet ship at Haiphong.

—Whether the United States would agree to North Vietnam's offer to resume peace talks in Paris April 27.

—Whether the Soviets, in their protest note on the bombing, referred to the summit meeting.

—When Nixon might report to the American people on war developments.

House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., until now a staunch supporter of U.S. policy in Southeast Asia, said Nixon owes the people an explanation of the escalated air war.

"I've supported Vietnamization and the program for the withdrawing of troops responsibly," Albert told newsmen. "I've never supported brinksmanship and hope that isn't what this is."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Nab Hijacker

ROME (UPI) — Police lured a New York City man out of the Swiss airliner he had hijacked yesterday by sending an unmarked car onto the runway and telling him — in keeping with his demand — that the U.S. ambassador was inside. A policeman promptly overpowered him.

Police said Mario Maimone, 30, was arrested after forcing the pilot of Swissaire flight 610 with 20 persons aboard to land at Rome's Ciampino military airport instead of at Leonardo Da Vinci International Airport 20 miles away.

They said Maimone, carrying a box he said was filled with explosives but turned out to contain cigars, hijacked the plane over Italy on a regular Geneva-Rome flight.

Cambodia Fighting

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Government forces have begun an operation to rout out eight battalions of Communist troops from a bunker base near the town of Saang, 17 miles southeast of Phnom Penh, military spokesmen said today.

Military sources said Communist troops killed 10 government paratroopers yesterday in the battle at Saang. The 1.5-square-mile base of well fortified bunkers and trenches has been under construction by the Communists for nearly two years.

The base has been used mainly as a "rear area" for Communists retreating after staging attacks in and around Phnom Penh.

Big Emerald

GENEVA (UPI) — The world's largest known emerald, a 20,000-carat stone that weighs about eight pounds and may be worth $125 million, was kept in a Geneva custom office safe in November.

"But it is no longer here," an official said. "We are unable to say a thing. This stone was in fact in a safe at the depot but isn't anymore."

The largest previously known emerald weighs one and one half pounds and is 3,600 carats. It was discovered at Toro, Colombia, and is valued at about 50 million.

Vincent Hutter, a reporter for the Geneva newspaper La Suissa, said he recently saw a photograph of the emerald that was kept in the Swiss customs safe. Hutter said it is hexagonal with an uneven top.

Prize-Winning Writer Dead

TOKYO (UPI) — Nobel Prize winner Yasunari Kawabata, whose literary reputation rested chiefly on a book about lonely people who couldn't relate to others, committed suicide yesterday without leaving a word of explanation to his readers or friends.

Kawabata

Kawabata, 72, who received his Nobel Prize for literature in 1968, was found dead by his maid in a rented apartment he used as a study at Kamakura, 40 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Police said the novelist apparently drank a bottle of whiskey, then inhaled gas through a rubber hose attached to a heater.

Kawabata received the prize mainly for "Snow Country," a novel published in 1937. Its central theme was the alienation and loneliness of the individual in modern society — a topic that did not catch the attention of the Western world until about 30 years later.

Claim On Jets

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Egyptian pilots have started flying Soviet-built MIG23 jet fighters and have replaced most of the Russian advisers manning antiaircraft missile sites along the Suez Canal, an Israeli newspaper said today.

Quoting "reliable informants who recently visited Egypt," the Jerusalem Post said "Egyptian fliers are now piloting seven of the 24 MIG23s stationed in Egypt and have already flown them on a number of reconnaissance missions."

Israeli military officials say Egypt is the only country outside the Communist bloc where the jets are stationed.

Tour Williamsburg

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (UPI) — The 34-member Chinese table tennis team toured historical sites yesterday in this colonial city, then played two hours of exhibition matches against an American all-star team. The Chinese won every match.

An estimated 4,000 people watched at the College of William and Mary Hall.

The Chinese received such a warm reception that Chuang Tse-tung, considered one of the finest table tennis players in the world, made a rare appearance in the matches. He said he played to reciprocate for the hospitality shown the team in Williamsburg.

Premier Resigns

ANKARA (UPI) — Prime Minister Nihat Erim resigned today, 13 months after taking office under pressure from military men seeking political, social and economic stability.

A note from President Cevdet Sunay read in Parliament said Erim would remain in office until a new premier is named.

The 60-year-old Erim resigned, Sunday's note said, because he was "exhausted" and needed a rest.

Body Found At San Pablo

SAN PABLO (UPI)—A body tentatively identified as a San Francisco psychiatrist missing since April 9 was found Sunday in a ravine off San Pablo Dam Road.

Contra Costa County Sherriff's Deputies said the body, apparently that of Dr. Lucille Mlodnosky, was about 200 yards from her auto.

Deputies said the cause of death was not immediately known but said it was "apparent suicide."

7 Dead In Battle

MONTEVIDEO (UPI) — Police sources said at least seven persons were killed this morning in a gunbattle that occured near the office of the Communist Party.

One army officer was wounded in the shootout between joint security forces and persons believed to be left-wing Tupamaro urban guerrillas, or militant Communists.

The dead were not identified, nor were any details of the incident disclosed.

18 Die In Crash

AMASENO, Italy (UPI) — All 18 persons on an Italian ATI airline flight from Rome to the city of Foggia were killed when the prop-jel plane hit a power pylon during a thunderstorm and crashed, police said today.

Officials said the Dutch-built Fokker 27 Friendship plane, carrying 15 passengers and a crew of three, crashed yesterday near Amaseno, a village 50 miles south of Rome in an area surrounded by mountains.

LBJ Resting

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Former President Lyndon B. Johnson, who suffered a heart attack 10 days ago in Virginia, spent a restful weekend, but doctors say they are not yet ready to allow Johnson, 63, to return to his LBJ Ranch, 80 miles away.

Plane Explodes, Three Are Killed

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) —Rain and heavy seas hampered a search for an airplane that crashed off-shore Sunday, apparently after exploding and killing its three passengers, including philanthropist Jack Soble.

The twin-engine Mitsubishi turboprop bound for Philadelphia dropped into the Atlantic Ocean, some 300 yards off Convention Hall, at 2:25 p.m., minutes after takeoff from Bader Field. Eyewitnesses reported hearing an explosion before the crash.

Among those presumed dead was Soble, 52, president of Soble Construction Co., Pleasantville, N.J., and a director of U.S. Home Corp., West Orange, N.J.

Several hundred persons were evacuated from along the banks of the Kentucky River at Frankfort, Ky., yesterday, but not all vehicles were salvaged. A car parked in a low-lying area of Frankfort was left behind as the river went 10 feet over flood stage.

Nixon Aims Campaign Strategy At Powerful Blue Collar Bloc

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon hopes to convince the potentially powerful voting bloc of blue collar workers that his origins as a poor man's son give him a special insight into the desires of the working man.

If he succeeds, he would cut into the political strength of Gov. George Wallace of Alabama and perhaps force some other Democratic presidential candidates to rethink their own election strategy. He might also blunt Democratic efforts to picture himself and the Republican party as the ally of big business.

As his special envoy to the blue collar workers, Nixon has appointed to the White House staff Dr. Michael Pasquale Balzano Jr., a 36-year-old former garbageman whose biography reads like a story by Horatio Alger.

"Because he came from the ranks of working people, the President understands their problems," Balzano said in a two-page written statement issued in response to questions about his new role. "As far as the President is concerned, the only trouble with blue collar people is that there are not enough of them."

Balzano joined the White House staff as a special assistant several weeks ago but there was no announcement of his appointment until newsmen began to ask about it.

Balzano's appeal to blue collar workers apparently will stress that Nixon's father was a far from affluent grocer in Whittier, Calif. It can also be expected to gloss over the President's later career as a Wall Street lawyer.

"The harder you work and sacrifice, the more you are entitled to what you have earned," Balzano said. "The President has not forgotten this; his life is a history of work and sacrifice and that is why he is where he is today.

"The President is interested in learning how he can take the outstanding characteristics of these people—work, sacrifice, perseverance, patriotism, etc. —and impart these nation-building traits to all Americans."

Balzano, the son of Italian immigrant parents, dropped out of school at 16. Partly because Italian was the language spoken at home, he was virtually illiterate when he left school.

He worked for a time as a garbage collector in his hometown of New Haven, Conn., but a severe back sprain ended his career as a laborer at the age of 19.

According to his official biography, Balzano put himself through night school and then Bridgeport University by working as an optician. He earned his Ph.D. degree last year from Georgetown University in Washington.

"With respect to blue collar people, I have three functions on the President's staff," Balzano said. "First, I act as a sounding board for ideas and proposed policies which might affect these people.

"Second, I have an opportunity to make suggestions concerning what the President can do for them," he added. "Third, I provide the President with insights about blue collars from more than just an academic point of view."

British Soldiers Smash Barriers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—A dozen British soldiers guarded by 150 other heavily armed troops used two armor-plated bulldozers today to smash barricades around a Roman Catholic area declared off limits to them.

UPI correspondent Colin Baker, who accompanied a unit of the King's Own Scottish Borderers on the two-hour mission, said the only sign of the Irish Republican Army (IRA), which proclaimed Turf Lodge a "no-go" area, was a few scattered sniper shots.

There were no residents on the darkened streets near the barricades—made of burned cars, buses, hedges and bricks. Only one or two houses had lights on, Baker said.

"The 150 troops, each with blackened faces, took up positions in gardens, behind trees and lamp posts all along the road," he said. "A sniper had just about nowhere to hide."

Troops clearing barriers in the area Sunday came under fire from snipers. Although there were no casualties there, gunmen elsewhere in Belfast and Londonderry killed three soldiers, including an officer, and wounded two others.

The barricades went up in Turf Lodge following Saturday's shooting by troops of Joseph McCann, 24, described by the army as a "very senior officer" in the official Irish Republican Army (IRA). McCann lived in Turf Lodge and the IRA said the barriers would remain up until after his funeral Tuesday.

The soldiers' deaths brought to 307 the number of persons killed in Northern Ireland in nearly three years of violence.

Weak Quake

TOKYO (UPI) — A weak earthquake originating in the Pacific off Fukushima prefecture was felt in the northeastern region and parts of Kanto area of Honshu island of Japan today. No damage or casualties were reported.

Eight Nominated As Jaycees' Oustanding Teacher

Five high schools in the Central Marin area have nominated eight teachers in this year's Central Marin Outstanding Young High School Teacher competition.

Sponsored by the San Rafael Jaycees, the contest is held to honor a dedicated young teacher and his school.

Terra Linda, San Rafael, Sir Francis Drake, Marin Catholic, San Domenico and Redwood high schools were each asked to nominate two candidates. Redwood High School declined to participate due to a reluctance among faculty members to single out any particular age group for special recognition, and Terra Linda failed to submit a nominee.

The winner will be announced at a banquet jointly sponsored by the Jaycees and Independent-Journal April 27 at Dominic's Harbor Restaurant, San Rafael.

Administrators of the participating schools were requested to discuss how their nominees maintain classroom control, provide a learning atmosphere, evaluate students' progress and improve their teaching.

Nominated are Donald Ritchie and William C. Ciabattari of Marin Catholic; Arnold Riesen and Sally Markey of San Rafael; Beth Clawson and Sister M. Dorothea O'Donnell of San Domenico and Susan Blair Dohrmann and Christine Anderson of Sir Francis Drake High School.

Ritchie is a first-year teacher of laboratory biology at Marin Catholic. A graduate of the University of California at Davis, he majored in zoology. He is a member of the Audubon Society, a camper and photographer.

Ritchie, according to Vice Principal David M. Pettingill, has "interested many in life sciences, has organized field trips and pack trips, and has started an ecology club. The students enjoy his company and he has time for all."

Ciabattari graduated from the University of San Francisco with a major in Spanish and has taught language at Marin Catholic since September. A participant in the Catholic Youth Organization, he coached a parish school basketball team in Daly City for three years.

Discussing his choice of professions, Ciabattari wrote, "As a high school student, I appreciated and needed teachers who were dedicated to their profession. I like to consider myself dedicated."

Riesen has taught biology, physiology and chemistry at San Rafael High School since 1970. He graduated from University of California, Santa Barbara, in 1963. At San Rafael High, he has served as assistant junior varisty football coach, freshman class adviser, and coadviser for the Medical Careers Club.

Riesen called teaching both the most satisfying and most dissatisfying job he has ever had. "To teach is to be like a Yo-Yo; you're constantly up or down. When you're up, it's most satisfying, and when you're down, it's misery. One's success depends on how much he remains 'up'."

Miss Markey, with an architecture and design degree from University of Michigan, has been a special education teacher at San Rafael high since 1970. An accomplished artist, she has exhibited her work in the United States, Italy and France. She taught painting and drawing at Terra Linda High School during the summer of 1970 and is currently on the adult education faculty in San Rafael.

"My major concern and service outside the classroom has been concerned with bridging the gap between my students and the community," wrote Miss Markey. "The goal for my educable mentally retarded students is to become independent, self-supporting citizens of the society in which they live."

Mrs. Clawson is chairman of the physical education department at San Domenico High School. She has been a teacher for fifteen years. A graduate of the University of Utah, with majors in physical education and health, she is married and the mother of five children.

Sister M. Maurice, principal of San Domenico, wrote that Mrs. Clawson's "dedication to her work, sincere interest in each student, selfless daily giving to others and exemplary living what she teaches make (her) and outstanding candidate."

Sister M. Dorothea O'Donnell has served as instructor in English and religion and dean of students since she arrived at San Domenico five years ago. She is a board member of the Education Corps of San Rafael.

Sister M. Dorothea was described by her principal as a "teacher with high standards of excellence, her grading tends to be 'stiff' yet students elect her classes with the knowledge that her demands are just, rewarding and constructive."

Miss Dorhmann has taught French at Drake High since 1968. She was graduated from the University of California in Berkeley, and was a graduate student at Stanford and the Sorbonne in Paris. Off campus, she is involved in U.C. alumni activities, hiking and camping, ballet and as a chaperone for student activities.

"My greatest joy in teaching lies in the eyes of the student who suddenly understands a new concept and feels pride in a new world opening before him," she wrote. "My main dissatisfaction is.... the 'schedule' which robs me of the time needed" to get students "together as a class and... know them individually as well as I'd like..."

Mrs. Anderson has taught at Drake since 1965, was chairman of the mathematics department in 1970-71, and is chairman of the alternative School Within A School.

She was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley, with later studies there and at Dominican College. She has spent much of her time developing curricula for the mathematics and alternative school programs, and as a teen-ager's group advisor for the Young Men's Christian Association.

"I recall loving mathetmatics and literature as a child and... being puzzled by my peers who did not find these stimulating. I guess I set out to show them what they were missing," she wrote. Her satisfactions in teaching are "meeting new people and new ideas on a daily basis... never stagnation."

She said she is dissatisfied with the difficulties of "trying to change education..." and "the separation of the school and the community..."

An 'Evening Of Theater' Is Set

"An Evening of Theater" will be presented at 8 p.m. Thursday by Dominican College speech and drama students in Meadowlands Hall on the San Rafael campus.

The program, directed by drama instructor Robert Bates, will include drama scenes and a "readers theater" performance of contemporary poetry and prose.

Among the 24 students to perform are Michelle Brown and Marsha Wagner of San Rafael, Christine Dettner of Kentfield, and Denise Myers of San Anselmo.

Series Of Slimming Exercises Scheduled

A series of slimming exercises, "Shape Up With Chopin," will start Thursday from 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. in the Barn at Marin Art and Garden Center, Ross, and will run six consecutive Thursdays.

Those interested should call the center office for reservations. There will be a charge.

and that at least one officer was wounded in the face.

Several Saigon newspapers carried reports that 1,200 South Vietnamese marines had stormed a beach 160 miles north of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) in North Vietnam today but there was no confirmation in Saigon and Hanoi Radio made no mention of such a landing.

The U.S. command, in a report on Sunday's raid, said two American planes were shot down in North Vietnam and two others and a helicopter lost in South Vietnam. It said the North Vietnamese fired thousand of rounds of anti-aircraft fire and more than 200 missiles but that the fire appeared to be erratic and disorganized.

Senior U.S. officers said today North Vietnam had moved a new division, identified only as the 711th, into the Que Son Valley sector of South Vietnam about 30 miles below Da Nang.

The officers said the division was identified through interrogation of prisoners. They said it was the same unit that overran government artillery bases West and O'Conner at the head of Que Son eight days ago.

"It's a sizeable force," one high ranking officer said, "and if it moves into the lowlands it's going to be a major threat for the (South Vietnamese) 2nd Division to take care of."

The Soviet Union officially protested the escalated bombing to the U.S. ambassador in Moscow.

The bombing missions as close as 75 miles from the Chinese border overshadowed the North Vietnamese offensive in the south, now in its 19th day. The Saigon command claimed control of the embattled provincial capital of An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon, after a 12-day siege which military sources said left more than 5,000 men dead on both sides.

Radio Hanoi claimed that 15 U.S. planes were shot down Sunday over the North which saw seasoned American combat pilots dodging antiaircraft fire heavier than some of them saw during the all-out bombing across the border four years ago.

Woman Injured During Parade

A Greenbrae woman, injured when the bicycle on which she was a passenger collided with a California Highway Patrol motorcycle Saturday during a parade in Larkspur, was treated for cuts and bruises at Marin General Hospital.

Zonnya Calderon, 21, of 344 Los Cerros, was riding on the bicycle driven by Ellen C. McGarry, 13, of 363 Los Cerros, Greenbrae. It collided with the motorcycle driven by officer Bill G. Loy.

The accident, at Manor Road and Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, was at very low speed and there was little damage, according to officers. It occurred about 9 a.m. Saturday.

Two Are Injured In Three-Car Crash

A San Francisco man and woman, injured in a three-car accident on Highway 101, were treated for a bruised shoulder and neck strain at Marin General Hospital, according to a spokesman.

Margaret Maheras, 50, and Tony J. Tsuralis, 75, were passengers in a car driven by George Maheras of San Francisco when it collided about 5:45 p.m. near Spencer Avenue in Sausalito with two others, one driven by Karl Mueller of San Francisco and the other by Milton E. Childress, also of San Francisco. The drivers were unhurt, officers said.

Council Installation Is Tomorrow Night

Swearing in of the newly-elected city council members in Mill Valley will take place at 8 p.m. tomorrow, not tonight as incorrectly stated in Saturday's Independent-Journal.

The city manager and city clerk will meet tonight, but immediately adjourn until tomorrow night, city officials said.

Walker Said Good After Stab Wound

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Matthew S. Walker, attorney for the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, was reported in good condition today at San Francisco General Hospital after being stabbed Saturday in front of his apartment on Cathedral Hill.

Walker, 54, underwent surgery for a deep stab wound that "barely missed" his heart, the hospital reported.

Police said Walker was attacked by a robber in the late afternoon as he walked home from his nearby office. Neighbors told police the stiletto-wielding assailant appeared to aim for Walker's heart.

The attacker took Walker's wristwatch and wallet and escaped.

Walker also recently survived a move to fire him from his district job. The 18-member board of directors split over his firing.

TALKS

on Hanoi's offer. Well-informed diplomatic sources said neither Washington nor Saigon was ready to bow to Communist conditions merely to obtain Tho's return to Paris.

The South Vietnamese delegation issued a statement saying there would be no talks while the Communist offensive continued. This appeared to rule out a resumption of the talks on Thursday.

"Le Duc Tho is now in Hanoi," Thuy said in answer to questions.

"He will be in Paris when the Paris conference on Vietnam resumes its work. If the conference does not resume its work and if the United States doesn't stop its escalation of the war against the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, then there can be no basis for private meetings," Thuy said.

French government sources said the government was prepared to provide the necessary facilities for any resumed Hanoi-Washington conversations.

Kissinger broke off the talks after realizing, according to U.S. officials, that it was worthless to hold private meetings with Thuy, the nominal delegation chief, since it was Tho, the nominal "adviser," who held true negotiating power.

It was Thuy, nevertheless, and his then deputy Col. Ha Van Lau, who negotiated the secret accord in 1968 with then Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and his deputy negotiator Cyrus Vance that ended the first heavy U.S. air raids on the North.

While protesting against the bombings Thuy demanded that the regular meetings, suspended by Washington on March 23, be resumed April 27.

Home Described By Magazine

The house of the John Holmes family on Cascade Drive, was constructed from 200 old windows, 85 of them stained glass, joists and ceiling boards from an old barn. Hardwood scraps form the floors.

The fixtures throughout the hillside house were obtained from junkyards.

Architect William Kirsch designed the house and had to change his plans many times as the unusual house took form.

With their creation completed and filled with used furniture, the Holmeses decided to sell their house and furniture and take a trip to Europe, according to the article.

troops in South Vietnam," he added.

Rogers also indicated he felt the raids would have little effect on U. S. relations with either China or the Soviet Union.

Rogers noted that some senators had criticized the Cambodian incursion in 1969, saying it would harm U.S. relations, but since that time Nixon has gone to China and "we are continuing to prepare for our trip to Moscow."

"As you can see, Mr. Chairman, the President's decision was right," Rogers said to Fulbright.

Asked whey the administration felt that bombing would be effective now, when it was not effective during the Johnson administration, Rogers said it was now a "different kind of war."

When Rogers said the "myth of a civil war" was destroyed by the North Vietnamese invasion, and that the bombing was against strictly military targets, a young man in the crowded visitors section stood and shouted:

"That's a lie! You bomb people, you bomb people, you bomb people."

The youth was quickly removed from the room by Capitol police.

At another point, Rogers asserted:

"We can't now just turn tail and leave our friend and ally alone. ...If the United States did an about face after all these years of supporting South Vietnam, I think there would be a major bloodbath in South Vietnam." In response to questions, Rogers said, "There is no doubt in my mind there would be a terrible massacre.

"Furthermore, it would destabilize that whole area."

He said complete U. S. withdrawal "would be a major disaster, a mistake of major proportions," adversely affecting not only South Vietnam but also Japan, Korea and the Philippines.

OBITUARIES

Wallace W. Weber, 86, Of San Anselmo, Dies

Private funeral for Wallace William Weber of San Anselmo was held today.

Weber, 86, died Friday in a local hospital.

A native of Olean, N.Y., he was graduated from the University of Michigan with a master's degree in forestry and journalism.

Weber joined the U.S. Forest Service in 1914, and spent his early years with the service in Oregon, Montana and Idaho. He and his wife, Gertrude, lived for 17 months during those early years in a log cabin in Montana. "All we had for recreation was hunting and fishing, and there were no neighbors," she recalled in an Independent-Journal interview when they celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in November 1965.

In 1923, he joined the Forest Products Laboratory in Madison, Wis., and served on the faculty at the University of Wisconsin. Weber, prior to his retirement in 1950, was director of information and education in charge of publication of tests of woods and development of wood byproducts.

He and his wife moved to Marin after he retired. The family home is at 377 Butterfield Road.

Weber was a member of the Voyageurs, a 50-year member of the American Society of Foresters and active in the Marin Garden Society, serving two terms as its president.

He also is survived by his daughter, Dorothy Wagner of San Anselmo, and three granddaughters.

His family asked that memorial contributions be made to either the Heart Fund or the Arthritis Foundation.

DROPOUT

dence that dropping out made matters worse," the authors say.

Thus, by treating the symptom rather than the problem, the report says the anti-dropout campaign "may do more harm than good since it distracts us from the more basic problems."

Secondly, the study recommends that the "highly deceptive" anti-dropout campaign "ought to be sharply curtailed" for at least three reasons:

1. There is little evidence to support the campaign's claims. And what evidence there is has sometimes been badly abused in order to make it more convincing, "for the implication is clear that if the potential dropout only stays in school then he can be just like the rest of the graduates."

2. The campaign gives dropouts a bad name among potential employers and society in general. "One of the side effects of downgrading the status of dropouts may be to encourage employers to make the diploma a requirement when it need not be" the report suggests.

3. The campaign may erode credibility."No doubt some young men are persuaded or partly persuaded by it," the authors write, "but one wonders how many others see through the oversimplifications and become still more skeptical and 'turned off' by what they perceive as propaganda."

O'BRIEN

threw his full support behind candidate Kennedy.

Thus, a serious party rift was averted, one which, if it had been encouraged by Humphrey, would doubtless have lost the election for the Democrats.

The words that the candidates have been using on each other thus far have not been that biting or personal.

Generally speaking, the charges levelled are of this variety:

That the other man is fuzzy on the issues. Or that he vacillates. Or that he can't win in the fall. Or that he is a tired candidate. Or that he can't appeal to the young and the black. Or that he was late on the war. And so on.

But even this goes much too far, as O'Brien sees it. He thinks that the President is vulnerable on the issues, particularly on the economy. And he wants the candidates to concentrate on hitting Nixon hard on these issues — and to stop haranguing each other.

He sees the Republicans chortling on the sidelines as they listen to the Democrats battling among themselves.

A GET-TOGETHER IN SPACE

Venus and the moon, goddess of love and her chief symbol, seem to terrestials to be keeping a rendezvous in this record of the heavenly event caught by Independent-Journal photographer Alfred M. Arn. But the meeting of the brilliant planet and Earth's luminous satellite was an illusion born of a spatial relationship that is all a matter of orbits. Venus was really about 65,000,000 miles beyond the moon. It will happen again in about 18 years.

State Death Penalty Plea Refused

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Supreme Court refused again Monday to delay temporarily th effect of a California Supreme Court decision invalidating the death sentence under the state's constitution.

California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger had told the Court that a denial of the request would prejudice the state's right to have the federal tribunal review the decision prior to a reduction of the sentences of death row inmates to life imprisonment.

Younger said the prisoners whose death sentences are modified would be subject to additional time in prison anyway, so their rights would not be affected.

The Court rejected the temporary stay request without comment.

Younger's appeal is still subject to high court consideration.

Bombing Of Russ Ships 'Criminal'

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union today published a protest note that accused the United States of committing a "criminal act" by damaging four Soviet merchant ships in air raids on Haiphong Harbor, principal port for North Vietnam.

The prttest demanded that U.S. officials adopt "strict measures to prevent the recurrence of such provocations."

Tass, the Soviet news agency, published the text of the note it delivered on Sunday to U.S. Ambassador Jacob D. Beam.

It said tha four Soviet ships hit by bombing and strafing attacks on Haiphong were the Simeropol, the Borish Lavrenev, the Samuil Marshal and the Selemzha.

The note said some of the port workers handling cargoes on the vessels were killed or wounded but it mentioned no injuries to Soviet citizens.

(Hanoi radio reported a Soviet officer wounded in the face.)

The Soviet note made no reference to the forthcoming visit of President Nixon to the Soviet Union in May.

"The USSR Ministry of Foreign Affairs, on instructions from the Soviet government, protests to the U.S. government about the criminal act against Soviet merchant ships in the port of Haiphong and insists on the immediate adoption by U.S. authorities of strict measures to prevent the recurrence of such provocations in the future," the note said.

It said the four ships received "numerous holes in the cabinets of the crews in particular. The lives and safety of Soviet seamen were jeopardized ..."

The strong language of the note was matched by the conditions under which it was delivered. Beam was summoned from his home late on Sunday evening to receive the protest rather than being allowed to wait until a more normal hour.

Pickets Line Campus At Berkeley

BERKELEY (UPI) —About 500 construction union employes of the University of California went on strike today and set up a picket line around the campus.

About 100 pickets were posted at the Telegraph Avenue entrance and other gates to the campus.

Classes were held as usual and student attendance was normal. There was apparently no effort to shut down academic activities.

University officials had warned students and employes that classes would continue and any employes participating in the strike would be subject to discipline.

However, more than 1,000 other union employes of the university, including some members of the faculty, were expected to stay off the job in sympathy with the construction workers. The campus has about 28,000 students.

The strike grew out of the university's decision to end its policy of matching construction union pay scales. The campus workers do not have a contract with the university but traditionally were paid union rates.

Unlike student strike attempts to shut down the campus, the walkout involves the established labor movement. It was sanctioned by the Alameda County Building Trades Council of the AFL-CIO.

The workers are demanding a contract with the university preserving union scales.

Report Was Given Consultant For ITT

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A Wall Street consultant testified today that White House aide Peter Flanigan gave him a report prepared by ITT before hiring him to make the study that helped convince the Justice Department to drop antitrust action against the corporation.

But Richard Ramsden, a partner in a New York investment management firm, told the Senate Judiciary Committee that Flanigan "in no way" attempted to influence his judgment.

He acknowledged Flanigan gave him a copy of a report written by ITT director Felix Rohatyn warning of dire financial consequences if the government interfered with the firm's multibillion dollar merger with the Hartford Fire Insurance Co.

Both Rohatyn's report and Ramsden's came to the same conclusion: that if ITT were forced to divest Hartford Fire, it would result in a $1.2 billion loss to stockholders.

Ramsden's study, which was billed as independent, outside advice from a stock market expert, was one of the factors that led the antitrust division to drop its suits against the ITT-Hartford merger and to settle out-of-court.

Ramsden said Flanigan handed him the ITT report at a 20-minute meeting at the White House last May 12. While saying Flanigan made no attempt to influence his views, he said the ITT report helped him "focus" on what issues his study was to cover.

"I knew what I had to do," he said.

Ramsden testified as the Senate committee entered what may be the final days of its inquiry into the 1971 out-of-court settlement between ITT and the Justice Department. At stake is Senate confirmation of Richard G. Kleindienst to be attorney general.

Ramsden testified: "Flanigan made no attempt, whatsoever, to influence my views concerning the matter I was asked to analyze."

ROBIN CLARKE
Eight schools

Novatan Wins Eagle Scout Rank

Robin Clarke of Troop 42 has been awarded eagle scout rank at a Court of Honor at West Novato School.

Clarke has been a scout since 1965.

The son of Mrm and Mrs. Frederick R. Clarke, 19 Viejo Way, Novato, Robin is a 9th grade student at Sinaloa Junior High School.

He was born in Tripoli, North Africa, 15 years ago. Since then, he has attended eight different schools while his father traveled as an Air Force pilot.

An honor roll student, Clarke is a member of the school track team and enjoys fishing, camping and model building.

Forum On Careers To Be Held

The Marin Industry-Education Council hopes to bring together students, educators and business people for a career forum during its spring conference from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. April 27.

Twelve "career clusters" will cover the following subjects: outdoor activities, health service, fine arts and crafts, office and clerical, transportation, communications, mechanical and machine, construction, buying and and selling, social and public service, personal service and scientific.

Each participant will be asked to attend any two workshops to discuss how a career will affect his life — how much money can be made, what skills and experience are required, and what kinds of jobs are available.

Advance registration forms, enabling students to leave classes for the forum, are available at county high schools or can be obtained from the office of Denis Ragan, work experience educator at Redwood High School, Larkspur.

Scientific Mission To Visit Asian Area

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A party of science, technology and health experts will leave April 30 on a two-week trip to Japan, Taiwan and Korea to gather data on common problems.

Edward E. David Jr., White House science advisor, said those on the mission will "discuss our respective science and technology policies...explore further possibilities for mutually beneficial relationships and...discuss problems such as environment and health which are common to all our countries."

Little Headway For Substandard Marinas

Richardson Bay houseboat marina owners are making little or no progress in upgrading their substandard docking facilities, the county's marine inspector has disclosed.

Richard L. Larson, in a report prepared for the county board of supervisors, said two of the three owners have made no progress while the third recently made a belated start.

The county earlier this year set a construction timetable for improvement of the marinas, long a target of criticism by the board of supervisors.

However, Larson said neither D. J. Arques nor Miriam Tellis have filed applications with the bay regional Water Quality Control Board for sewage plan review —the first of several required steps.

Approval of the plans normally takes about six weeks, Larson said, adding that the construction timetable called for approval two weeks ago.

George Kappas, who owns two marinas, filed his application last Monday.

Larson said the marina owners' failure to comply with the timetable has caused delays estimated to date at 45 to 60 days.

"The delays have been caused primarily by the owners and are not considered justifiable," he wrote.

Two Hurt In Freeway Accident

A sports car driver and his passenger were injured when their car struck a guard rail while northbound on Highway 101 on the Waldo Grade at 10 p.m. Friday, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Hamid Mehrbaklisk, 20, of San Francisco, the driver, was treated at Marin General Hospital for a fractured nose. The passenger, Mahammad Ali Ataif, 19, also of San Francisco, was treated for head cuts.

Officers said the auto swerved across one lane, then skidded 132 feet along the center guard rail, about one third of a mile south of the Rodeo Avenue offramp.

Needy Child Dental Care Program Urged

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The president of the American Dental Association has urged passage of a bill providing federal funds for pilot programs of dental care for needy children.

Dr. Carl A. Laughlin of Clarksburg, W. Va., said the measure, now in the House after passing the Senate 88-1, would make dental care available "to children who are presently unable to afford care and who, for that reason, are in need of dental care."

Laughlin spoke Sunday at the 102nd annual scientific meeting of the California Dental Association.

He said the dental health of youngsters in poverty is "woefully poor," with not only massive decay problems but also orthodontic disorders and gum diseases.

The Children's Dental Health Act also would provide funds to help communities and schools voluntarily fluoridate their water and help pay for the training of dental assistants, hygienists and technicians, Laughlin said.

"Many of the communities that do not have fluoridated water supplies simply do not have the funds to install the equipment," he said, noting that only about half the nation's public water supplies are fluoridated.

China Flyovers For Opium Urged

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A Stanford University researcher says the United States should finance "poppy reconnaissance" flights over China to search for opium plantations.

Dr. Stefan T. Possony, director of research at the Hoover Institution of War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford, cited U. N. figures which estimate the total world production of illicit opium at 1,400 tons annually.

He suggested that 300 to 400 tons of this comes from China.

RED CROSS CHAIRMAN — William H. Johnson of 47 Upper North Terrace, Tiburon, has been reelected chairman of the Golden Gate Red Cross Chapter. He will also serve as chairman of the American Red Cross convention in San Francisco, April 30 through May 3.

Report Says PG&E, Edison Are Clean

NEW YORK (UPI)—A study by the Council on Economic Priorities says the cleanest electric plants in the nation are operated by two California producers.

The council, in a survey of 15 leading utilities, cited the Pacific Gas and Electric of San Francisco and Southern California Edison of Los Angeles.

The report said strict California air pollution standards were partially responsible for the outstanding performance of the two companies.

INDEPENDENT STUDY

The council, an independent environmental group headquartered in New York, said the survey was undertaken to evaluate the degree of commitment of each company to environmental protection.

The study also designed to determine the actual results in pollution abatement, to estimate what each company would have to spend to bring pollution control up to date and to evaluate relative commitments to advertising and research.

EDISON FIRST

The council ranked Southern California Edison as first on the list of firms, which have recognized their environmental responsibility.

The report said it would require an investment of between $1.3 billion and $2.2 billion by the utilities to bring their pollution standards to acceptable levels.

The worst offenders, according to the council, were the Southern Company of Atlanta; American Electric Power of New York and Commonwealth Edison of Chicago.

The study concluded that electric utilities are more interested in advertising than in pollution control and have done little overall to reduce air pollution from their plants.

PLANTS ACCUSED

The research group accused two power plants in the Southwest of producing as much particulate air pollution as the nation's two largest and smoggiest cities combined.

The researchers said the effect on the environment of the Four Corners plant, at Farmington, N.M., and the Mohave plant, in Southern Nevada, "so far has been astonishing."

The report, 13 months in the making, said the two existing co-powered plants, along with four more that have been proposed, mean "the nation's last great clean air region faces many decades of serious air pollution."

Changing Nature Of College Football

It scarcely got the attention given the professional baseball players' strike, but Sonoma State College's decision not to field a football team next fall may be of more significanace in its indication of change in the world of sports.

The resolution adopted by Sonoma State College Academic Senate announced a moratorium on intercollegiate football "until such time as adequate financing from state, campus and community groups is realized."

Judging from the history of the grid sport at the Rohnert Park school so far, that may be a long moratorium.

Sonoma State has never had a winning football team. That no doubt has been largely responsible for the sport's financial problems. If the team had been winning, the Associated Students of Sonoma State might not have cut off its student body funds. If it had started winning, the citizen supporters who picked up the tab to underwrite football losses might have gone along for another year or two, hoping for a team that would draw more customers through the gates. But it didn't win.

THIS POINTS UP the reality of the college football situation, as it now exists.

Football is an expensive sport. It requires a large squad, much equipment. To make it a paying proposition at the college level, it must attract large enough crowds to fill a fair-sized stadium. But to build such a stadium itself is extremely expensive.

Moreover, the proliferation of colleges has crowded the field, and has dispersed loyalties too widely. The new colleges — such as Sonoma — have no backlog of old grads for whom the grid team becomes the strongest link to the alma mater. They are, as the politicians would put it, largely without a constituency.

About the only way a new college can field a football team that has a chance to pay its way is to "go professional" — go out and recruit, with fat athletic scholarships, enough top high school athletes to make a "powerhouse" team. But to do that also takes money — and about the only place to get that money is from alumni, whom the new college lacks.

The high cost of fielding a contender has proved too much for some of the older schools. Bay Area Jesuit colleges, after dropping football and picking it up again, decided the expense was too great.

IN ESSENCE, football has become a professional sport. Its days as a matter of intercollegiate rivalry exist mostly in memory. The emphasis today is on the professional teams' bidding for the college stars. Even the schools long famous for their "big teams" have become largely farm clubs for the pros.

So the decision at Sonoma State is not surprising. We expect similar decisions at many more of the colleges. And we would not be surprised if new colleges starting in the next decade make no effort to have intercollegiate football at all.

WHO'S FOR CLEAN AIR?

Councilman Reed's Defeat Important To Smog Board

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

The defeat last week of San Anselmo City Councilman James F. Reed III in his bid for reelection was a loss to all the people of Marin who remember clean air.

Reed was in line to replace retiring Sausalito City Councilman Wyman Hicks as one of Marin's two representatives on the 18-member board of directors of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District. The Marin County Council of Mayors and Councilmen can replace Hicks only with anothar city councilman, so Reed cannot be considered unless a recount puts him back into office.

The council of city officials thus faces a critically important selection, but no candidate can be detected yet with the requisite interest and ability to replace Hicks. The retiring Sausalito councilman has been fiercely independent and tough, and will be missed. Reed would have been an excellent replacement, judging from his strong performance on the smog district's advisory council.

THE GREAT DANGER is that Marin's new representative on the smog board will be absorbed by its staff, becoming just another board hack parroting the party line for the top administrator, D. J. Callaghan. All Callaghan demands from his loyal directors is that they sing in harmony when he recites what a magnificent job they all are doing cleaning up air pollution.

Any who challenge this litany are damned as heretics, inspired by the devil into a frenzy to discredit the district and its great leader, Callaghan.

Thanks to Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., Marin's other voice on the smog board, the county already suffers from the burden of being represented by an official who backs to the hilt Callaghan's ailing administration. Arrigoni has stood firm against a wave of public opinion challenging Callaghan.

The critical point is that Callaghan's support on the smog board has dwindled to a bare majority at best, so Marin's second vote on the board could tip the scales.

OPPONENTS OF balanced transportation betweeen Marin and San Francisco will mount a final attack on the Golden Gate Bridge District's ferry plans Wednesday evening, and citizens with a stake in the outcome will have a last chance as well to counter this attack.

The occasion will be a hearing at 8 p.m. in toll plaza offices on the district's pending $12 million application for a federal grant to pay two-thirds of the cost of the ferry system. The record of the hearing will be weighed by the government in considering the grant.

The district's chance of getting the grant will be damaged if the record is tipped heavily in favor of ferry opponents, which include Harbor Tours Inc., private operator of ferries on the bay, and the small but vocal Marin County Taxpayers Association.

It's $12 million at stake.

TODAY'S WORLD

$400 Million For Campaign Funds; Will New Law Change How They're Raised?

(The cost of this presidential year election is projected to run about $400,000,000. A new federal election campaign law calls for a closer look at who contributes, who spends, and who gets this money.)

By RICHARD L. STROUT

WASHINGTON, D.C. — It cost $300 million to carry through the last presidential year election, at least a third of that spent on the race for the White House.

The expense in 1972 may be $400 million — perhaps higher.

There will be one thing different however. There will be a closer inspection of who puts up the money, who spends it, who gets it.

ON APRIL 7, the new federal Election Campaign Act took effect. It was passed by an anxious Congress and signed by President Nixon, who called it a "realistic and enforceable . . . step forward in an area which has been of great public concern."

Some think the law marks a new era; some see it as a Galahad riding upon a white charger to rescue the fair maiden, Popular Election, from the corrupt dragon, Political Pelf. Cynics arent' convinced.

"That's what they said about the federal Corrupt Practices Act of 1925," they snort. "That was to produce 'a new era' 47 years ago. It was never enforced, never enforceable. It was window dressing, worse than useless, for it gave innocents the feeling that safeguards existed when they didn't.

"Nobody was indicted under it. It finally took a public interest group, Common Cause, under John W. Gardner, in January 1971, to sue both political parties to cease violation. When the court gave the suit standing, last August, Congress finally moved to reform. You can't separate politics from the pay off. Look at ITT."

THE CHARGE AGAINST ITT, of course hasn't been proved. There is an almost universal feeling, however, that sterner accounting measures are necessary. Herbert E. Alexander, America's leading authority on campaign spending and one of the authors of the new law, tells a reporter that he is hopeful, very hopeful, that the new act marks a beginning to a better day.

His new book "Money in Politics" (Public Affairs Press, Washington, D.C.) appared April 7 to coincide with the new law that he helped to draw. Right at the start this quiet, factual, bipartisan student and reformer challenges some of the public's dearest conceptions.

"Yes," he agrees, "the cost of politics is going up. But no, "he believes," the problem is not so much to limit total spending as to fashion a system where the funds will be democratically raised and publicly accounted for." If the rader will consider two or three recent examples of dollar influence he will probably agree that the time ahs come fordrastic reform.

"THE PRESIDENT'S CLUB." This cozy little arrangement was one of the biggest Democratic money raisers. It was started in 1961 and based in large part on the snob appeal of being allowed to talk and dine with the President. The membership reached 4,000 in 1964 and paid $1,000 each.

A major attraction was the idea that members had occasional opportunity to meet the President and might even be invited to the White House. To the extent laws allowed, the names of members were secret. In total the club raised at least $6,371,000 and developed an elite financial constituency, and political favors were alleged.

CONVENTION BOOKS: Another questionable but remunerative way of raising money was the sale of full-page advertisements in convention books issued by the rival parties. Until 1964 the two parties charged $5,000 a page. In 1964 the Democrats published theirs as a Kennedy memorial at $15,000 a page. Republicans raised their price to $10,000 a page.

Many government contractors bought pages. The reaction of prss and public was hostile and the protest reached Congress. One test of the new 1972 law will be whether the lucrative purchase of "public service advertising" by big corporations will be revived.

CORPORATE INFLUENCE. Long before the ITT case executives of corporations made political donations. Under the old law the ceiling was $5,000 but there was no limit on the number of committees to which checks could be given.

A year ago disgruntled dairymen complained to Mr. Nixon of a ruling by then Agriculture Sec. Clifford Hardin. The latter reversed his ruling shortly thereafter, with an advantage to the industry computed to some as $400,000.

Shortly thereafter newspapers discovered 25 "dummy" fronts into which dairy industry leaders had been funneling campaign funds. The poetic titles of these committees may have disarmed the suspicious: one was "Committee for Political Integrity," and another, "Citizens United in Pursuit of the American Dream."

THE AMERICAN VOTER is slow acting, but a certain cynicism grew up over such disclosures in the course of the past 30 or 40 years. It is the general thesis of Mr. Alexander, the philosopher of the affair, that the public is going off on the wrong scent in denouncing the amount spent on elections.

With primaries, run-offs, conventions, and 500,000 electoral public offices sought by perhaps one million candidates, he asks if $400 million is really too much for a presidential election year?

"Relatively," he argues, "the dollar price is not especially high." The high cost, he argues, comes in "the irrational, irresponsible way, in which we raise and spend the dollars."

Where the one problem comes, and every month in the 1972 campaign seems to emphasize it, is that one big political party is affluent (Republican), another party (Democratic) is broke.

MONEY DOES HELP. It is believed that big spending helped John F. Kennedy compensate for anti-Catholic sentiment in 1960.

In 1968 the Democrats, in their presidential general election campaign budget of $10.6 millions, spent less than one-half what the Republicans did. In spite of this the result was extraordinarily close. The $9 million deficit that was hung over the Democrats since has tended to demoralize the party faithful.

MANY THINGS CHANGED as of April 7.

1. The new law requires full disclosure of all contributions over $100.

2. It limits what candidates for federal offices may spend to 10 cents times the voting population of the election district, or $50,000, whichever is greater.

3. No candidate may spend more than 60 per cent on broadcast advertising.

4. It requires full reporting, either to the clerk of the House, secretary of the Senate, or the comptroller general for presidential candidates.

There are many other details. But what many call the biggest problem is still unsolved — how to put the raising of campaign funds on a more general, universal, democratic basis.

CONGRESS PASSED a campaign subsidy bill in the Revenue Act of 1971, but postponed operation till January, 1973, and President Nixon has promised to do all in his power to defeat it if he is re-elected.

The law lets a political contributor, if he chooses, claim either (A) a tax credit on his income tax for 50 per cent of his gift, up to $12.50 on a single return of $25 on a joint return; or (B) take a deduction for the full amount of his contribution up to $50 on a single return or $100 on a joint return.

The IRS estimates that this would raise $100 million.

The Republicans opposed this check-off provision in the Senate, and the impoverished Democrats fought for it and enacted it. Under threat of presidential veto the date of operation was deferred to next January.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Minority Elects City's Councilmen

"There is no joy in Mudville."

The election in San Anselmo involved 45.5 per cent of the 7,007 registered voters; 3,190 turned out to vote — an unusually large turnout for our municipal election.

Of that number, we see that 66 per cent of our voters wanted a change in town and hence voted against Reed and Anderson. So split was the vote, however, that the two highest contenders (Reed and Anderson) received only 15 per cent of the vote of registered voters in town or 34 per cent of those who actually voted. Scarcely a plurality!

Unless we take steps to have a runoff election we will continue to have what we are getting — men who represent only a fraction of the citizens.

Now, although the rebuilding of the bridge at Guasco's was unanimously deplored by those attending the San Anselmo Town Meeting, watch this newest section of Highway 17 being rushed to completion by Reed and Anderson — "to serve the 400 apartments which will be built in Fairfax" according to Mr. Leitzell — to make way for commute buses on Center Boulevard according to Mr. Reed — to further devastate San Anselmo according to the writer.

Quality Of Marin's Judges Impresses

I've just finished my first stint at jury duty and am highly impressed with the quality and integrity of the judges, and the tact and efficiency of the jury commissioner's staff. It is reassuring to see the care taken to insure that a fair trial will be held.

If the judges I listened to are an example of the rest, one could almost feel happy at being brought to trial in Marin County.

Nixon's Own Supporters Turn On His Busing Plan

WASHINGTON — Try to imagine that a Republican President proposed a law to frustrate the consistently expressed opinion of the federal courts, a measure that would have the calculated effect of curtailing desegregation of public schools. You would expect the liberal Democratic champions of civil rights to raise hell, and you would be right.

Our current President, 13th GOP successor to the office held by Abraham Lincoln, has made such a proposal, and his traditional enemies have reacted with predictable fury. Mr. Nixon's effort to inspire Congress to do what he himself cannot do — to pass a law halting new busing orders by the courts — has come before the House Judiciary and Education committees. And, right on cue, the civil rights advocates have appeared in opposition.

The likes of Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., the veteran Judiciary Committee chairman; Joseph L. Rauh Jr., the omnipresent of Americans for Democratic Action, and John Doar, the familiar figure in many a southern showdown during the Kennedy administration, all have said their scathing pieces.

SO WHAT ELSE is new? So, once they gave the President's scheme a second look and started seeking statistics to back up his contentions, key members of Mr. Nixon's own party and even his own administration were forced to turn on his proposal. That is the essential development so far in capitol hearings on the Nixon idea, and if there is any justice, it should spare legislators the embarrassment of ever having to cast floor votes on this extremely dubious measure.

The President made the proposal, you will recall, by taking to television — after his spokesmen had said he would not use television for that purpose — and calling for congressional action against busing two days after George Wallace won the Florida Democratic primary largely on the basis of his opposition to busing.

The charitable may insist there was nothing political about Mr. Nixon's move. They may maintain that when he said he reserved judgment on a constitutional amendment to achieve the same purpose because it would take too long, he still was not being political — that his demand to stop further busing now instead of later had no relation to the fact that an election is scheduled this fall. They also may agree that the confusion, contradiction, turmoil and agonized concern he espied abroad in the land were the results solely of federal courts overstepping their authority — and not, by any means, to political inflation of the busing issue far beyond its real life proportions.

Even those believers must have been impressed, however, when Stephen Horn, vice chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, cited figures supplied by John A. Volpe, Mr. Nixon's own secretary of transportation, in suggesting that the vast sums of money being spent by schools for racial busing were a convenient apparition in the President's imagination. In fact, less than one per cent of the increase in school busing costs last year related to desegregation orders.

Horn asserted that the Nixon proposal would "represent the first retrogressive legislative action in the field of civil rights in this generation." But then, his testimony must be suspect, because although the Civil Rights Commission is nonpartisan, its very name smacks of partiality.

WHO, THEN, might make a credible witness, not suspected of adverse partisanship? Surely no one could argue with the qualifications of the very gentleman who introduced the proposal on the President's behalf, the senior Republican on the Judiciary Committee. At least no administration supporter should argue about him.

So, for the record, here are some of the things the congressman from Ohio, Rep. William McCulloch, said from his conscience after giving the Nixon measure almost a month's consideration.

"It is with the deepest regret that I sit here today to listen to a spokesman for a Republican administration asking the Congress to prostitute the courts by obligating them to suspend the equal protection clause so that Congress may debate the merits of further slowing down and perhaps even rolling back desegregation in public schools . . .

"Wasn't it only yesterday that we in Congress told our deprived citizens to press their claims not in the streets but in the courts? Now, when some of them have taken their cases to the courts and under the law of the land have won victories, it is suggested that it is time to change the rules.

"What message are we sending to our black people? Is this any way to govern a country? Is this any way to bring peace to a troubled land?"

The gentleman is still awaiting an adequate answer.

Despite Awareness Games, Party's Still Make-Believe

A "special occasion," loosely translated, means the family eats out at Howard Johnson's. Followed, if everybody is good, by a night at the drive-in, watching a couple of 1970 westerns.

It wasn't always so. Once upon a time the "special occasion" was a more formal, more calculated art form. The associative word for party used to be glamor. The idea was to dress up yourself and your world — to stage an illusion beyond limits you would ever be able to sustain in day-to-day life.

The party, in fact, was a kind of theater. A successful party was the "special occasion" when the American middle class became the upper class — and the upper class became European aristocracy — just for the night. It offered egalitarians a guilt free chance to role play at elegance. Instant upward mobility.

THE MOVIES used to satisfy this appetite vicariously. Stars of the Hollywood vintage years — Cary Grant, William Powell, Irene Dunne, Myrna Loy — were practically defined as people you could never imagine in blue jeans. Then along came Marlon Brando, scratching his T-shirt.

Deliberate attempts at high style began to seem snobbish, phony. In private life the damask covered table with candlesticks gave way to the gang around the barbecue pit. Even in Camelot, the Kennedys took the curse off formal wear by pushing each other into the swimming pool — by making one thing perfectly clear: that the real party was on the tag football field.

The sharp, artificial division between a party and the rest of life has broken down. The critical jargon of partygoers is an indicator. It used to be that "Swell time, Harry and Gladys" (and, of course, "gruesome party," spoken sotto voce on the way home, to your wife) were about all the analytical terms required. Now partygoers say things like: "I couldn't relate."

The party has tended to become one more "interpersonal problem," one more testing ground for identity crises. There are no holidays, evidently, for latterday egos in search of themselves. And they have done their compulsive best to turn the party into a disguised form of group therapy. The old tyranny of etiquette has yeilded to the new tyranny of consciousness raising.

Just as old style parties ran the risk of being bad parodies of Fred Astaire musicals, new style parties are likely to be bad parodies of "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice."

THERE IS NO ESCAPING the truth game players. Handbooks are even being made available fgr them, like "Reality Games" by Saville Sax and Sandra Hollander. Saville and Sandra want to turn life into a kind of nonstop educational party where people will soberly play games to teach themselves "social skills." The aim is nothing less than to plant the "seeds for a New Social Ecology" — and just try to put taps to that, Fred Astaire.

Yet these "Bob and Carol" games fail to avoid a curious artificiality of their own — exactly the quality, alas, the Savilles and Sandras pride themselves on eliminating. For unless they opt for total hostility, they are confronting the same old dilemma of all party etiquette codes: How to be honest without being unkind, how to be kind without being dishonest.

Typically Saville and Sandra convert this problem into the "Compliment Game," which may be taken as a sample of who-is-letting-down-what-hair.

The old etiquette according to Emily Post ordered one to tell the hostess one liked her hat and enjoyed her party. The new etiquette according to Saville and Sandra orders one to follow — stand by for euphemisms! — "the rule of positive feedback." When one feels like saying, "You are all wrong because your premise is wrong," one is advised to say: "Your position is clearly, movingly, and logically stated. Unfortunately, I cannot agree with your premises, because . . ."

The Saville and Sandra reader gets a sinking sensation that right or wrong premises don't really matter as long as everybody "relates." Yet obviously more is at stake than a hostess's hat.

PRETENDING TO BE serious is the new hypocrisy of partygoers. Like most compromises, it doubly offends. When Leonard Bernstein famously combined old line caviar with new line politics, the caterers should have felt insulted as well as the Black Panthers.

At least the old style parties knew they were make believe.

Perhaps the final judgment of future generations on today's games people will read: "They couldn't tell the difference between their parties and their lives." And it may be a more damaging indictment than anybody realizes.

Lawyers Campaign Against No-Fault

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— "Lawyers have traditionally been notorious for being dilatory and extravagant operators," the author of the no-fault automobile insurance concept declared today.

"Waste and delay are the inevitable consequences of the insurance business turning over the definition of the insured event to lawyers," professor Jeffrey O'Connell said in remarks prepared for the National Association of Fleet Administrators, Inc.

"Any business that allows itself to be turned over to lawyers gets itself in very bad trouble, especially with delay and waste."

O'Connell, onetime trial lawyer who now teaches law at the University of Illinois, said tpat 56 cents of each auto insurance dollar is "chewed up in insurance overhead and legal fees, with only 44 cents left for actually paying traffic victims."

Under his concept, traffic victims would be paid by their own insurance companies with no attempt to decide which driver was at fault in an accident. Usually there would be no recourse to courts.

At present, accident cases are settled in courts, with the person at fault bearing the expense.

"The result is not a system for paying people automobile accident insurance after automobile accidents, but a system for fighting people about paying them automobile insurance after automobile accidents," O'Connell declared.

The association he addressed is made up of men who are responsible for the buying, use and replacement of cars used by industry and government.

Lawyers Are Criticized By Author Of No-Fault

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Trial lawyers have launched what they hope will become a statewide campaign against nofault automobile insurance proposals, activating what may be their most powerful weapon — their clients.

About 200 clients and a few attorneys gathered in Sacramento during the weekend for a short course on the pitfalls of most no-fault plans and the handling of personal injury cases under the present and proposed plans.

Morton Friedman, a trial lawyer, said attorneys hope to sponsor similar forums for clients throughout the state to explain pending no-fault legislation and "the inequities of these measures."

Herbert Hatif, president of the California Trial Lawyers Association, said, "My prayer is that we can show the legislature that 100,000 persons (the estimated number of persons injured in California auto accidents yearly) and their families are more important than fenders."

Hatif contends most no-fault proposals take away too many rights —principally the one to sue the person who was at fault.

Top Court Ruling Due On Spill Law

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Supreme Court agreed today to decide next term whether a state can have a tougher oil spill law than the federal government.

The issue was brought to the Court in an appeal by Florida authorities from a ruling of a special three-judge federal panel which invalidated the state's oil spill prevention act late last year.

The Court will hear arguments next fall or winter on the state's appeal and hand down a written opinion later.

In other actions, the Court:

—Dismissed an appeal by 34 University of Maryland students who deliberately tested the constitutionality of a state law prohibiting persons to remain in public premises, such as campus buildings, after official closing hours.

—Refused to review lower court decisions approving a school desegregation plan for Dade County, Fla., which kept one-fourth of the pupils in all-black schools.

The Florida law was designed to protect the state's coast and beaches from spillage by oil tankers plying to and from Florida ports.

The lower court held on Dec. 10, 1971, that Florida had sought to legislate substantive maritime law which is exclusively within the federal domain. The opinion cited the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970, which became effective a few months before the state law did.

Both statutes subject vessels and onshore and offshore facilities to liability for cleanup costs, but the state law is stricter. Enacted in June, 1970, it also provides for damages "resulting from injury to others"

The state statute was to have become effective March 15, 1971. A temporary order barring the state from enforcing the law is now permanent as a result of the Dec. 10 decision.

The challenge was brought by the American Institute of Merchant Shipping, a group of indemnity associations, and 13 firms owning tankers. They argued, among other things, that they would be held liable for happenings beyond their control.

Atty. Gen. Arthur K. Bolton of Georgia filed a brief in support of Florida. He said the case "vitally affects the ability of the coastal states to protect their beaches, marsh lands, coastal properties ... against the ravages of pollution emanating from oil spill and similar contaminating discharges ..."

Woman Escapes Male Attacker

A 25-year-old woman from Santa Monica in Los Angeles County had to leap from a moving truck in Muir Woods yesterday about 12:15 p.m. to escape an attacker who had picked her up earlier in Sausalito when she was hitchhiking.

The woman, Gail Wegman, was reported in satisfactory condition today at Marin General Hospital with a broken left arm, cuts and bruises.

Sheriff's deputies were searching today for her attacker, described as white, 33 to 35 years old, about five-feet, 10 inches tall, 145 pounds, with black, greasy hair. He was driving a faded red Dodge pickup truck.

Deputies said the victim told them she had been choked and had to kick out a window of the truck, then leap out onto the road. Park rangers called sheriff's deputies.

Five Guerrillas Die In Gunfight

MANILA (UPI) — Outnumbered army troopers killed two field commanders and five guerrillas of the Maoist New Peoples Army (NPA) in a two-hour battle Sunday night in Isagela Province, 280 miles north of Manila, a military spokesman said today.

The spokesman said the government side suffered no casualties.

The firefight began at 6 p.m. between a Philippine army platoon of 24 men and 30 to 40 Communist guerrillas, the spokesman said. After two hours, the dissidents fled, leaving behind their dead and firearms including a grenade launcher, two Browning automatic rifles, one carbine and a 12-gage shotgun.

School Site Annex Plea Due Study

The Novato Unified School District board will consider requesting the City of Novato to annex a 10-acre school site at Mill Road and Trumbull Avenue at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Novato High School lecture hall.

Supt. James G. Bunker said the site could serve as a neighborhood play area and annexation would provide city police protection.

COIL — Needlemaking begins with Walter Kimball and a coil of steel. His father started in the business in 1900, and in 1934 Walter and father formed the Kimball Needle Co. in Lynn, Mass. Needlemaker Isn't Just Sew-Sew

By VIRGINIA TUCKER

LYNN, Mass. — Walter Kimball is a god man to know if you plan to go routing through haystacks: He has thousands of needles.

Kimball has been making needles for 38 years and is part of the reason why when you walk your uppers stay connected with your soles.

Kimball needle Co. makes needles for sewing shoes. Not only that, it makes awls to go with the needles. (An awl is a funnylooking piece of curved steel that punches holes in the sole leather so the needle can easily move through and make a lockstitch.)

In the modern world of plastics and rubber cements, many shoes are being glued together. Even so there is a large demand for old-fashioned, quality stitched shoes. Many men's shoes use the needle and awl method, and some ladies' shoes are stitched.

Herbert L. Kimball, Walter's father, started in the needle business in 1900, and Walter and his father formed Kimball Needle Co. in 1934. It has been going strongly ever since.

A typical order from shoe manufacturers can call for as many as 10,000 needles at a time.

The company's beginnings were humble, but not exactly simple. Since Kimball, from the start, has been one of only two companies of its kind in the United States, there wasn't much in the way of "standard" equipment. Every machine used in making the needles had to be especially designed and made.

Kimball says of his father: "He was the type of person who would be sitting there and see a machine in his head." He would draft his idea and make a model in wood before the final machine was made.

Kimball ingenuity still holds, though the plant has moved from the family garage to a building in downtown Lynn.

Walter Kimball now custom designs and makes the parts and machines of his trade, including the cutters for putting the eyes in the needles.

Needles and awls both start from high-carbon steel wire which has to go through 12 processes.

Machines cut, bend, trim, and shape the steel. The final products have to be an almost perfect half-circle (a variation of 1/1000th of an inch is all that's permissible). Then they are put into an electric furnace and heated to 1,420 degrees F.

They are shined by tumbling for eight hours in a machine filled with buffing material, and checked by hand for precision and quality before being packed off to the men who make your shoes.

Kimball likes his work. "I'm always doing something different," he says. And he likes being his own boss.

"I do what I want to do around the shop as it's needed. Working for someone else would be less fun — it could be a real drag!"

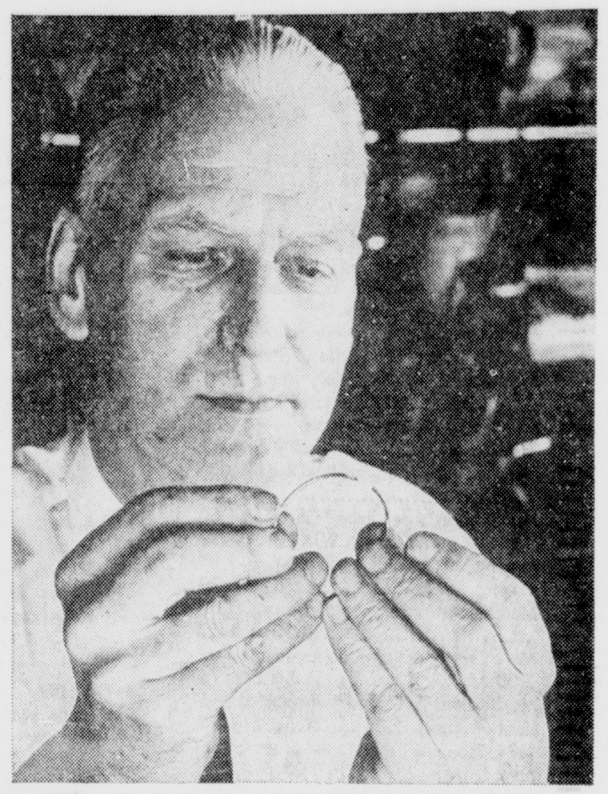
Restaurant Liquor Permit On Agenda

The San Anselmo Planning Commission will consider liquor and entertainment permit proposals for a planned new restaurant when it meets today at 8 p.m. at city hall.

The restaurant is proposed for 137 Tunstead Avenue. Applicant is Darris Bruhn.



AWL — Needle in a haystack? There may be such visions but to Walter Kimball needles are business. So are awls, such as the one he is holding — a curved piece of steel used in punching leather soles.

LYNN YOUNG, a medical artist, looks through a snooper scope extension of the microscope Dr. Francis A. Sooy is using as he performs an operation on an ear. She sketches the procedure and later makes the sketches into finished drawings to be used in textbooks and articles.

IN SAUSALITO

Artist Draws Attention

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

A medical artist who lives in Sausalito, Lynn Young is surprised that she has almost instantly received national prominence.

Since she was one on nine contemporary American women featured by Time magazine in its special issue on "The American Woman" March 20, she has had letters from all over the country.

"Many from friends, of course, but a lot from girls interested in careers," she said.

To many, the 33-year-old medical illustrator, earning some $20,000 a year, seems to be the ideal career woman, but Lynn thinks the article made her "sound tough" and is surprised that the letters contained no hate-response.

"I got a good reaction from a lot of women who said they were pleased someone finally had said that being married and having children isn't necessarily the greatest thing in life.

"I'm no Women's Libber, though," she maintained, "probably because I myself have never met any discrimination. In my work they wouldn't care if I were Minnie Mouse.

"Women's Lib has opened up a lot of area," she confessed. "I'm in favor of equal pay for equal work and against any sex discrimination, but I think some of the extremists in the movement are a bit ridiculous."

After completing her education and beginning her career, Lynn was married for three years to her high school boy friend. She is now divorced, with no regrets. She has no children.

"I don't believe all women should be programmed into marrying and having children," she said. "I love men and being with them, but I don't want to be with a man who bores me. Many women are afraid not to be married, but getting married for security is a dumb reason.

"MAYBE IF I had a boring job I would marry the first man who came along, but I can afford to be independent. I have been on my own for so long it would be hard to be tied down, but I don't feel any the less feminine for being as I am. I'm simply being true to myself.

"I can handle being alone. In fact, I really need it for my mental health, though I love people and have a wide circle of friends."

Lynn, who has a deep tan from playing tennis, explained her unusual career as a medical artist since 1960 at the University of California Hospital in San Francisco.

She works mainly with Dr. Francis A. Sooy, an ear, nose and throat specialist, as one of the few ear, nose and throat illustrators in the country. She and Dr. Sooy won a first prize from the American Medical Association in 1964 for their study of the embryology of the ear.

"I sit beside the doctor as he operates," she explained, "sketching what he does, later working up the sketches into finished drawings used as illustrations for textbooks and articles. People often ask, 'why don't they just photograph the work' You can't, because there is not way of photographing it selectively. All you would see would be a lot of hands, blood and instruments. I simplify everything and make what amounts to a how-to-do-it book.

"Working on the ear is especially fascinating because surgery is done looking through a microscope — the space in the middle ear is about the size of a pea. I have to sit beside the doctor looking through a snooper scope extension of his microscope.

"Medical art," she continued, "is working with minutiae. I'm a perfectionist and the tinier the details the better I like is. The more time I can spend on them, the more fun it is for me. I'm actually sick when something is finished."

The media Lynn works in are half tones, pen and ink drawings and pastel color, but not often with color because it costs so much.

Explaining how she happened to select her career, Lynn said, "I've always loved art, especially drawing of minutiae, and always been fascinated with anatomy and medicine since I was in high school. (She is a graduate of Menlo-Atherton High School).

"A friend who was a medical student at Stanford increased my interest, and I rushed down and bought Gray's Anatomy. But I never did really want to be a doctor," she emphasized. "I knew right from the first that I wanted to be a medical artist.

LYNN ENROLLED first as a pre-medical student at the University of California just to get medical background, then friends and just for fun, many of them campy gags or cartoons.

"Actually I get paid for about one-third of my stuff," she said with a laugh. "Two-thirds I do just because I enjoy it."

She find she is getting more and more into commercial art. For the past four years she has been doing brochures, posters and calendars for John Gardiner's tennis ranches in Arizona and Carmel, where she first became a tennis addict. In that time she has become expert enough to win an Olympic Club trophy and another trophy in a mixed doubles tournament in Texas.

"I don't think of myself as a caricaturist," she says, "but transferred to the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland for training in the art aspects of the work.

She completed her training in the medical art program at the University of California and was graduated in 1959 with a degree in medical illustration and was immediately hired at the University of California hospital as a general illustrator. She became a specialist in her present work in 1963-64.

Lynn has also done a great deal of free lance work, such as spinal surgery drawings for an orthopedic surgeon in Los Angeles, which were incorporated into a textbook, all drawings for a new abortion procedure and large drawings for malpractice or accident insurance cases tried in court.

Often she does things free for much of this work for tennis tends to be humorous, and I put just as much minutiae into it as into my medical art."

Lynn has also designed blocks decorated with animals for children, wing-tipped tennis shoes and her own furniture, which she had made in Hong Kong.

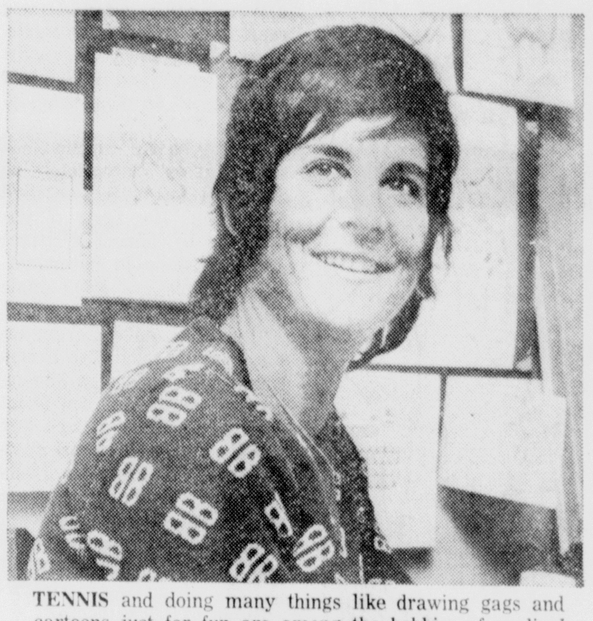
AS FOR THE future, she says she plans to work into all areas of sport and has just formed a new company named Con-Lyle with her friend Marion Conrad of the Marion Conrad Public Relations firm in San Francisco.

She will be doing art work for all leisure time activities, primarily tennis, she said, adding "but I'll never give up my medical art. That is my first love."

Lynn advises any girl or young medical who would like to be a medical artist to write for information on where training is available to: Octavia Garlington, Corresponding Secretary, Medical College of Georgia, Augusta, Ga.

In may she will be participating in a charity project with her friend, movie star Janet Leigh, whom she met at the tennis ranch.

Free and independent, why, indeed, should Lynn Young think of flying into the marriage cage again — unless, as she admitted with a grin, "the right non-boring man comes along."



TENNIS and doing many things like drawing gags and cartoons just for fun are among the hobbies of medical artist Lynn Young. At the work table in her Sausalito home she has just put finishing touches to one of a series of animal postal cards — a kangaroo in tennis shoes who has just stepped in a piece of chewing gum.

Jean Patou Salon Has Everything

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI)—The Jean Patou salon's winter ready-to-wear collection needs only a motorcycle.

Slick leather tight pants with blossom blouse-on tops paraded before press and buyers, and one outfit even had rhinestone nailheads on the jacket plus a pink bunny for color.

The Patou collection dived headfirst into leather pants suits, with slick leather outnumbering suede.

Clumps of colored rabbits decorated the sleeves of some trouser outfits.

SUEDE CUT like men's shorts were tamed with red wool knitted trousers. "Little girl" leather jumpers were worn over turtle-neck tops.

In all the ready-to-wear collections so far the trouser suits still reigned supreme.

COATS LOOKED like suits with red wool tops and snug waists.

Pinnafore daytime dresses, evening dresses cut like peasants' smocks and raincoats with large kangaroo pockets over the stomach made the collection look very gay and young.

One of the prettiest evening outfits was a full-length mohair cape in pink and orange plaid worn with a matching skirt.

A black knitted evening dress had enormous yellow angora sleeves embroidered with black butterflies.

RENAISSANCE WOMAN

Eszter Haraszty's Artist; And Host Of Other Things

By JUNE CARROLL

The Christian Science Monitor News Service

LOS ANGELES — Eszter Haraszty is a renaissance woman: artist, embroiderer, ceramist, botanist, interior decorator, costume and set designer.

In the color-splashed house which she remodeled in a nearby canyon, the chairs and sofas are covered in her own invention which she calls "needlepainting." It is a combination of crewel and traditional embroidery.

"You keep building texture on texture until the petals and leaves of each flower become cushions," she explains. "You make your mistakes work for you. You don't pull out the thread. You go over it.

"IF YOU have a short piece of thread left in your needle, use it, don't cut it off. Push and pull constantly using your thumb to sculpt into the desired shape. Use double, sometimes quadruple strands of yarn.

"Build your own yarn library from supermarkets, dime stores," she continued. "Use everything: knitting yarn, mohair. No matter how delicate, stitching upon stitching prevents the embroidery from wearing out. I have yet to see signs of wear on the first seat cover I did eight years ago."

Giant poppies, daisies, and tulips in brilliant colored wool adorn the chairs. Great baskets of bright yarns are strewn throughout the sunny house.

Soon after coming to the United States from her native Hungary, Miss Haraszty became a color consultant and interior designer.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Dear Wo-Persons' Liberation Please Don't Give Us Herll!

DEAR HELEN:

Now that we've got "Ms." squared away, let's beam in on this business of labeling everyone male when both male and female are represented or the gender isn't specifically known. As in: "All men are created equal" (how about women?). Or "Will everyone take HIS place in line?" (When the "hers" are very apparent.) Or "He who laughs last laughs best" (only men laugh yet?).

There is no such word as "chairwoman" and I'm sure females would balk at being called "laywomen," while "mailwoman" sounds a bit on the hermaphrodite side. (For that matter, it would seem that whenever "her" is used, it's in a downgrading word ... why not HEmaphrodite?)

The English language, it appears, works overtime to make women invisible or inferior. Someone called this "male linguistic chauvinism." I'm with Betty Freidan who suggests that "history" be labeled "herstory" since females helped make it.

Comments anyone? — MS. T.

DEAR MS. T.:

How about "his'n herstory"?

Come to think of it (and I really hadn't before), there's a spot of "male linguistic chauvinism" in HElen HElp Us! "HERlen HERlp Us! perhaps?

... And mebbe "woman" should be "wo-person," "humans" "hu-people"? Should we coin the words "hiser" (for his-or-her) and "shehe" when referring to both sexes? Consider "hedonist"? Without a "shedonist" he might become a "hismit."

Newspaper columnist Sorah Buchtman had some recent thoughts on the subject. Sez she:

"Highly vocal women's liberation advocates have frequently launched assaults on our 'anti-female language.' Some completely objective research — even though I'm she not he — reveals that any latent prejudice is wholly unintentional and about equally divided between the sexes. For one thing, does any inclination toward female repression, despite some explicitly stated Biblical view, exist in the name "Hebrew"? Would "SHE-brew" be more acceptable to quibblers?

Heresy, hearse, and heathen could just as appropriately be called HIS-esy, HIS-se, and SHE-athen. It's easy, if you overlook the element of chance and derivations, to find numerous examples of MLC (male linguistic chauvinism).

"But then other glaring errors come to mind, like Herculean, which should be HIS-culean, of course. And how about a herd, that can include boy anythings as well as girl creatures? 'HIS-d?" In view of current male coiffures, hirsute should really be HIS-sute. Even words like heredity and heritage, if there's any biological justice, should read THEIR-edity and THEIR-itage.

"One relates shenanigans to boys, so why not HE-nanigans? Why shouldn't the totally masculine word 'sheik' be HE-ik?

"And how about the obvious misnomers for predominantly feminine manifestations like 'histrionics,' 'hysterical' and, for heaven's sake, 'hysterectomy'? Substitute 'hers' if you wish — as in HERS-terectomy — but don't call it masculine domination.

"I'm pleased at the compliment implied in giving girls' names to powerful, dramatic hurricanes. Would HIS-icane Clarence ever be so devastating as its predecessor Camille?

"If everything that's 'his' must become 'hers' also, how in the name of consistency do we deal with such ambivalencies as, say, 'antihistamine' without offense to either faction? 'Anti-HERS-tamine?' 'UNCLE-his-tamine?'

"Yours, with tongue in cheek & maybe 'c-HER-ck'? — ZORAH B.

Nature Is Topic Of New Series

Parents too often communicate their ignorance and fears about the natural world, according to Penny Wright, an Audubon Canyon Ranch docent who is one of three teachers for the three-part series, "Nature and Your Child." The series begins April 26 at 8 p.m. at the Marin Jewish Community Center in San Rafael.

Other teachers of the series, which will be on consecutive Wednesday evenings, are Flora Maclise and Joan Basore, members of Nature Ways Associates, an affiliate of Natural Science Education Resources.

Plants, birds, trees and insects are among the pre-school child's first learning experiences about the outside world, and many parents discourage their children's natural ability to learn by answering questions in a non-constructive manner, Miss Wright said. The series will help parents fill in their own knowledge gaps and stimulate the child's ability to learn.

MRS. ROBERT W. MAIER
P-TA president

Mrs. Maier Heads Kent School P-TA

A three-year-member of the A. E. Kent School Parent-Teacher Association, Mrs. Robert W. Maier is the new president. She has been first vice president and corresponding secretary and is one of the founders of the school's Art in Action program.

Donna Maier said the P-TA's purpose is to foster better communications between parents and the teachers in the school. Plans for the coming school year are for an evening parent-teacher party, a "sports swap-arama" and a spring luncheon and fashion show.

Mrs. Maier is a native of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, and received a bachelor of education degree from the University of British Columbia. Her husband is marketing vice president for Specialty Brands, Inc. They have lived in Marin for nine years and are the parents of Jonathan, 8, and Jeffrey, 7 years old.

The family enjoys skiing, according to Mrs. Maier, whose other interests are art and art education, tennis and stitchery. She is also a member of the Junior League of San Francisco.

Other officers are Mmes. Surl Nielsen, first vice president; Gene Hendsch and Arcima Taylor, second vice presidents; Stephen Henderson, recording secretary; Joan Katkov, corresponding secretary; Wendell Baker, treasurer; Paul Schmitt, parliamentarian; and Laurence Early, historian.

'Grand Old Manor' For Symphony Trip

"We're kind of like groupies," Women's Wear Daily reported Frances Fahnestock as saying when she arranged for the Friends of the Symphony to accompany the Boston Pops Orchestra on a four-day engagement in New York.

After a round of parties and receptions the group returned to Boston a plush, five-car party train. "We did it for nostalgia and the grand old manner of symphony touring," Mrs. Fahnestock explained. Some 48 of the city's old guard escorted the orchestra on tour. The train arrangements were made by U.S. Secretary of Transportation John Volpe of Massachusetts.

Pity The Poor Hotdog It's Being Mistreated

By ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — Pity the poor hot dog.

It is being criticized from many angles for many reasons. It is also being stretched, watered, spiced up, colored, fattened and sometimes labeled in terms that are not true.

What is happening to the hot dog is almost un-American. The next targets may be mom and apple pie. Although the hot dog was born in Germany, it has become identified more with this country than any other. It has become one of the most popular items in the average American diet.

More than 1.5 billion pounds of frankfurters are consumed each year in the United States, not to mention the huge quantities of rolls, mustard, relish and other items consumed in the same bites.

If the hog dog retains its immense popularity in the face of such a massive attack, it will be remarkable. For some of the stories do not make for pleasant reading — or eating.

One of the main ingredients — though not labeled as such — is bacteria. Not all bacteria are harmful, nor is it possible to find many food items entirely free of bacteria.

Some experts suggested that there should not be more than 10,000 bacteria per gram of precooked sausage products. Yet numerous tests have shown counts frequently from 100,000 to 1 million gram. At the latter level, mild gastric distress may result.

All sorts of filth have been found in hot dogs.

Of even more concern to some people is the variety of animal parts allowed into such products. They do not like the idea of eating pig jowls and snouts, not to mention other delicacies that are also permissible.

Still other critics, including some with the industry, cried foul at the introduction of chicken into franks. They were overruled when the U.S. Department of Agriculture decided to allow up to 15 per cent of the ingredients to be chicken provided that the label includes chicken.

For several years, nutritionists complained about the steady increase in fat and decrease in protein. Once upon a time, frankfurters contained more protein than fat. But since 1937, USDA figures show that the percentage of protein dropped from nearly 20 to less than 12 per cent.

At the same time, the proportion of fat jumped from below 20 per cent to more than 30 per cent — some products had as much as 40 per cent fat — before consumer resistance forced the USDA to set a ceiling of 30 per cent on fat a few years ago. The average now is about 28 per cent.

Added water is another source of criticism. The average proportion is well above 50 per cent. Manufacturers are permitted to add 10 per cent water to the amount naturally in meat.

Even the truth of such labels as "all meat" and "all beef" frankfurters have been brought into question. In a recent court case, the USDA was ordered to revise labeling regulations to eliminate possible deception.

Ralph Nader stopped eating hot dogs years ago. He calls them "a major consumer abuse."

So what is a consumer to do? If he stopped consuming everything with a serious defect, he might starve or die of thirst.

San Francisco To Be Convention Site

The state convention of the California Parent-Teacher Association has been set in San Francisco on May 10, 11 and 12. Some 4,000 delegates are expected to attend the meeting at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, and delegates will vote on eight resolutions of statewide significance and decide the state P-TA legislative platform for the next two years.

A final meeting of the current board of manager will be held May 8 and 9 before the convention opens.

FDA Will Require New Cosmetic Labels

The U. S. Food and Drug Administration plans to require cosmetics manufacturers to identify as "sensitizing" ingredients in their products on the product labels, reports Women's Wear Daily. FDA proposals are expected to be ready in a month for public hearings. In their final form, several months later, they will become mandatory for manufacturers.

Complaints have been leveled at products that cause eye and other sensitivity and irritation.

Kaufman's Fabric Land

JOAN CROSSLEY
There is nothing more uncomfortable than an ill-fitting sleeve. Here are some hints to help your sleeves fit more perfectly. Remember, first, that sleeves should be sewed in the armhole so crosswise threads of the fabric in the upper sleeve run parallel with the floor. The fullness at the top of the armhole should be evenly distributed. Make sure your sleeve is long enough by bending your arm, fist closed and palm side toward your chest. A long sleeve should then be even with the knob of your wrist.
When you're ready to sew make sure that first stop is KAUFMAN'S FABRIC LAND, 836 4th St. In addition to our fabulous selection of materials we also stock buttons, accessories and sundries of all kinds. Hours: 9:30AM - 5:30PM. Mon-Tues-Thurs-Sat. 9:30AM - 9PM Wed-Fri, Noon - 5PM Sun.
HELPFUL HINT:
Sleeves become shorter with wear so remember to make them long enough to begin with!

Over 30 Years Experience In Nutrition
HERE'S HEALTH!
by JUNE EMBURY

"I believe that the various minerals are far more important to health than anyone realizes", states Adeles Davis and I feel that she knows what she is talking about.
There is growing recognition that a rich source of minerals may be most helpful in balancing body chemistry. But there is also some confusion as to the proper balance of the various minerals to each other. I believe that this is a field that needs to be further investigated, our scientists do not yet know all of the answers.
But there is one rich source of minerals that nature has proven to be well balanced to promote life - the sea. We have just begun to awaken to the riches of health the sea has for us. Both sea plants and sea animals have learned to extract the minerals from the sea and offer them in an organic combination that is easy for us to assimilate.
Come in and see the different sea-plant products we carry. For optimum health it is wise to use the bounties of the sea.

Saving On Food—It's Worth The Trouble

By PHYLLIS HANES
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BOSTON, Mass. — Don't let the few pennies saved on one food "special" deceive you into thinking it's not worth the battle to fight rising food prices.

You can expect to save 10 to 20 per cent on your food bill if you follow a few rules.

Those who can cook "from scratch" are in for even more savings. And if you live near one of the new warehouse or economy supermarkets, you can save 5 to 10 per cent a week by bagging your own vegetables and choosing your staples from a cut open carton.

"Shopping at the right market heads the list of ways to cut the food bill," says Sidney Margolius, writer on consumer food problems.

"Choose the one with the best prices on meats since that's the most expensive item. Watch the ads. Switch around if that's where the best buy is."

"The fattest savings of all are the weekly specials," says Jennifer Cross, another consumer writer on the food industry.

"Buying house brands will save you from $250 to $300 a year," said a "Consumer Reports" survey back in the 1960's. Today the figure is even higher.

"But there's money to be saved by avoiding the convenience foods," said Margolius, who likes to call them "pseudo-convenience" foods.

Most shoppers know that convenience foods cost more, but they don't usually have any idea how much.

Sometimes their opinions are not based on price. When it comes to something like sugared cereals, many parents feel that if the kids like them better and will eat more, so much the better.

Others are not as worried about the price as the ecology angle. They don't like all those extra wrappings on individual packets of cereal and cocoa. Still others say they like the new taste flavors of the packaged foods with sauces.

"Actually, there's nothing wrong with a food processor making a food taste good," said Margolius. "But it's wrong for a manufacturer to add a little cheap flavoring, then double the price."

Green Giant rice verdi, for example, is labeled "rice with bell peppers and parsley" and costs you 41 cents in a 12-ounce package, Margolius reports. It represents, mainly, about 5 ounces of instant uncooked rice, valued at 13 cents. The other ingredients, in order of importance, are margarine, green peppers, salt, chicken-bouillon flavoring, cornstarch, onion flakes, and parsley flakes.

Curiously, the rice in the boilable pouch actually takes longer to cook — 16 minutes as against 7 minutes for ordinary quick rice.

Here are some more examples of products Margolius has surveyed, studied, and listed in his book, "The Great American Food Hoax" (Walker & Co., $5.95).

H. J. Heinz Great American Soup: cream of mushroom — 25 cents for 15 ounces.

Campbell's cream of mushroom — 17 cents for 10½ ounces.

You add no water to the Heinz soup but you add one can of water to the Campbell's concentrated soup, thus ending up with 21 ounces of soup.

Kellogg's sugar-frosted flakes — 67 cents for 20 ounces.

Kellogg's corn flakes —45 cents for 18 ounces. Cost of the convenience — about 17 cents. They added the sugar for you.

CONFUSING? — A customer surveys the array of goods in a supermarket. Convenience items found in most such shopping areas end up costing the consumer considerably more. In warehouses and economy supermarkets the consumer can save money by buying items he packages himself.

The sugared flakes cost 0.85 cents more per ounce than the corn flakes, and when multiplied by 20 ounces this equals 17 cents. This means the difference in price could buy more than a pound of sugar.

Quick Quaker oats, cooks in one minute — 34 cents for 18 ounces.

Instant Quaker oatmeal, 10 serving packets —43 cents for 10 ounces.

Cost of having pre-measured packets — more than 2.7 cents for a one ounce serving, meaning if the 18-ounce box came in pre-measured packets it would cost almost 49 cents more. If, in addition, you buy a pre-measured cereal with flavorings such as apples and cinnamon you pay another .7 cents per serving.

Hershey's instant cocoa —10 individual packets; 29 cents for 7½ ounces.

Hershey's instant cocoa — one package; 45 cents for 16 ounces.

Cost of the convenience of not having to ladle out two heaping teaspoons for each cup of presweetened cocoa, about 16 cents.

"The best buys of all are the weekly specials," says Jennifer Cross in her book, "The Supermarket Trap" (Indiana University Press, $5.95).

"You can save an average of 20 per cent on the special sales of basic items ranging from detergents to cooked crabs," she says.

"Depending on the time and gas you're prepared to spend, there are two ways to get mileage. One is to stick to the store of your choice and buy all their specials. They are rotated every few weeks and over time you'll realize the full savings.

"The second is to do what the trade calls "cherry picking," selecting specials from two or more stores each week via the ads and keeping a weather eye open in the area for other good buys.

"More especially, do not over-buy specials merely for the saving unless you're prepared to increase closet space, or incorporate these bargains into your menus. At the checkout see that the clerk rings up the sale price rather than the regular price."

"Out of the laboratories of America's big food corporations have come many exciting new ways to throw your money away," says Margolius, who, in 1940 became one of the first consumer news reporters.

He's right, generally speaking. For the new technological advances known as "built in services" in processed foods, such as freeze drying, improved warehousing, and controlled atmosphere storage of fruits, are considered cost-added features.

But this is not true in all ases.

In some instances processed food costs less than unprocessed, for example, frozen orange juice, canned or frozen peas, and frozen lima beans.

The consumer saves about 40 per cent of the cost of the fresh item as a result of the processing. Reasons are: lower transportation costs because of elimination of inedible waste and bulk and lower retail margin due to perishability and storage costs of the fresh product.

After you've saved all those pennies by avoiding the processed food packages, you're ready to explore stores' own brands.

Margolius says, "Stores' own brands of packaged and canned foods cost 10 to 22 per cent less than nationally advertised brands."

"Savings on household cleaners and paper products are even larger, averaging 33 to 25 per cent on some widely used products.

"The largest price differences in individual items were 41 per cent on margarine, 36 per cent on frozen orange juice concentrate, 22 per cent on white bread, 48 per cent on puffed rice, 26 per cent on cooked salami, 24 per cent on salad dressing, and 22 per cent on non-fat dry milk.

"In paper and cleaning products the largest differences were on tissues, 39 per cent; dishwashing detergents, 36 per cent; liquid floor wax, 49 per cent, and plastic wrap, 39 per cent.

"One supermarket's own brand bread may be as little as 20 cents a pound loaf; another's 27.

Most shoppers know that from Wednesday or Thursday to Saturday is the best shopping time for specials. The alert consumer also knows unless you get there before 4 p.m. chances are the store will have run out of the special.

Buying by grade is another one of the useful techniques you can employ to keep your bills down. But unfortunately, indicating the grade on the package is voluntary, not mandatory.

Many retailers require that wholesalers sell to them on a basis of government grades but some stores don't in turn show the government grade to the customer.

"If grading were required by law right down to the retail counter, your buying problems would be simplified," said Margolius.

"In the case of broilers, turkeys, and other poultry, manufacturers and retailers do state the grade in ads and labels. Since many processors now grade label broilers, you are able to buy broilers marked U.S. Grade A, whether they are 29 or 49 cents a pound.

"In our surveys we also found turkeys priced all the way from 49 to 79 cents a pound with the same U.S. Grade A label. So we were sure, and visual inspection confirmed, that the turkeys at the lower price met the specifications for high quality; broad breasted with full flesh, good appearance and confirmation, free from defects such as cuts and bruises.

"Understand first of all," Margolius said, "that the grade has nothing to do with food value. All grades, whether "Choice" or "Good" beef, Grade A or Grade B eggs, "Fancy" or "No. 1" apples, have the same food value.

You should also compare the prices of larger packages and cans. On the average you save 18 per cent by buying the large or medium size of a food product instead of the small, and 10 per cent more by buying the extra large, according to Mr. Margolius.

These 10-pack assortments have a true cost of approximately 80 cents a pound, compared with about 40 cents a pound for a standard dry cereal such as corn flakes in an 8 ounce box.

Stores are very competitive on the 303 sizes (16 ounces) and cut prices on them, but they take a higher margin on the smaller sizes such as the 8 ounce cans.

These are two money saving points concerning sizes. One is that even for small families, the small sizes usually do not pay. You could "waste" up to a third of some of the larger sizes and still save over the extra-high prices of the small containers.

The real money saving trick, as most women who cook understand, is to buy the larger sizes and then plan meals to use the extra quantity in different ways.

But consumers are quick to point out that there are so many sizes and varieties and brand names that the matter of choice is not only complicated but also confusing.

In his survey, Margolius found in just one market, 151 different types, brands, and sizes of cereals; 63 different brands, sizes and types of tuna and other canned fish, and 27 brands and sizes of toothpaste.

This particular situation appears to be improved somewhat in the new "warehouse" supermarkets that have been opened in several states.

In these stores you buy merchandise right out of cartons on the floor, and the supermarket doesn't have the expense of stacking all the items.

You do your own bagging, too, and there are fewer brands and sizes, which reduces the warehouse inventory expenses and increases volume.

Asked about the prospects for a decline in current high food prices, Margolius said the prospects don't look too good.

"Meat prices will drop slightly in April; they usually do in the spring," he said. "But food prices always go up in the summer, and I don't think this summer will be any exkption.

"The basic reason why food prices are so high is this business of overprocessing and the big companies' drive for new growth," he said.

"General Foods, Campbell's and the others have got to show 10 per cent growth every year to please Wall Street, and, to achieve this, they must come out with all kinds of new and quasi-new products every year."

SOME MARKET RULES

Shop at the market with the best meat buys and specials.

Buy the supermarket's own labels or private brands.

Beware of convenience foods.

Read labels for contents, weight, and grade.

Shop only once a week, between Wednesday and Saturday.

Buy Grade A for the table and Grade B for the pot.

Make and use a shopping list and comparison price list.

Don't be gullible about advertising and merchandising — buy only what you need.

Buy standard foods rather than higher cost versions, i.e., white, rye, or wheat breads rather than rolls or special shaped loaves.

Buy medium size fruit and vegetables rather than the specially selected perfect looking large ones.

DRAMA REVIEW

Marin Civic Ballet's Best-Ever Performance

By MARIE RAMEAU

The Marin Civic Ballet once more presented its annual spring concert, Saturday evening and last night at the College of Marin Fine Arts Theater. This was not just another ballet concert, but the troupe's finest, most professional performance I can recall.

Having seen the company in several environments, including the new Marin Veterans Memorial Building at the Civic Center, I was convinced Saturday night that the college's theater displays them at their best. Equipped with excellent lighting and a stage which does not devour a small group,it provides the overall theatricality without which ballet just isn't ballet.

Although the program consisted mainly of reruns from past seasons, they were this time meticulously rehearsed. The dancers were poised, polished and technically flawless; also, that nervousness which I've prevously noticed in their performances had vanished.

One of my favorite ballets, Ron Guidi's "Trois Gymnopedies," to music of Erik Satie, opened the program. In this triptych, all three interludes — in a very gymnastic style — were menthol-cool and controlled, with Cynthia Harvey, Kathi McCormick and Charles Perrier showing strong but subtle musicality.

"Q.E.D. — A Geometric Study," by Perrier, focused on such geometric concepts as lines, triangles and circles, which were well-integrated in the busy choreography.

March Wilde's "Miss Margaret — 1901-1972" sensitively portrayed an old woman's memories of her youthful love in a poignant nostalgia trip set in an old-fashioned park. Miss Margaret 1972 was mimed by Martha Fietz, while Jane Thelen danced the lyrical role of her young alter ego.

Again, I say Norbert Vesak's "The Gift To Be Simple," based on American Quaker themes, was just too long. The high quality of this work oozed out of its every pore, and Vesak expertly utilized many modern dance idioms within a simple framework of ballet steps danced to traditional Quaker songs. But to repeat my previous observation: "less is more."

As a gratifying contrast came the "Rachmaninoff Pas de Deux," set by Vesak to Rachmaninoff's "Paganini Variations," and danced by Jane Thelen and David White. The only new ballet on the program, it was truly the high point of the evening. One-hundred per cent professional in execution, it also was a first-rate piece of choreography that would hold its own in the repertoire of any major company.

White is beginning to dance with bravura and a dynamic style which many mature dancers lack. Miss Thelen soon will be a brilliant dancer, and I wondered why she hasn't already moved on to a professional company. Both showed an astonishing sense of timing in their one-armed overhead lifts, a la Bolshoi — breathtaking!

After that, I would have needed nothing else, but director Leona Norman's "Golden Moments of Ballet," caricaturing the now-obsolete ballet conventions of the first quarter of this century, wrapped up the evening with rollicking fanfare.

I noticed that Charles Perrier (the poet) is developing into an exellent stylist, revealing a sense of melancholy humor all his own. The music by the Guckenheimer Sour Kraut Band sounded appropriately like the Salvation Army, blasting away at a Brahms Hungarian Rhapsody while a moth (tiny Jody Marvin) was remorselessly consumed by a fierce flame (Martha Fiet).

Too bad the company hasn't a longer season, which would certainly draw audiences from throughout the Bay Area. These dancers are beginning to acquire the sophistication so essential to performing in contemporary companies, and Saturday they came on very strong indeed. This bears watching.

Sonoma State Workshop Has Operatic Miracles

By ROBERT M. NESS

Operatic miracles occurred at Friday night's double bill performance by the Sonoma State College Opera Workshop. Under the direction of Dr. Peggy Donovan-Jeffry, this astounding group presented two complete operas to a capacity audience of about 250 at the college's Ives Hall of Music.

Telemann's "Pimpinone", a comic intermezzo in three parts originally intended to be performed between the acts of a large serious opera, was followed by Rossini's "The Occasion Makes the Thief," a situation comic opera written while the author was in his teens.

There are not superlatives enough to describe Richard Goodman's portrayal of the rich and foolish old Pimpinone — who is accosted and virtually enslaved by Vespetta, a young and wily servant girl.

Goodman's performance revealed a bottomless reservoir of humorous devices. Whether in his vocal antics or in his intensely funny stage movements, he kept the audience in a constant state of laughter. His aria in the last scene imitating two women gossiping about their husbands was a classic.

Tommi Sue Anderson's Vespetta complemented Goodman perfectly. With shameless contempt, she shrewdly applied all her feminine charms until she ultimately enslaved the hapless old bachelor.

An ideal musical balance was achieved between these two singers and the small string ensemble directed by David Sloss from the harpsichord.

Colorful costumes, extravagant stage sets, and a thirty-piece orchestra made the Rossini an elaborate full scale production.

It is a short comic work in two scenes involving complex switch arounds that produce surprising results. Last night's performance was a masterpiece of comic staging and beautiful ensemble singing.

Richard Goodman, now a roguish nobleman, joined William Pisenti, Steve Covington, Rosemary Bock, Robert Cullinen, Carol Burleson, Sharon Cole and George Sanchez in this fast-moving farce.

Final performance was yesterday.

Resignation Due Action By Board

The Marin County Board of Education, meeting tomorrow at 8 p.m., will consider the resignation of board member James A. Swenson and establish procedures for his replacement.

Swenson, who has missed many board meetings lately, according to Asst. Supt. Robert E. Spain, gave increasing business pressure as his reason for resigning.

MUSIC REVIEW

Delicate, Fragile Music From East

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

A small but appreciative audience in Dominican College's Angelico Hall was transported last night into a strange world of music that probably sounded out of tune to Western ears, but was not, according to its own scales and systems of tuning.

The concert of music from the Far East and Southeast Asia was presented by students, both Caucasian and members of other ethnic groups, from the University of California's Institute of Ethnomusicology, at Los Angeles.

Though programs were few and numbers not followed as listed, the deficiency was not too serious because Dr. David Morton, acting director of the institute, described very well the instruments, the exotic music and particular numbers.

The dominant impression made by the program — which was instrumental and vocal and even included two dances — was that the music is delicate and fragile by our standards even when expressing anger or describing battle. In addition to being composed in different scales and systems of tuning than those in Western music, it is linear, or built around a single melody, rather than being harmonic, with interest added in a great deal of ornamentation.

Music of Thailand received most emphasis in three groups of compositions performed by a Mahori ensemble consisting of a floor zither, two two-stringed, bowed fiddles, a xylophone, a set of gong kettles, finger cymbals and drums. Closely related to Chinese music, the first group of selections used a basic five-pitch system, and the last group a seven-pitch system.

Very interesting were two groups of programmatic solos played by Don Addison, an advanced graduate student, on the Chinese cheng, a table zither with metal strings over a long, narrow soundbox.

I especially enjoyed the two groups of selections by the Balinese lender wojang quartet which consisted of four metallophones (something like vibraphones) played with mallets. The bell-like sound had a shimmering quality due to overtones resulting from a slight difference in pitch between paired instruments.

Javanese music was unique because of inclusion of a vocal part sung by one of two musicians playing floor zithers, while a third played a vertical wooden flute. The music had a plaintive, haunting quality one would long remember.

Probably most popular with the audience because of visual appeal and glittering costumes were two solo Balinese dances done to taped music by a young couple from Bali. Her dance was a graceful abstract type performed to a work called "Bumblebees," and his was a dynamic one performed wearing a mask.

All of those participating were expert, as far as someone unfamiliar with the idioms could tell, and all music was played from memory.

'Pinocchio' Due Friday In Marin

"The Wonderful Adventure of Pinocchio" will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Marin Veteran's Memorial Auditorium at the Civic Center.

The cast of 87 presented the play for 4,000 school children in the Youth In Arts Series and on Feb. 27 with a public matinee.

Marion Hayes Cain of San Anselmo has produced and directed the play. The music is presented by the Winifred Baker's Children's Chorus.

The 36-foot projections that provide the setting for the 15 scenes were designed by Alonso Gonzales of the Fine Arts Department of the College of Marin.

Tickets may be obtained at the theater box office or at Macy's ticket office in San Rafael.

Art Exhibit

An exhibition of works by the North Bay Artists will be held from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. April 30 at the Sandcastle Gallery in Point Reyes Station. Approximately 20 members of the group will display a wide assortment of paintings, sculpture, stitchery, weaving and macrame.

Hub Council To Seat Newcomers Tomorrow Night

Kenneth L. Anderson and Martin G. Blinder will be sowrn in as councilmen when the San Anselmo City Council meets tomorrow at 8 p.m. in city hall.

The two topped all vote-getters in last week's election to four-year terms.

Two other incumbents — City Treasurer William P. Franchini and City Clerk Helen J. Ragan — were reelected and also will be sworn in.

A new mayor and vice mayor are expected to be chosen during the meeting, Mrs. Ragan said.

It was determined Thursday, two days following the election, that Blinder would be the second councilman. An 18-vote error by a precinct worker or inspector originally had given James F. Reed the seat by a margin of six votes.

COMMUNE FOR MIDDLE CLASS

Open End: Helping Many Find Mutual Support

By JEFF GREER

"Open End is a replacement for the plastic community — a cross between a cocktail party and a commune" for middle-aged, middle class persons dissatisfied with their life style in suburbia.

That's the way Frank Potter, founder of the 300-member Open End "community" described the experiment in personal growth and humanistic psychology.

Sprawled on a couch in the casually decorated living room of the Open End headquarters in San Anselmo, Potter recounted how the organization grew from ideas spawned by Esalen Institute and his own personal experiences as a businessman turned clergyman who then grew dissatisfied with life as a priest.

Open End after three years of operation has spawned a sort of third-generation organization aimed at helping residents of other communities form their own versions of Open End. It's called Well Being, and is aimed at helping leaders of personal improvement groups trade ideas and experiences.

Open End is no Utopian community whose members have run away from home, family and job to sit at the feet of some guru — nor is it a "free university" such as the neighboring Family Mix experiment in San Anselmo.

Instead, Potter explained, Open End is a chance for persons to find "mutual support" and emotional and intellectual growth as well as intimate contacts with an "extended family" while still living as a member of suburbia, continuing their jobs and home roles.

"The kind of person likely to seek out Open End is usually not satisfied with the status quo . . . that job, that marriage that were so all-important 20 years ago may not look so good now," Potter said. "Some come to us after having been shaken up by new ideas their kids presented them with."

Open End provides activities for members' children, but seems to have limited appeal to the young hippie, Potter said.

At Monday evening orientation sessions in the headquarters, the grey-painted Victorian gingerbread Greening Mansion at 101 Ross Avenue, Potter and other Open End members tell newcomers about the many facets of the nonresidential community.

The program includes 25 to 30 small weekly groups touching on such varied interests as encounter sessions, massage, yoga, women's lib and many others.

"A member may say 'Gee, I'd like to get a group going in organic bread baking' and sure-enough, somewhere among the members there are enough people to get a little group going for however long it wants," Potter explained.

Larger community gatherings include picnics, camping trips and "just plain celebrations."

An important part of the "self-realization process" with Open End is forming the habit of keeping an intensely introspective personal journal.

Stresses of self discovery sometimes sunder couples completely, but also sometimes heal deeply split marriages, he said.

FRANK POTTER
Ex-priest founds community

"There is sexual experimentation among some of the members," Potter bluntly admitted, "but my wife Barbara and I are conservative and don't get involved."

The relaxed attitude didn't come entirely easily, the ex-pastor admitted. "When we first organized there was a little embarassment in how to treat "unmarried couples", but the informal arrangements seem easily accepted within the community now, Potter said.

Each member pays $12 a month — providing a more solid financial base than most experimental communities active in the Bay Area. "We have more single persons than couples married or living together," Potter explained.

Periodic crises arise because some members seem to seek a leader or "father image" to run the organization and provide outside answers to their problems — a concept Potter said he resists. He sees his role as coordinator, not leader or guru.

Nonetheless, Potter finds in Open End some of the roles of a more conventional church minister. The nearby San Francisco Theological Seminary and other church organizations are also coming to recognize such communities as "an alternate form of ministry," Potter said.

Potter himself graduated from Harvard University 25 years ago and toiled a decade in commerce until "the suburban life . . . began to get under my skin."

He attended theological school and became an Episcopalian priest and pastor in several parishes before becoming apalled by "Mickey Mouse activities" churches were offering their members.

Coming to the Bay Area, Potter applied for a post with the Episcopalian Church in Sausalito, which he felt was a progressive church likely to encourage new ideas. He was momentarily downcast when he didn't get the job, but then he and his wife decided to pioneer a human potential community in Marin. Open End was the result.

"We're in a pluralistic place where there's no one, great, overarching myth that will lead America in the 1970s," Potter said. But after three years' experience with Open End, "I think we've stumbled onto something that's got real power" in helping persons find themselves in the Age of Aquarius.

Seminar Debates Proposition 9

By JAY GOODWIN

The merits of Proposition 9 on the June ballot — the so-called Clean Environment Act — were debated and discussed at a lively seminar Saturday at the College of Marin.

Three advocates of the initiative urged the audience to pass the restrictive measure, over the opposition of oil companies, public utilities and labor unions, because the time for ecological "foot-dragging" had passed.

In turn, the three opponents of Proposition 9 warned the group that the "poorly written" initiative took an unsophisticated "meat axe" approach to cleaning up the environment.

Speaking on behalf of Proposition 9 were Ed Koupal, director of the People's Lobby and a leader in the unsuccessful effort to recall Governor Ronald Reagan; David Pesonon, attorney for the Sierra Club; and J. B. Nielands, Professor of Biochemistry at University of California, Berkeley.

Opposing the measure on the panel were Alexander Grendon, consultant in biophysics at the Donner Laboratory, University of California, Berkeley; Robert E. Burt, environmental quality director for the California Manufacturers Association, and Richard G. Gable, executive secretary of the Associated Coin-Op Dry Cleaners of Northern California.

Koupal insisted that the "big corporations" be stopped before they make the environment in California intolerable. While maintaining that his group is not "antipower", Koupal called for a five-year moratorium on construction or manufacturing of atomic power plants. "We want to give these giant corporations time to study alternative sources for the power that we'll need in this state," he said.

Several possible sources of power — including geo-thermal, solar and nuclear fussion — were brought up for consideration by members of the audience.

Pesonon claimed that the supply of natural gas in the world was running out. Taking a philosophic approach, he suggested, "Nature is, after all, the last boss. We can't go out and dance for more gas, like they used to dance for rain. When it's gone, it's gone."

Grendon said that the authors of the measure had foolishly incorporated technical specifications and restrictions in the text of the initiative.

He said that specific details are generally left out of statue laws and implemented by more flexible, administrative bodies.

Koupal responded that the technical limitations on pollution levels were intentionally included. Only in this way, he said, could Californians be assured that the measure would not be watered-down after enactment.

Grendon said his greatest objection was the abrupt changes that the initiative would require. Such wide-ranging measures, he said, need more time to be implemented.

"If you vote for this initiative, you vote for it in a block. You can't say which sections you want and which sections you don't want. If you vote for it, you get all the obnoxious sections that you don't want."

The last section of the initiative was particularly attacked. It states that the Legislature may only amend the initiative if the amendments strenghtens the measure's protection of the environment.

Such a restriction on the prerogatives of the Legislature was challenged by the opponents of the proposition.

Pesonon agreed that of all the contested sections, the last one was most likely to be unconstitutional.

"Changing the initiative after it has passed is no disaster. It can be done in one ruling by the court," he added.

The wide-ranging question-and-answer period that followed the formal presentation included inquiries on geo-thermal energy, mass transit, pesticides and insurance policies for atomic plants.

Larkspur Robbery Reported

A 21-year-old Larkspur man was to appear in Marin Municipal Court today after being arrested Saturday on suspicion of armed robbery.

Richard Dean Guendner, of 424 William Avenue, was arrested Saturday, and spent the weekend in Marin County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bail, set by Municipal Judge Peter Allen Smith.

Larkspur police said Guendner and two others were hitchhiking across the street from the Larkspur police station, at 402 Magnolia Avenue, when they were picked up by Thomas S. Robertson of Tiburon.

Robertson told police he drove the trio up Madrone Avenue, near Dolliver Park where Guendner, who was sitting in the front seat, grabbed Robertson by the neck and threatened him with a knife. Robertson said Guendner told him to drive to the end of Baltimore canyon, where Guendner took $75 cash from him.

Robertson said he escaped when he hit a rock while turning his car around. After getting out to examine the damage he fled a short distance.

The three men then got out of the car and ran away, he said. Guendner was identified through police photographs, and picked up the same night.

Wheels Taken

Four tires and wheels were stolen Saturday from a pick-up truck owned by the Petaluma School District, police reported.

Dropped ID Leads To Two Arrests

Two San Rafael brothers were arrested last night on suspicion of burglary after a day of activities which began at a San Rafael market, moved on to Ross and then Fairfax and finally back to San Rafael again.

Booked into Marin County Jail were Ricci Lamar Vigno, 21, and John Gregory Vigno, 20, both of 720 B Street.

Police said that the elder brother first came to their attention at about 1:30 p.m. when he was stopped as a suspected shoplifter at a Mayfair Market. After producing his driver's license from his wallet, the youth was released when store employees decided not to press charges.

Then about 4:30 p.m., a Ross woman, Dorothy Vanderhoof returned to her home on Upper Road to find that a rear window had been entered and that she was missing stereo and tape equipment, a color television set and three valuable Oriental rugs.

Near the entry window, she and a Ross policeman found a wallet containing Ricci Vigno's driver's license and other identification.

In the meantime, a Fairfax man, Anthony H. Rendina of 16 Iron Springs Road, had gone to police to describe a burglary at his house. He told police that at about 3:15 p.m., he had heard his dogs barking and in a downstairs bedroom, he found the Vigno brothers, whom he knew, removing a television set.

He told police he tried to talk the brothers out of taking the television, but that the younger brother kicked him in the face. Both fled, he said, leaving the set behind.

Fairfax police put out a bulletin for the brothers, and the younger one was arrested when he went to the San Rafael police station to pick up his brother's wallet.

The older brother was arrested later in a San Rafael service station.

Both were booked on suspicion of conspiracy and burglary and held for appearances in municipal court today. Additional booking charges of possessing marijuana and having a prohibited weapon were added for John, when police said he gave them a pot cigarette and they found a length of pipe in his car.

Youth Booked In Burglary

A 17-year old San Rafael youth has been arrested on suspicion of burglary, disturbing the peace and resisting arrest after his knife was found in the pried-open storage room of a San Rafael apartment building.

Police said the break-in occurred at 1:30 a.m. Saturday at 55 Fairfax Street. Although no property was taken, police found the juvenile nearby after receiving a report of a burglary.

The 17-year-old and a 16-year old companion were taken to juvenile hall, according to police.

Four Arrested After Can Hits Highway

A beer can thrown from the window of a moving car on Highway 101 yesterday led to the arrest of four young men on suspicion of kidnapping and attempted rape.

According to Marin County sheriff's deputies, a 20-year-old San Francisco woman threw the can out about 3 a.m. and a nearby California highway patrolman saw it and stopped the car. The woman began to yell that she was being kidnapped, and the officer called for assistance and arrested the four men.

Booked into Marin County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bond were James Tsopanakis and Eugenio Garza, both 20 and residents of San Francisco, Eric Carlisle, 21 of Menlo Park, and Gerry Estrada, 20, of San Jose.

The car was stopped near the Corte Madera offramp on Highway 101, and officers said the woman told them she had been abducted in San Francisco after attending a dance.

The four were held to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Vote Count Planned For San Anselmo

The San Anselmo City Council will canvass the returns from last week's municipal election and elect a mayor and vice-mayor at its meeting tomorrow night.

The council will also hear appeals on two previously denied variance requests.

The construction permit requirements proposed by the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District will be reviewed by the council. The permit requirements, if adopted, would prohibit construction in the Bay Area that would adversely affect the quality of air.

The council will also consider nominations for "Outstanding Senior Citizen of the Year."

A claim against the city for $100,000 filed by Homer Gray, 442 West Live Oak Drive, Mill Valley, will be revied by the council. Gray claimed his rights were violated when he was arrested by San Anselmo police for allegedly using obscene language while seeking police assistance.

Ross Council To Canvass Votes

The Ross Town Council, meeting tomorrow at 8 p.m., will canvass ballots from last Tuesday's election and swear in council incumbents John C. Chase, Jewell I. Osterloh and Alan P. Maginis.

The council will also receive fire and street budgets for the coming year.

Bennett's License Is Reinstated

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The state Department of Motor Vehicles has ended its suspension of the drivers license of William M. Bennett of Kentfield, state Board of Equalization member.

R. Keith Hall, director of the drivers license division said yesterday that the suspension was set aside on Wednesday after a hearing. The order reinstating Bennett's license was signed by James W. Chapman, deputy director of the department, for Director Robert C. Cozens, Ball said.

Bennett's license originally was routinely suspended last May when he refused to take a sobriety test after being arrested by Sausalito police on a drunken driving charge. After Marin Municipal Court Judge Robert A. Smallman dismissed the Sausalito charge, Bennett appealed the license suspension, resulting in this week's order.

Larkspur police had sought to prosecute Bennett in July for driving without a valid license, but Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales said no prosecution would be possible unless the Department of Motor Vehicles ruled against Bennett's appeal.

Boy Found Dead In Marin Creek

After a five-hour search, the body of a young boy was found yesterday floating in a creek 100 yards from his home in Marshall.

Gavin B. Robertson — who was 35 months old — was reported missing shortly after 10 a.m.

His parents, Colin H. and Maggie Robertson, notified the Marin County Sheriff's Department and called the Synanon Foundation for assistance in the search.

At 3:25 p.m., one of the six Synanon members involved in the search discovered the body face down in about four feet of water.

Open House Set

Redwood Student News Bureau

Redwood High School, Larkspur, will hold an open house on April 25 at 7:30 p.m. Parents and other family members are invited to visit classrooms, talk with teachers and to view the various displays.

Panel Planned On 'Justice Struggle' Book

A panel discussion about a book prepared by the American Friends Service Committee entitled, "Struggle for Justice" will take place at 8 p.m. today at the Marin Jewish Community Center, 200 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

Participants will include Jan Marinnesen and Jane Schulman, two of the fifteen authors of the book on criminal justice.

Also speaking will be Hadden W. Roth, former Marin Municipal judge; Dr. Lee Coleman, psychiatrist and Richard C. Sloan, president of the Committee for Prisoner Humanity and Justice.

Driver Injured In Two-Car Crash

John Charles Batts, 20, of 137 Canal Street, Apt. 2, San Rafael, was treated at Marin General Hospital for multiple scrapes and bruises received in an accident at 5:18 p.m. yesterday, according to hospital reports.

Batts's car, southbound on Grand Avenue, collided with one driving north on Francisco Boulevard by Dwight Gilbert Frost, 25, of Hayward. Frost was to see his own doctor for pain in his left side, police reported.

Cash Loss Noted

Marin Trailer Sales at 2066 Redwood Highway, Larkspur, has reported the loss of a cash drawer containing $20 in change, taken between 6 p.m. Saturday and 11:35 a.m. yesterday.

POSTPONES VICTORY

Ordinarily, a trump is a losing and lily-livered lead against a slam. In this case West's trump lead postponed South's eventual victory.

South drew two rounds of trumps, ending in the dummy, and then led the queen of spades for a finesse. West won with the king of spades and got out safely by returning a spade.

Now South could get an eventual discard on one of dummy's spades. The problem was whether to discard a diamond or a club on that spade.

THROWS DIAMOND

South wisely decided to throw a diamond. He took the ace of spades, cashed the ace and king of diamonds, and then discarded his last diamond on dummy's third spade.

This put him in position to ruff a third round of diamonds. When the queen of diamonds fell on this trick South had no further problem. He could reach dummy with a trump in order to discard his queen of clubs on the jack of diamonds.

If the queen of diamonds had failed to drop, South still had a play for his contract. He could go to dummy with a trump in order to try the club finesse.

PLAY FOR TRICK

To put it another way, the diamond discard on dummy's spade left South with a play for his 12th trick first in diamonds and then in clubs. If South had thrown the queen of clubs on dummy's spade, he would have been dependent solely on the diamonds for his 12th trick.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner bids one spade, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - Q J 10
♥ - A J 5 4
♦ - K J 9 4
♣ - 9 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two diamonds. You cannot jump to three spades with only three-card support. You cannot jump to two notrump with the clubs wide open. You should not bid two hearts with only a four-card suit. The response of two diamonds, by the process of elimination, is the best bid.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Usually Varicose Veins Look A Lot Worse Than They Feel

A Colorado woman writes: "Do varicose veins hurt? My leg was injured several weeks ago and there is constant pain in a vein below my left knee. The vein was not noticeable before the accident, bot both my husband and I can see it now."

As a rule, varicose veins are more unsightly than painful. Large tortuous vessels ache occasionally, especially after standing for a long time, but the pain disappears after resting. Unless visibly inflamed, varicose veins do not produce pain day and night. The main symptoms are tingling, aching and possibly itching of the skin about the ankles.

IN THE ABSENCE of discomfort, the involved leg is apt to feel heavy after standing for a short time. Many people with obvious varicosities blame all limb discomfort on their disturbed circulations. Some even attribute the pain from flat feet and arthritis of the ankle to enlarged veins.

These veins are blamed on the tiredness and fullness from wearing high heels during an all-day shopping spree. One man blamed his varicosities for alcoholic neuritis. An anemic wman thought her veins were responsible for her tired legs.

Several years ago a stout woman was sent to our clinic because of swollen legs. She had a few enlarged veins, but her puffy ankles were due to dropsy. Her heart was enlarged and the beat was very irregular.

THIS IS mentioned because visible veins in the leg are not necessarily varicosities, nor do they cause trouble. But anyone with bona fide varicose veins should have a complete examination. Now the then a leg vein dilates because a tumor in the pelvis or groin is blocking the flow of blood. The vessel enlarges in much the same way as does a river blocked by a dam.

Injury is one of many causes of this defect, but as a rule, the varicosities are preceded by an inflammation of the vein (phlebitis). This may have happened to our Colorado housewife, but we are not sure she has a varicose vein.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

WILD GAME

Mrs. F. T. writes: My husband is an ardent hunter and keeps our freezer supplied with deer, elk, pheasant, and other forms of wild life. We eat this day after day. Is our family getting enough protein and other needed food elements provided by meat?

REPLY

Yes. All wild game is high in protein. To break the monotony, why not induce your Daniel Boone to "bag" a cow, pig or chicken?

INFECTED PANCREAS

E. S. writes: How does the pancreas become infected?

REPLY

Bacteria usually enter thru the tube that connects the pancreas with the intestine. In some instances, the germs spread thru the blood.

BLOOD, RACE, AND PERSONALITY

H.D. writes: Will a transfusion change a person's race or character?

REPLY

No. There is nothing in blood that is capable of changing the race or personality.

COLD WEATHER WELTS

H. A. writes: When I go out in the cold, large, red welts (that itch like mad) appear on my legs. Is there any way to prevent this annoyance?

REPLY

Blotches may represent old-fashioned chilblains which we now call pernio. The remedy is to keep the parts warm. On the other hand, if these red, itchy lesions are hives, you may be allergic to cold! Tests are available to prove this. Remedies include adequate protection of the skin, antihistaminic pills, and desensitization against the cold.

MINIMAL SUSTENANCE

M.M. writes: What is the minimum anount of food a man can eat and maintain health?

REPLY

I know of no statistics along this line. Furthermore, minimal requirements vary with age, sex, activity, climate, height, and body build.

INFECTED APPENDIX

G.G. writes: What causes an appendix to become gangrenous?

REPLY

Gangrene is death of tissue due to loss of blood supply. This occurs when the appendix becomes so infected its blood supply is cut off.

KNOW THE LAW

California Highway Patrol

SLOWER TRAFFIC KEEP RIGHT

Generally this column is devoted to informing the motoring public of California Vehicle Code laws that govern use of public highways throughout the state. However, the Marin-Golden Gate Bridge area of the California Highway Patrol would like to take this opportunity to discuss another facet of driving that isn't covered in the code but in the final analysis is a major contributing factor in almost every traffic accident: INATTENTION TO DRIVING.

Too often, traffic accidents occur and when we retrace the actions of the drivers involved, we find that the real cause of the mishap was something he did or didn't do long before the accident happened.

Inattention to driving includes not getting enough rest before starting a long trip, failing to check for defective tires, not checking the condition of the brakes, or not attempting to map out a tentative travel route to reduce the chance of making errors when looking for specific locations.

However, once you are behind the wheel and on your way, another problem begins. You must keep your mind on driving and every time you allow it to wander to thoughts of other things, you are a potential traffic accident. Something as small as lighting a cigarette or changing the radio station will divert attention just enough that if a critical situation arises, you may not be able to react with the same speed and reliability than if you had your total attention devoted to the task at hand — driving.

Unfortunately, because of the tremendous increase in the number of motor vehicles on highways today, driving — whether for pleasure or business — no longer can be taken any way but seriously.

The driver who doesn't prepare himself physically and mentally before he begins driving is literally an accident looking for a place to happen. He must keep himself abreast of what is occurring around him by using his mirrors and never lose sight of where he is in relation to other traffic. The careful driver will do everything in his power to see as far ahead as he can, always on the lookout for trouble.

Just because an individual has been driving for many years doesn't qualifiy him as an expert since he has very possibly developed many bad habits as a part of his normal driving pattern. Unless the individual is so conscientious that he has developed a meaningful way of reviewing his driving habits and making corrections in the areas where he is deficient, his problem will finally catch up with him.

Driving is a full-time job and should be considered such. However, unless the individual's driving attitude is good and he has a healthy respect not only for death and injury but for property damage that a motor vehicle can cause, the traffic accident picture will not change.

Drivers are the major reason traffic accident figures continue to climb. They must be alert, aware, and avoid placing life and limb in unnecessary danger.

Peking Pandas Getting Ready To Meet Public

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The pandas from Peking rested in seclusion at the National Zoo today, recovering from travel fatigue and getting ready to meet the public in a few days.

The bear-like mammals, both 18 months old, were reported "very healthy and doing very well" when they arrived Sunday morning at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington.

Arriving with the animals were Dr. Theodore Reed, director of the zoo; Dr. Ting Hung, director of the Peking Bureau of Public Service, and Yang Hung, a panda keeper who will instruct the National Zoo on how to care for the rare animals.

Service Station Robbed Of $80

A thief got away with about $80 in bills Thursday from a Corte Madera gas station, by simulating a gun in his pocket, police reported today.

Witnesses said the man walked into Don Fugate's Chevron service station at 706 Tamalpais Drive last Thursday night, simulated a gun in his pocket, produced a paper bag and ordered station attendant Mark S. Thomas, 19, to fill it with money. He then escaped eastbound on Tamalpais Drive.

Police said the man got $75 to $80 in small bills.

The thief was described as about 25 years old, white, five feet, 10 inches tall, 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. According to reports he was wearing a tan jacket, brown cap and dark rimmed glasses.

Big Development Will Be Studied

The Corte Madera Planning Commission, meeting today at 8 p.m., will review plans for the first section of the Madera del Presidio development.

Plans for 530 townhouses have sparkd threats by neighbors of a referendum. The site is located next to the H. Koch and Sons luggage plant on Highway 101.

Dominican Priory Housing Project Due New Round

The Marin County Board of Supervisors, meeting at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow at the Civic Center, again will consider the proposed Dominican priory housing project for senior citizens, opposed by neighbors in Kentfield.

The project would include 120 apartments on the priory site at Laurel Grove Avenue and Hanken Drive.

The matter first was before the board last year but encountered strong opposition. The homeowners later took the issue to court after the supervisors authorized construction. Their appeal was upheld by the court based on a loophole in the county code.

The loophole was closed earlier this year by the board and the proposal was resubmitted by the Catholic Social Services Agency, sponsor of the project.

When it went before the county planning commission last month, residents again protested the development as a blight on their neighborhood. They suggested it be located elsewhere. The commission approved it, however, on a 5-1 vote.

The Marin County board of supervisors agenda also includes:

WORKSHOP — A "workshop session" with the City-County Planning Council of Marin to discuss progress on the proposed countywide general plan and the future of the planning council. The meeting is scheduled for 8 a.m. in Room 332 of the Administration Building.

EMPLOYMENT — Consideration of a report from the California Fair Employment Practices Commission critical of the county's hiring practices.

CREEK — A report from the Army Corps of Engineers that continuation of the Corte Madera Creek Project to Lagunitas Bridge — but not beyond — in Ross would not alleviate downstream flooding. The project has been stopped by the town of Ross.

CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS — A review of the County's long-range capital improvement program. The program, divided into road and general improvements, totals $37.5 million for the next six years.

Still another distinguished columnist in the I-J

Melvin Maddocks

Columnist-at-large, Christian Science Monitor News Service

Melvin Maddocks doesn't fit into a neat category. The Monitor knew him first as a copyboy who wrote editorials, then as a literature loving sportswriter.

Topic hopping began early in life. He studied six years of Latin and four years of Greek, then went on to major in American history and literature at Harvard.

After sports, he did his turn as television columnist, part-time music reviewer, and theater and film critic both in Boston and New York. He served for seven years as the Monitor's book editor.

Today all these roles play their parts within his role as columnist-at-large for whom variety is practically the motif. Nor will his writing fit a category. Read it closely and what looked like a sharp dagger turns out to be no more than a feather — a carefully directed feather. There is a philosophy under the wit.

What distinguishes Maddocks as a columnist? An awareness of the latest trends and fads. A feeling for what the next wave will be. But also a distrust of too sudden enthusiasms. He wants to alert us before we swallow the fly in the ointment.

Mr. Maddocks' column is supplied exclusively to the Independent-Journal by The Christian Science News Service.

HUGE FALLEN TREE CLOSES STREET

A giant oak tree blocks Center Boulevard in San Anselmo after falling about 4:30 p.m. Saturday. Traffic was blocked for several hours while city and utility company crews worked to remove the tree, which formerly stood at 84 Madrone Avenue. No one could explain why the tree collapsed during the sunny spring weather.

MUSIC REVIEW

Extraordinary Evening At Church In Tiburon

Something extraordinary happened last night at the Community Congregational Church in Tiburon — when the Fine Arts Guild, a group of highly proficient amateur and professional singers under the tutelage of Donald Steinberg, performed highlights from Mozart's "Cosi fan Tutte," an assortment of opera arias, and ensembles before a near capacity audience of about 100 persons.

Rather than sing hit or miss excerpts from Cosi, this group performed a highly concise, beautifully edited and dramatically unified version of the opera. Lee Woodriff, the stage director, supplied spicy narrative to keep the audience abreast of the plot. The result was that the essence of the whole opera came through both musically and dramatically.

Mezzo-soprano Natasha Kimmel of Tiburon sang the role of Dorabella. Miss Kimmel has a beautiful voice that is as strong in the low registers as it is in the high — a prerequisite for the role of Dorabella. She also sang an aria from Rossini's "The Barber of Seville." This aria, with its wide angular leaps, was almost a parody on the previous Mozart. Miss Kimmell, delighted by these extremes, utilized her considerable range to its utmost. A most striking performance.

Fiordiligi was sung by Georgia Prugh. Here again is an exceptional vocal talent. She sang with a crystal-clear voice and a great deal of musical insight.

Bass-Baritone Nicholas Massenkoff performed the role of the conniving Don Alfonso. Massenkoff has a rich voice and substantial power to back it up. While his Don Alfonso was witty and convincing, it was during his aria from "Boris Godunov" that the dramatic virility of his talent came across in its fullest.

The roles of Ferrando and Guglielmo were sung by tenor William Coburn and baritone Michael McGinley. Though not a particularly strong voice, Coburn's voice is beautiful and he knows how to get the most from it. His rendition of Lenski's aria from "Eugene Onegin" was especially fine.

La Julia Hill performed that crazy role of the maid, Despina, in the opera. She also sang the coloratura masterpiece from Verdi's Rigoletto, "Caro "Caro Nome," with a virtuosic splendor and musical sensitivity that was mind-blowing.

The responsibility for bringing this fine group of singers to Marin County lies with Frank Evans, the pastor of Community Congregational Church in Tiburon. It was an exquisite performance from the beginning to the end and I hope we can have the pleasure again in the near future. Their next performance will be April 28 in the East Bay. — R.M.N.

Horlen Faces Cal; A's Lose

OAKLAND (UPI) — This could be a big day in Joe Horlen's baseball career.

Remember Jorlen?

He was released by the Chicago White Sox two days after the baseball players started their now famous strike.

Horlen thought he was doing all right in spring training with the White Sox and doesn't care to talk about it. Right now, he's trying to hook on with the Oakland A's.

Today is an off day in the A's schedule, but not really. While the regulars will be engaged in a morning workout at the Oakland Coliseum, the rest of the squad will be in Berkeley playing an exhibition game with the University of California. Horlen, whose 11-year major league career record stands at 113-113, will start against the collegians and will be watched closely by A's manager Dick Williams and pitching coach Bill Posedel. Williams says he has no set schedule in mind for Horlen and would also like to pitch Diego Segui and Jim Ronald against Cal.

Horlen feels he has to show something to justify winning a job with the A's, who currently are carrying only nine pitchers and he's a bit apprehensive.

"I'm always nervous the day before I pitch a game," said the 34-year-old veteran. "That's just my makeup."

Williams, who saw his A's drop a 3-2 decision to the Minnesota Twins Sunday despite a fine eight inning performance by Jim Hunter, said, "Sure this game will count a lot," meaning the one with California.

"But our whole evaluation on Horlen won't be based on this game alone," he added. "We may look a little more."

Williams wouldn't say it in so many words but Horlen's chances of winning a job with the A's depend a lot on Vida Blue. Blue is still holding out and officially is on the restricted list. That's why the A's are.

TIP ON TAP — Milwaukee Buck center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (33) tapped the basketball away from Los Angeles Laker Wilt Chamberlain (13) in the first half of the National Basketball Association Playoff Series' fourth game in Milwaukee yesterday. Laker Jim McMillian watched Abdul-Jabbar gain control. The Bucks evened the series at two games apiece by downing the Lakers, 114-88.

Kingman Unleashes Power In Giant Win

Houston Succumbs To 'Cycle'

HOUSTON (UPI) — Young Dave Kingman, converted into a third baseman by the San Francisco Giants during the winter, opened the season too worried about his fielding to think about hitting.

"I was mainly concerned with my fielding yesterday (Saturday)," the 23-year-old Kingman said. "I got over my first game jitters after I got my first ball. Today I was a little more at ease hitting."

Kingman was so relaxed at the plate that he hit for the cycle, going 4-for-5, driving in six runs and scoring three himself to power the Giants to a 10-6 victory over the Houston Astros. It gave the Giants a quick 2-0 record in the National League West and left Houston 0-2.

"(Bobby) Bonds was on base ahead of me every time," Kingman said. "I was getting good pitches to hit."

In the second inning, after Bonds doubled, Kingman drove him in with a single and eventually scored on a single by winning pitcher Sam McDowell. The former Cleveland southpaw was making his first National League start and picked up the victory although he gave up six hits and six runs in six innings.

Bonds' second double and Kingman's triple ignited a four-run rally in the fourth inning and Kingman doubled in the fifth to score Bonds, who had singled and stole second, to give the Giants a 7-3 lead.

Houston cut the margin to 7-6 on Tommy Helms' three-run homer in the sixth. But Kingman came back with a three-run blast in the seventh to give the Giants their winning margin. After the home run, shortstop Chris Speier mentioned to Kingman that he had hit for the cycle.

"I didn't know what it (cycle) meant," Kingman said. "I'd never done it and I'd never even heard of it."

Kingman, a graduate of Southern California, has played only 1 1-2 seasons of pro ball. He has been a pitcher, outfielder and first baseman, but had never played third until Saturday night's seasons opener.

Manager Charlie Fox decided during the winter to put the 6-foot-6 Kingman at third because of his strong arm and quick reflexes.

"With a bat like that, you had to get it in there somewhere," Fox said. "He doesn't do too bad at third either. I don't know of any man that big playing third before but what difference does size make as long as he does the job?

"He's got good speed," Fox said. "He moved well at first (where the Giants have Willie McCovey) and he's got a good arm. He used to be a pitcher."

PHILS FALL

Hooten Hurls No-Hitter, 4-0

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Maybe baseball doesn't need Vida Blue after all. The game may have found a replacement in 22-year-old Burt Hooton of the Chicago Cubs.

Hooton, a graduate of the University of Texas, has started only three games in the major leagues but already is earning a tag as "unhittable."

The blond, curly-haired youngster from Corpus Christi, Tex., caused a sensation last September when he tossed a three-hitter and a two-hitter in two victories over the New York Mets. In the first of those games he set a club record by striking out 15 batters.

Just to prove that last year's showing was no fluke, Hooton went out Sunday and pitched the first no-hitter by a National League rookie in 60 years by blanking the Philadelphia Phillies, 4-0.

Hooton, the Cubs' No. 1 choice in the secondary phase of the 1971 draft, has achieved his impressive record through use of a trick pitch which he calls a "knuckle curveball." He deveoped the pitch as a youngster in the Pony League in Corpus Christi and it acts much the same way a Sandy Koufax curve used to behave.

"I grab the ball with my first two fingers and let it slide off the tips, giving a fast ball motion by breaking my wrist," says Hooton.

Cubs' catcher Randy Hundley said he called for numerous knuckle curves Sunday "because of the way the wind was blowing and because Philadelphia has so many good fast ball hitters." Hundley said that Hooton's pitch can reach the plate shoulder high, then suddenly dip to the ground in a split second in much the same manner as a Koufax curve used to take off.

The Phillies hit only two balls solidly off Hooton. Denny Doyle hit a line drive in the third inning which shortstop Don Kessinger grabbed with a lunge to his left and Greg Luzinski hit a fly ball deep to centerfield in the seventh inning which Rick Monday caught at the 368-foot mark.

Hooton's no-hitter was the first by a NL rookie since Charles M. "Jeff" Tesreau of the New York Giants tossed one against the Phillies on Sept. 6, 1912. It was the 12th no-hitter pitched by a Cub with the last one turned in by Ken Holtzman, now of the Oakland Athletics, last season.

In other NL games, Pittsburgh blanked New York, 2-0; Montreal edged St. Louis, 3-2; Cincinnati blasted Los Angeles, 10-1; San Francisco downed Houston, 10-6 and Atlanta defeated San Diego, 5-1 in the first game of a doubleheader then lost the nightcap, 3-0.

Steve Blass, a World Series hero last October, allowed only two hits over the first seven innings and Met nemesis Willie Stargell drove in two runs with a pair of singles as the Pirates downed the Mets. Blass retired 14 straight batters from the second through the sixth but needed relief help from Bob Miller to nail down the victory.

The Expos pushed across two runs on only one hit in the ninth inning to score their second straight victory over the Cardinals. A walk, a double by Clyde Mashore, an infield out and an error by relief pitcher Moe Drabowsky enabled the Expos to score twice in the ninth.

Joe Morgan's bases-loaded triple keyed a six-run eighth inning as the Reds buried the Dodgers. Gary Nolan allowed only two hits in seven innings of work to record the victory while Al Downing, a 20-game winner last year, took the loss. Tony Perez had a homer for Cincinnati.

Ralph Garr collected four hits in the opener to support the combined five-hit pitching of Ron Reed and Cecil Upshaw as the Braves defeated the Padres. San Diego, however, took the nightcap behind the six-hit pitching of rookie Bill Greif.

Richest Gal Golf Win For Miss Blalock

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI)—The doctor wasn't sure whether she could play, but wearing a back brace Jane Blalock birdied three of the final nine holes Sunday to collect the richest purse in the history of women's golf by winning the $110,000 Dinah Shore-Colgate Winner's Circle golf championship.

Miss Blalock had a 54-hole score of 213, three under par for the $20,000 first place prize money.

"I didn't know how long the back would hold up," said the smiling Miss Blalock. "The doctor wasn't sure I could play but said if I could get through the first day, I'd probably make it through the week. I have to wear a brace but luckily it doesn't affect my swing."

Tied for second, three strokes behind at 216, even par, were Judy Ranklin, who had led for the first two days, and Carol Mann. Miss Rankin had opening rounds of 69 and 70 but ran into putting problems on the rolling Mission Hills Desert Course when she had four three-putt greens and finished with 72.

Miss Mann got her second place tie on a 16-foot birdie putt on the par five, 570-yard 18th. Each earned $11,500.

Miss Mann gave an unexpected gift of $1,000 to the Desert Hospital and the Palm Springs United Way Fund, which share in the proceeds of the LPGA tournament. "It's worth it," she said.

Joan Prentice was fourth and won $6,500 with a total of 217, one over. In a fifth-place tie were Sandra Haynie and Mickey Wright, each at 218 for $4,450 each.

Gerda Boykin was the only one of the 40 qualified golfers who was able to break par Sunday on the 6,352-yard course. Her 71, however, still left her far down in the pack.

Milwaukee '5' Wallops Lakers

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Suddenly, Jerry West may be having doubts about ending his National Basketball Association career on a championship note.

West, who has been to the finals so many times that he knows what it feels to be caught in a revolving door, still is undecided about continuing in the pros.

Milwaukee may be helping his decision by showing West that going on is futile. The Bucks beat the Los Angeles Lakers, 114-88, Sunday to tie the Western Conference finals at two-games apiece.

The New York Knicks took a 2-0 lead in their Eastern Conference best-of-seven final by nipping the Boston Celtics, 106-105.

Los Angeles was never in the game after the opening tap-off. Milwaukee ran up 11 straight points and stretched the lead to 25-10 with four minutes remaining in the first period.

From the stage, it was icing on Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 25th birthday cake. Kareem scored 31 points and the Lakers wished it were 31 candles for then it would mean Abdul-Jabbar was getting old.

West countered with 24 points for Los Angeles and Jim McMillian added 18. Gail Goodrich, West's high scoring backcourt partner, was way below par in this encounter with 12 points.

The Bucks' 75-43 control of the boards spelled the difference. Abdul-Jabbar had 18 rebounds. Curtis Perry collected 19 and Bob Dandridge nailed 14. Wilt Chamberlain and Happy Hairston grabbed 11 apiece for Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, posting the best won-lost record in the league during the regular season,

WINNER ON COURSE

Hill Still Loses In 'Confidence Game'

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI)—Dave Hill has no more confidence in his golf game now than he did before he won the Monsanto Open.

"Sure, it's always nice to win," the outspoken Hill said after beating charging young Jerry Heard by a single stroke in the Monsanto.

"But, I don't feel good about the way I played. I'd rather play well so that I could feel I'd have a chance to go on and win elsewhere."

In addition to the $30,000 prize for his first victory in two years, Hill, 34, of Jackson, Mich., also won a last-minute berth in this week's Tournament of Champions at La Costa.

"I don't feel that the erratic way I played here helped me at all to get ready for the Tournament of Champions," Hill said. "None whatsoever."

Despite complaining all week that he was playing terrible, Hill shot 64-68-68 in the first three rounds to post the lowest 54-hole total (200) so far this year on the pro golf tour and although he almost let a five-stroke lead get away Sunday, his even par 71 and 13-under-par 271 were nothing to be ashamed of.

Heard, who started the final round seven strokes back but shot a 6-under-par 65, not only caught Hill but was actually two strokes ahead with three holes to play.

But Hill, who had two double bogeys and two bogeys in a scrambling round, made two of his six birdies on those last three holes and Heard closed with a bogey.

Heard was still four strokes behind midway through the final round but then ran off four straight birdies with putts of 3, 20, 25 and 30 feet to take the lead for the first time in the tournament.

When the final round began, Hill was five strokes ahead of Chris Blocker, six ahead of Bob E. Smith and seven ahead of Heard and Ray Floyd. Blocker wound up in third place with a 69-274 but Bob Goalby came from far back with a 65 of his own to grab fourth place at 275 while Floyd wound up at 69-276.

Smith skied to a 73 Sunday to finish in a four-way tie for sixth place with Lee Elder (70), 1969 Monsanto champ Jim Colber (71) and Dan Sikes (71) at 279.

The $30,000 Hill won gives him $52,998 for the year and vaulted him into 10th place on the money list. Heard, with his $17,100 consolation prize rose to fourth place at $73,656.

George Archer, the No. 2 money winner on this year's tour, had a 69-282 that was worth $2,175 and sent him over the $100,000 mark by $1,700.

This year's leading money winner Jack Nicklaus ($135,473) bypassed the Monsanto Open as did such other big names as Arnold Palmer, Gary Player and Billy Casper. Lee Trevino, the reigning U. S. and British Open champ, showed up but withdrew after Thursday's opening round, complaining he was suffering from "extreme exhaustion" after the pressure of the previous week's Masters.

Brooks A Hit With Oriole Boo Birds

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Many years ago in an era when little kids didn't know baseball players were businessmen a sports writer was shocked to hear Babe Ruth booed during an exhibition game in Atlanta, Ga.

"Tear up the Constitution, burn down Independence Hall," the sports writer wrote. "They booed Babe Ruth today."

A lot of salaries have risen and a lot of pension money has been paid since then but even today in the wake of baseball's first strike it must have been surprising for Brooks Robinson, a virtual folk hero, to hear boos in Baltimore's Memorial Stadium.

Robinson, probably the most popular player in the history of the Baltimore club, heard those boos Sunday when he batted in the first inning of a 3-1 victory over the New York Yankees. Robinson's "sin" was that he is a player representative for the Orioles and, as such, helped to bring about a strike which the fans either disapproved of or didn't understand.

Robinson answered the boos when he singled home a run in the first inning and he singled home another in the fifth. Pat Dobson, 20-8, last season, went 6 1-3 innings for the victory with Doyle Alexander, acquired in the Frank Robinson deal with Los Angeles, pitching the last 2-3 inning of a game halted with the Orioles batting in the seventh.

The Kansas City Royals defeated the Chicago White Sox, 4-3 and 2-1, the Minnesota Twins beat the Oakland Athletics, 3-2, and the Texas Rangers downed the California Angels, 5-1, in other American League games. Milwaukee at Cleveland and Boston at Detroit were rained out.

Novato Defeats Marin Catholic

Good things come to he who waits.

Novato High School's baseball team tested this adage Saturday night and found it valid, as the Hornets waited out Marin Catholic pitching for five consecutive walks in the sixth inning, scored two runs, and won, 4-2.

The victory at Albert Park in San Rafael lifted Novato into a second-place tie in the Marin County Athletic League. The Hornets are 2-1, one game behind Redwood at 3-0. Defending champion Marin Catholic dropped to seventh place at 1-3.

Pitcher Mike Lamb went the distance for Novato, and was in control except for the fourth inning, when Marin Catholic scored twice to go ahead, 2-1. Vince Bormolini singled, Steve Sherry walked and Paul Riccardi singled to load the bases. Then Mickey Hurley and Scott Cozza drew run-scoring walks.

Novato retaliated in the sixth as Stan Conte, Jeff Pond, Jim Askim, Gary Lash and Scott Harrington drew bases on balls.

Marin Catholic coach Gary Hughes and Novato coach Tom Barrie agreed the umpires were "somewhat stingy" in calling strikes, in Barrie's words. "They were consistent, however," said Barrie. "It was the same for both sides. I'm not knocking the umps."

Make-Up Tilts Set In Marin

Chico '9' Sweeps Sonoma

Sonoma State College came close in the opener, but fell apart completely in the nightcap as it lost both ends of a far western conference baseball doubleheader to Chico State, 2-1 and 14-3, in Rohnert Park Saturday.

In the first game, freshman hurler Len Hoffman from Novato went the distance, scattering eight Chico hits. The lone Cossack run was produced in the second inning on successive singles by Dale Lyster, Rick Jones and Rich Garretson. Garretson, a sophomore from Petaluma, and Jones, a sophomore from Rohnert Park, both batted two for three.

The nightcap was a different story as the Wildcats pounded Cossack pitchers Mike Bell and John Anderson for thirteen hits, among them three doubles and a triple. Five of those hits came in the eighth inning when Chico exploded for seven runs to give it an 11 run lead.

Petaluma Wins One, Loses One

Petaluma High School's baseball team showed this weekend that it takes more than good pitching to win a pair of North Bay League games.

On Friday night, Sam Solis pitched a two-hit, 1-0 victory over previously unbeaten Ukiah.

On Saturday, his Petaluma pitching colleague Dan Cader surrendered only six singles, but Santa Rosa tallied four times in the first inning to beat the Trojans, 4-3, at Petaluma's Mc Near Park.

Cader was touched for half of Santa Rosa's hits in the first, as the Panthers converted three singles, two walks and an error into their four runs. After the first Cader settled down, striking out five and walcg one the rest of the game.

Petaluma scored two of its runs in the fourth inning on a Cader single, a walk and a two-run single by Larry Cristani. Cader led the Trojans at the plate with two hits.

Vernon Paris was runner-up with 93-24—69.

Other winners were Jerry Fingerlos, low gross, 88; Noah Berkey, fewest putts, 32; Jerry Schendel, closest to hole, 7 feet, 7 inches, and Kep Brown, longest drive, 260 yards.

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER

Don't put all the weight of the ball on your right hand too soon. If you do, you're liable to shorten your push-away and start your backswing too soon. Let the left hand carry most of the burden as you walk forward, dropping away only when necessary.

ABA PLAYOFFS

Utah Vs. Indiana Tonight

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The defending champion Utah Stars can go two-up on Indiana when they host the Pacers at Salt Lake City tonight in the second game of their Western Division final playoff in the American Basketball Association.

Utah jumped off to the lead in their best-of-seven series by overcoming Indiana, 108-100, in a nationally televised contest Saturday afternoon.

The Eastern Division final between Virginia and New York, meanwhile, will be delayed nine days with the Squires holding a 2-0 advantage. Because of an ice show in the Nets' home court at the Nassau Coliseum, preventing New York from having a home date at night for another week, the third game is being held off until Monday, April 24.

The fourth game also will be played in New York on Wednesday, April 26, with the series shifting back to Norfolk for the fifth game, if necessary, on Saturday afternoon, April 29. This game is listed for national television by CBS.

The Squires gained their 2-0 lead by beating New York, 115-106, Saturday night and the Nets were further hampered by the loss of rookie John Roche, who sprained his left ankle in the first quarter.

Zelmo Beaty, who spent much of last week on crutches with an attack of arthritis, nevertheless proved a hero for Utah in Saturday's opener as he scored 23 points and grabbed 15 rebounds in 37 minutes.

Sharman Pushes Self, Players

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bill Sharman, the Los Angeles Lakers' coach, listens to some of the descriptions others have of him and laughs.

Most people say he's a tough coach.

Some of those who have played for him call him a fanatic about basketball.

And Rick Barry, who also played under him, begins by describing Sharman as "a fine person and a straight person, but then adds "he is the narrowest individual I've ever known."

When Rick Barry says that about Bill Sharman he's talking strictly in a basketball sense.

Right now, the Lakers' coach, the intense, dark-haired former Boston Celtics' star who still is regarded by many as the foremost free throw shooter in perhaps the entire history of basketball, isn't concerning himself as much with the way people are describing him as he is with the way his ball club is trying to go about knocking off the Milwaukee Bucks as NBA champs.

Sharman pushes himself no less than he does his players. Actually he has received some advice from his doctor about how to conduct himself in these playoffs but he finds it hard, if not downright impossible, to heed it.

The Lakers' coach, who doesn't have an overly strong set of vocal cords to begin with, strained them by abusing them the last few weeks of the regular season.

As a result, Sharman's vocal muscles became tense and tight and all the subsequent yelling he did on the bench didn't do them any good at all.

"The doctor told him not to yell," says his wife, Dorothy. "But he forgets."

It isn't that Sharman forgets so much as it is that he can't always control himself once the ball game begins.

Jerry West says he has never played for any coach who is so involved in the game or who motivates his players more than Sharman does. The Lakers' coach simply doesn't believe in leaving anything to chance.

Sharman is forever writing himself notes.

1. Call Mike about car insurance.

2. Go to bank.

One thing he doesn't have to write himself a note about are these playoffs. Down through the years, the Lakers have always managed to find a way to lose the big one —that last big ball game. This time Sharman has dedicated himself to seeing it doesn't happen again.

O'Sheas Push Blues By Minnesota

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

It was simply a case of too many O'Sheas for the Minnesota North Stars Sunday.

Kevin O'Shea took a pass from brother Danny and fired it past Minnesota goalie Cesare Maniago at 10:07 of sudden death overtime to give St. Louis a 2-1 victory and move the Blues into the Stanley Cup semifinals. The victory gave the Blues a 4-3 edge in games in the best-of-seven series and qualified them to meet the Boston Bruins, who eliminated Toronto last week, in the semifinals.

"I didn't know whether it was in or not," said Kvin, who fired the pass from his brother from the outer edge of the faceoff circle. "The goal judge didn't put the light on. Then I saw Danny with his stick in the air."

St. Louis took a 1-0 lead in the first period on Gary Sabourin's goal but Charlie Burns tied the score after only 15 seconds of the third period also on an assist from Danny O'Shea.

Maniago said the winning goal was a double deflection. "It hit the right pipe, then came off the handle of my stick and went in," said the veteran goaltender.

Jacques Caron, a 31-year-old rookie who performed brilliantly in the nets for the Blues, credited his defense for "backchecking real well out there. Now we've got a few days rest. We'll give the Bruins our best shot."

"I won't start worrying about Boston until Monday," said Al Arbour, the St. Louis coach. "It was a very tiring series for us but we'll be in there against the Bruins."

In the only other game Sunday, the New York Rangers held on to defeat the Chicago Black Hawks 3-2 in the opening game of their semifinal series.

Brad Park and Walter Tkaczuk scored goals within 35 seconds of the second period and goalie Ed Giacomin squelched a third-period rally by the Hawks to pace the New York victory.

Ted Irvine gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead in the first period and Park collected his goal at 16:07 of the second period. Tkaczuk then blasted in a rebound of Gene Carr's shot at 16:42 to make it 3-0.

The Black Hawks, outplayed for most of the game, came alive in the third period when Stan Mikita's shot deflected off Ranger Bruce MacGregor past Giacomin at 12:30. Chris Bordeleau deflected Doug Jarrett's long drive past Giacomin little more than two minutes later and the Black Hawks pelted the Rangers' goalie to no avail in the last five minutes.

The New York-Chicago series resumes Tuesday night in Chicago.

carrying only nine pitchers instead of the customary 10. The hope, of course, is that Blue will sign soon. But no progress is being made along those lines even though owner Charlie Finley is in town, presumably to make another stab at corraling Blue.

The A's managed six hits off Dick Woodson, Ray Corbin, Dave Laroche and Wayne Granger in Sunday's loss to the Twins and they weren't nearly enough. Minnesota managed only four hits off Hunter in eight innings and none off Darold Knowles in one, but one of the hits was Bobby Darwin's second homer in as many games.

The homer came after a single by Charlie Manuel and tied the score at 2-2 in the fifth. It stayed that way until the eighth when Hunter hit Cesar Tovar with a pitch and Rod Carew scored him with a double for what proved to be the winning run.

LAKERS

briefly showed its talent by closing to 56-45 at halftime and playing Milwaukee on equal terms in the third period. But the Bucks ran off a 3-1 surge starting off the fourth quarter to dash Laker hopes of a comeback.

Walt Frazier, sitting out half the game because of four personal fouls, returned early in the fourth quarter with a nine-point siege that helped New York edge the Celtics.

Boston played better defense than in the opener when New York won by 22 points and even had a chance to win in the final 10 seconds when Frazier missed a foul shot and New York led 106-105. Celtic scoring ace John Havlicek brought the ball downcourt but was forced to take a hurried shot with three seconds left. The ball hit the rim and bounded away.

Havlicek led all scorers with 29 points, while Dave DeBusschcere paced New York with 24 points and collected 17 rebounds.

"I look for a tough five or six-game series," DeBusschere said later. "I just hope it doesn't go seven."

DeBusschere's 15 footer with 24 seconds remaining in the gave gave New York a 106-103 lead and provided the cushion after Havlicek's driving layup made it 106-105.

The Celtics can't afford to lose the third game in Boston Wednesday night, either. Then they would be left with having to win the remaining four games for the title.

Women Enter Field In Boston Marathon

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

HOPKINTON, Mass. — Women were official entries today for the first time as the Boston Athletic Association held its 76th annual Boston Marathon, and one familiar female — mother nature — was making her presence felt.

Observers said the chilly weather might help the field of 1,200 entries, but if the drizzly weather which struck late yesterday and continued through the night did not clear, it would ruin any chance for a record in the 26-mile, 385-yard event that ends at the Prudential center in Boston's Back Bay section. The race was to start at 9 a.m. (PST).

Baseball

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. — Lou Perini, the owner who broke professional baseball tradition by moving the Braves from Boston to Milwaukee, died yesterday at the age of 68.

Auto Racing

DARLINGTON, S.C. — David Pearson drove the last lap of the Rebel 400 with his helmet off and his shoulder strap unbuckled, taking the victory under a caution flag.

Football

HOUSTON — A pair of University of Houston Freshman football players, including the son of University of Oklahoma coach Chuck Fairbanks, were recovering from gunshot wounds today and expected to miss practice the rest of the week. Chuck Fairbanks Jr., a quarterback, and Robert Giblin, a cornerback who just made the first team last week, were robbed and shot by two hitchhikers yesterday.

Track and Field

LOS ANGELES — Sweden's Djell Isaksson pole-vaulted 18 feet, two inches Saturday at UCLA's Meet of Champions to set a world record — a week after he had gone 18-1 in the Texas Relays to better the previous world mark of 18 set by Chris Papanicolaou of Greece.

Bowling

Kansas City, Mo. — Diane McMullen, a 20-year-old junior from Colorado State University, captured the 13th National Intercollegiate Bowling championship last night at the Women's International Bowling Congress.

QUEBEC CITY — Seventh-seeded Marty Riessen scored a major upset yesterday, defeating top-seeded Rod Laver, 7-5, 6-2, 7-5, in the final round of the Rothman's International Tennis Championships.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Second-seeded Nancy Richey Gunter, the leading money winner so far this year on the women's pro tennis circuit, defeated young Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, 6-3, 6-4, yesterday in the finals of the St. Petersburg Masters-Virginia Slims tennis tournament.

Buick Pro-Am Golf Tourney Called Off

CASPER, Wyo. (UPI)—Interference and threats from the Colorado section of the Professional Golfers Association has forced the calling off of the K-w Buick Pro-Am Golf Tournament for 1972 and perhaps forever, the tournament chairman announced Sunday.

Fred Burgi, general manager of Radio Station KPOW in Casper, said the Colorado PGA section had insisted on cutting the amateur purse so the Colorado section "could skim a 5 per cent royalty from the entry fees."

Burgi said the K-2 management rejected this as it penalized the amateur players whose entry fees enrich the professional purse.

The tournament chairman said the demands were made by PGA section President Dow Finsterwald, golf pro at the Broadmoor Club in Colorado Springs.

WORMS ARE TRICKY — Boy Scout Frank Militelle determinedly puts a nightcrawler onto a hook, hoping to lure one of Lake Shasta's trout. Despite the strenuous efforts of the 21 boys and four adults, only two fish were caught by one angler, according to I-J photographer Bob Hax, who served as one of the adult leaders for the outing.

Scouts Sail, Play, Eat

GALLEY TIME — Troop 42 Scouts (from left) Eric Helms, Derrel Van Winkle and Rich Jackson prepare French toast and canned ham for Saturday morning's breakfast in one of the four houseboats.

CHESS GAME — Mark Lewton (left) ponders how to use a bishop against the superior forces remaining to Gary Hax, while Mike Sorenson kibitzes. Their houseboat was tied up at shore while some of the boys and adults went water skiing and explored the lake as far as Shasta Dam.

BREAKFAST ABOARD — Steve Weir, Rick Jackson, David Frey, Frank Militello and Darrel Van Winkle pitch into the breakfast prepared by young Van Winkle and others (see center photo). Van Winkle makes a long arm for the ham. The houseboats were fitted out much like vacation trailers, with convenient galleys and living quarters.

AFTER-SKI SPLASH — Asst. Scoutmaster Jackson takes a header into the lake at the end of a run behind the ski boat. The adults, who also included William Weir, James Tinto, Hax and Arthur Olsen, found the water cold. The Scouts insisted it was warm.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Anticipate Continued Green Giant Growth

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I purchased Green Giant stock at prices higher than those prevailing now. Should I continue to be patient or sell to buy another stock? — L.P.

A. Significant recovery strides were posted by NYSE-listed Green Giant in its fiscal 1971 third quarter. Profits were reported at 53 cents a share, up 33 per cent, on a 14 per cent sales gain. This followed two periods of lower earnings when results were penalized largely by the wage-price freeze and higher raw material and labor costs.

Continued good growth is anticipated for Green Giant aided by the expected approval of price hikes in some of the company's canned goods lines and by Green Giant's recent diversification moves. Existing commitments should not be disturbed in view of the issue's attractive turnaround prospects.

Q. Should I hold my 112 shares of Consolidated Edison (NYSE)? I have been told I should sell and put the money in the bank or reinvest. — E.W.

A. Consolidated Edison's primary appeal is its heretofore tax-free, liberal dividend — currently near 7 per cent. Hence, for income purposes, Consolidated is an attractive investment. As a growth stock, however, Consolidated Edison has shortcomings. Operating in a relatively mature service area, the firm has a below-average growth potential, with a further deterrent being ininsufficient rate increases. Consolidated recently was granted an electric rate hike of $94.6 million in annual revenues. However, this represented less than two-thirds of the company's original request; and, cites Consolidated Edison, does not adequately take into account severe upward pressures on costs. Also aggravating the situation is the firm's Indian Point #2 nuclear power plant which is under attack not only by environmentalists but more recently from a subcontractor questioning the safety of the generator station. The latter could delay the summer opening of Indian Point — the peak load period for the utility.

While near-term market activity may be sluggish, Consolidated offers income appeal and may be held for that purpose.

Texstar Corp. Picks Directors

DALLAS, Tex. (BW) — The shareholders of the Texstar Corp. at their recent annual meeting re-elected nine directors.

Shareholders also approved a qualified stock option plan for officers and key employes of the company and its subsidiaries.

In response to an inquiry at the meeting, President George Bremser Jr. estimated that the net sales and operating revenues for the six month period ended March 31 would be up about 20 per cent over the comparable period for the previous fiscal year.

He also estimated income from operations before extraordinary items for the first six months at roughly $900,000 which would be 28 cents per share (undiluted), as compared to $554,000, or 20 cents per share, on fewer outstanding shares for the same period in fiscal 1971.

Russians Ogle American Exhibit

By CHARLOTTE SAIKOWSKI

MOSCOW — The youthful American with long sideburns and moustache was surrounded by a throng of Russians like some matinee idol.

Olya, it's he," an auburn-haired girl whispered in excited tones, nudging a friend. "It's Nikita Barsky. I recognized him by his voice." The girls giggled and pressed closer into the crowd.

The scene, at the American research and development exhibit at Sokolniki Park, was vivid proof that Russians listen to the Voice of America, for Nikita Barsky is a broadcaster for VOA and one of 22 American guides working at the fair. Far from evidencing any hostility, crowds burst into knowing smiles when they learned who he is.

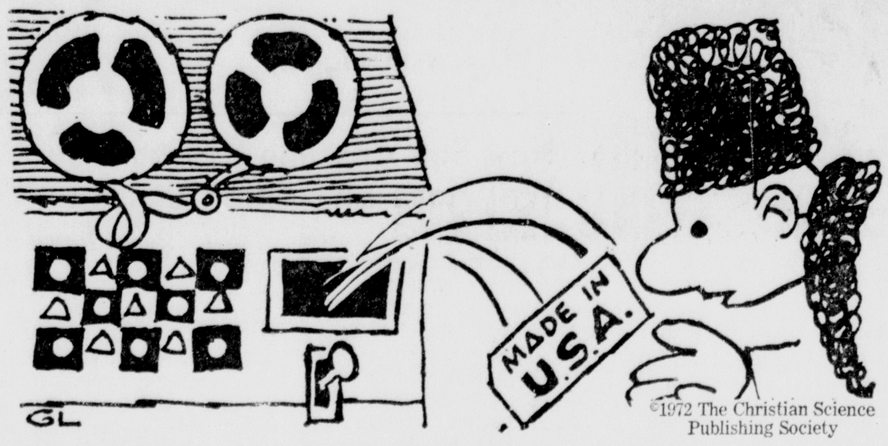
There is enthusiasm generally for the American show, which is the 12th to be held in the Soviet Union, and an anniversary of sorts. It was at the first U.S. exhibit in 1959 that then Vice-President Richard M. Nixon and Soviet leader Nikita S. Khrushchev made world headlines with their "kitchen debate."

Soon Nixon comes to Moscow again, this time as President. And while it is unlikely there will be a kitchen debate, Americans here wonder if the "debater" might not fly to Vologograd, where the exhibit will be running during his Soviet visit. In any case, a visit to Sokolniki Park provides some insights into how informed Soviet citizens have or have not become in the intervening 13 years.

True, perhaps 80 per cent of the thousands of questions fired at the Russian-speaking guides will concern the U.S. standard of living. At the General Electric stand, within a few short minutes I heard Russians ask, "How does an unemployed worker live?" "Is he allowed to keep his car?" "How long do benefits last?" "What does a teacher earn?" "What do you pay for a higher education?"

"How much does a chicken cost?" asked a peasant-faced man.

But the remaining 20 per cent disclose a higher level of sophistication and a greater awareness of the world outside than in 1959, a fact probably attributable to the Khrushchev thaw, repeated exhibits, the growing number of tourists, and foreign broadcasts.



©1972 The Christian Science Publishing Society

"There are still pockets of ignorance," says exhibit director John Thomas, "but in 1959 we started from scratch. Today the Russians are asking fewer ABCs and more XYZs."

It is standard, for instance, to hear: "Why is Angela Davis being persecuted?"

But one knowledgeable Russian asked, "We understand that Angela Davis belongs to the American Communist Party, which adheres to the Soviet line. Yet she is a follower of Marcuse and he does not accept the Soviet position. How do you explain that?"

Levels of sophistication vary from city to city, of course. In Tbilisi, the Georgian capital where the exhibit opened in January, the questions tended to be simpler and focused on the gadgetry.

"The Georgians seldom asked about the United States," says Carolyn Smith, a guide from Washington, D.C. "Mostly they wanted to know about the products and what they cost. And tell them about the Lincoln Continental and they were ready to give you rubles for it!"

Not surprisingly, the young Americans are getting many questions about the President's visit to Peking, which clearly overshadows his upcoming trip here. There is no hiding Russians' disappointment that the President did not touch down in Moscow first, and their suspicion that deals were struck in Peking.

Aside from the popular guides, Muscovites are enjoying such attractions as the Univac 9300 computer, laser devices, consumer appliances, and other items in the exhibit. The racy Javelin, one of three cars on display, has been stripped of its windshield wipers and chrome fittings — by "zealous souvenir hunters," as exhibit officials put it.

Except for a few posters about town, the Soviet government has given little publicity to the exhibit.

Muscovites hear by word of mouth, however. Attendance is strong, and the questions keep pouring forth.

"How did you learn Russian?" a stout, elderly gentleman asked Nikita Barsky.

"A little in the kitchen, a little at the university," he replied. "You see, my grandparents were from Kiev . . . "

A smile crept over the faces of the listeners.
